GREAT COVERAGE

What separates SPORTS REVIEW WRESTLING from the competition is excellent articles like "The Wrestlers Meet the Press" (SPORTS REVIEW WRESTLING/January 1976). Because of the excellent coverage, I now know what it's like to go to a press conference.

Meeting the stars through this article is really what wrestling reporting is about. And only a magazine like yours has the imagination and intelligence to report it.

Thanks again for a great article and great magazine.

SHUT HIM UP

Why do you print such drivel as "Rock Riddle's Boast: 'I'm Tired of Beating Nobodies!'" (SPORTS REVIEW WRESTLING/January 1976)? Riddle should be made to eat that article!

Riddle has no right to insult wrestlers like Raul Mata. Everyone knows Raul is a much better athlete. Rock only did well against him because of cheating. If Riddle had any pride and didn't use illegal tactics, he couldn't get in the same arena as Raul!

Raul Mata is my favorite wrestler. Rock Riddle has no right—or reason—to insult him.

INOKI THE KING

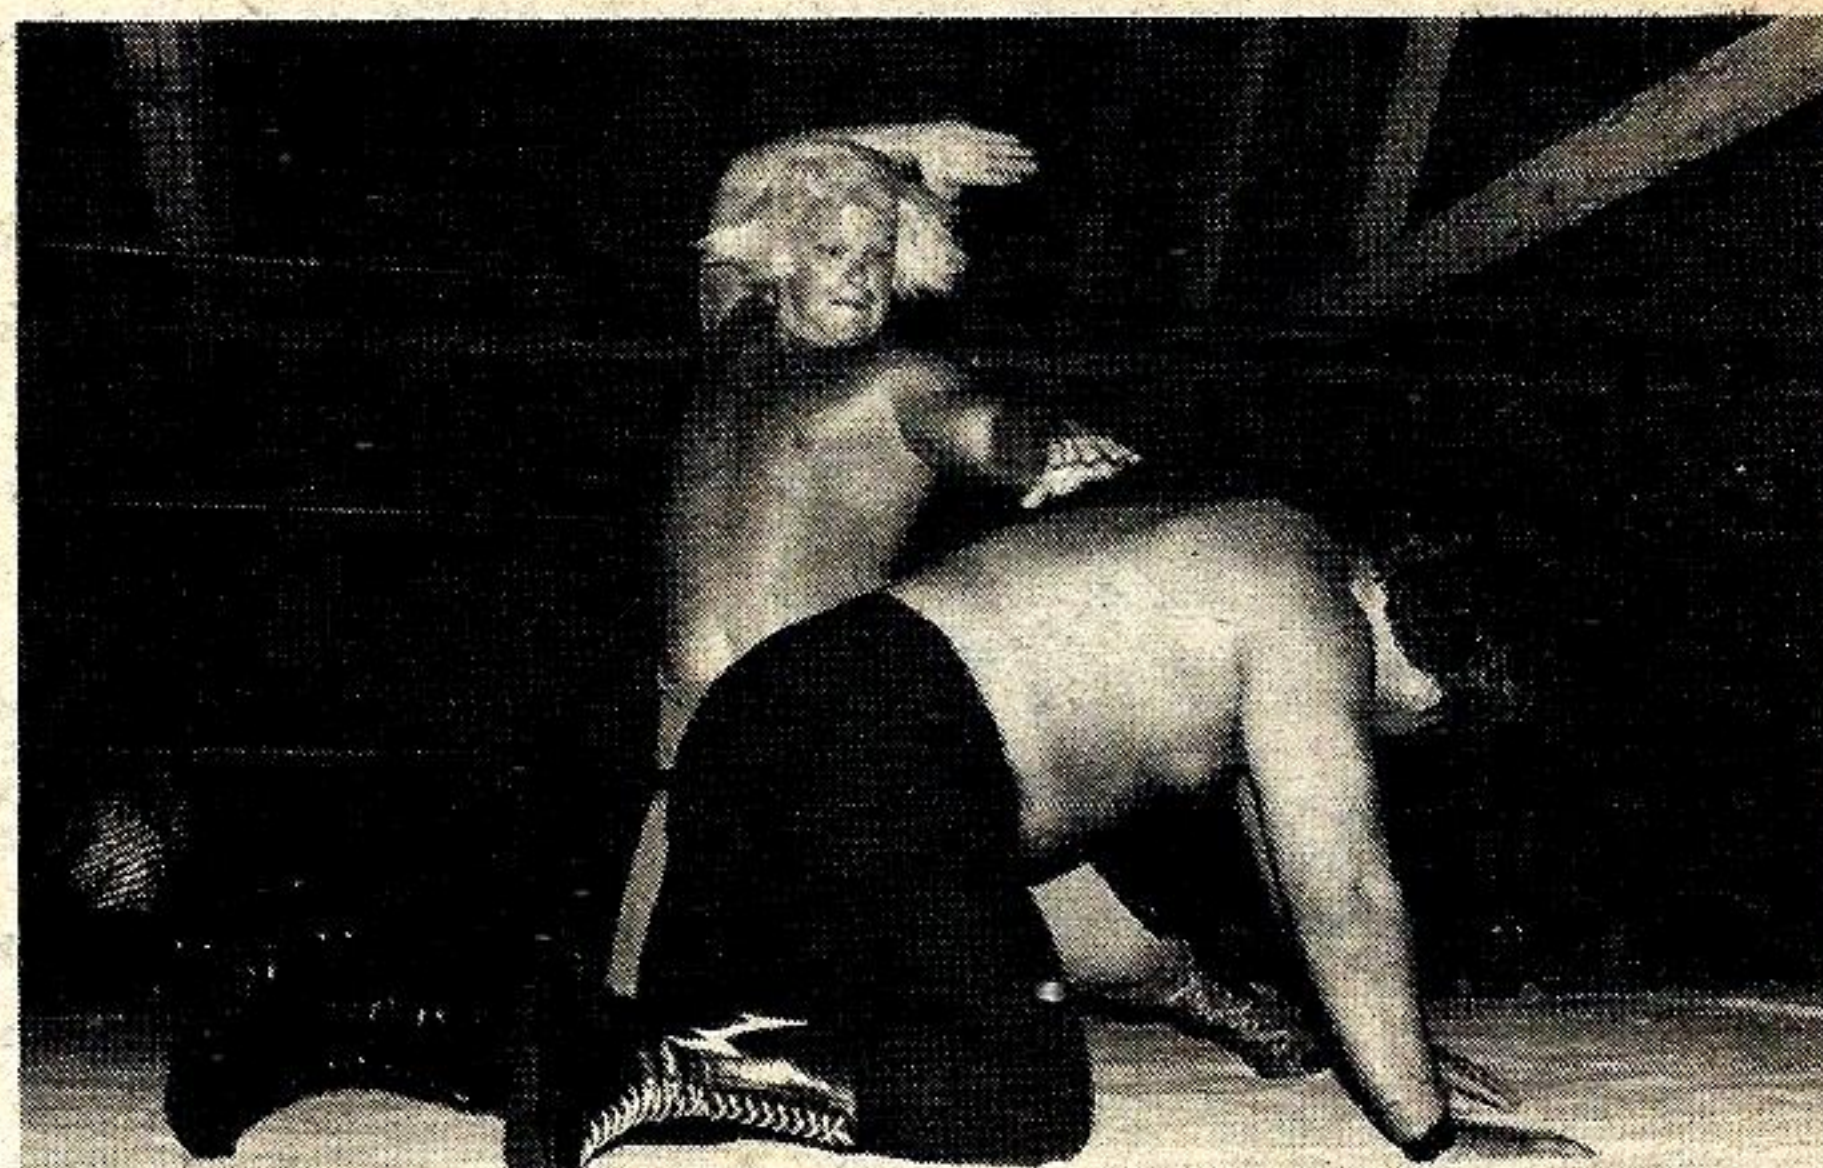

The article, "Antonio Inoki Regains the N.W.F. Title" (SPORTS REVIEW WRESTLING), is a classic and should be read by every wrestling fan. It's what wrestling is all about!

What I liked best is the coverage given to the ex-champion, Tiger Jeet Singh. Though I think Inoki is the greatest wrestler I've ever seen, I couldn't help admiring Singh and the sacrifices he made. The article changed my mind completely about Singh.

You were right when you wrote "We Bet You Didn't Know—Pedro Wrestled Kiniski" (SPORTS REVIEW WRESTLING/January 1976). And I'm sure glad I know now!

Let's have more features about forgotten classic bouts between great wrestlers. I'm sure your knowledgeable staff must know many of these.

WILL THE A.W.A. TURN FIRPO BACK INTO A MANIAC?

IT TOOK MONTHS of negotiations for Pampero Firpo to sign a contract to wrestle for the American Wrestling Association. But the gravel-voiced Argentinian and the A.W.A. finally agreed on terms and Pampero was now on his way to meeting the best talent in the territory.

Firpo was anxious. He'd just left California where he held the N.W.A.'s Americas title. He was here gunning for another belt, be it single or tag team. And Pampero couldn't wait to get started.

As a first test, promoters signed Pampero to wrestle another newcomer to the area, Kim Duk, the Japanese torture expert. This match would prove to be a big one for both men. The fans had not seen Firpo for a number of years and they were not too familiar with Kim Duk's credentials.

"When I beat Meesteer Duk," Pampero growled, "I start to climb de ratings. Then maybe do promoters let me wrestle Meester Bobby Bold Eagle is proud to be an Indian, proud to be a wrestler, and proud to be a man. Soon, he may be proud to be a champion!

BOBBY BOLD EAGLE is a dynamic wrestler, a proud Indian and a person of great compassion. His deep-seated convictions, integrity, and wrestling agility have earned him a reputation as one of the best wrestlers around today.

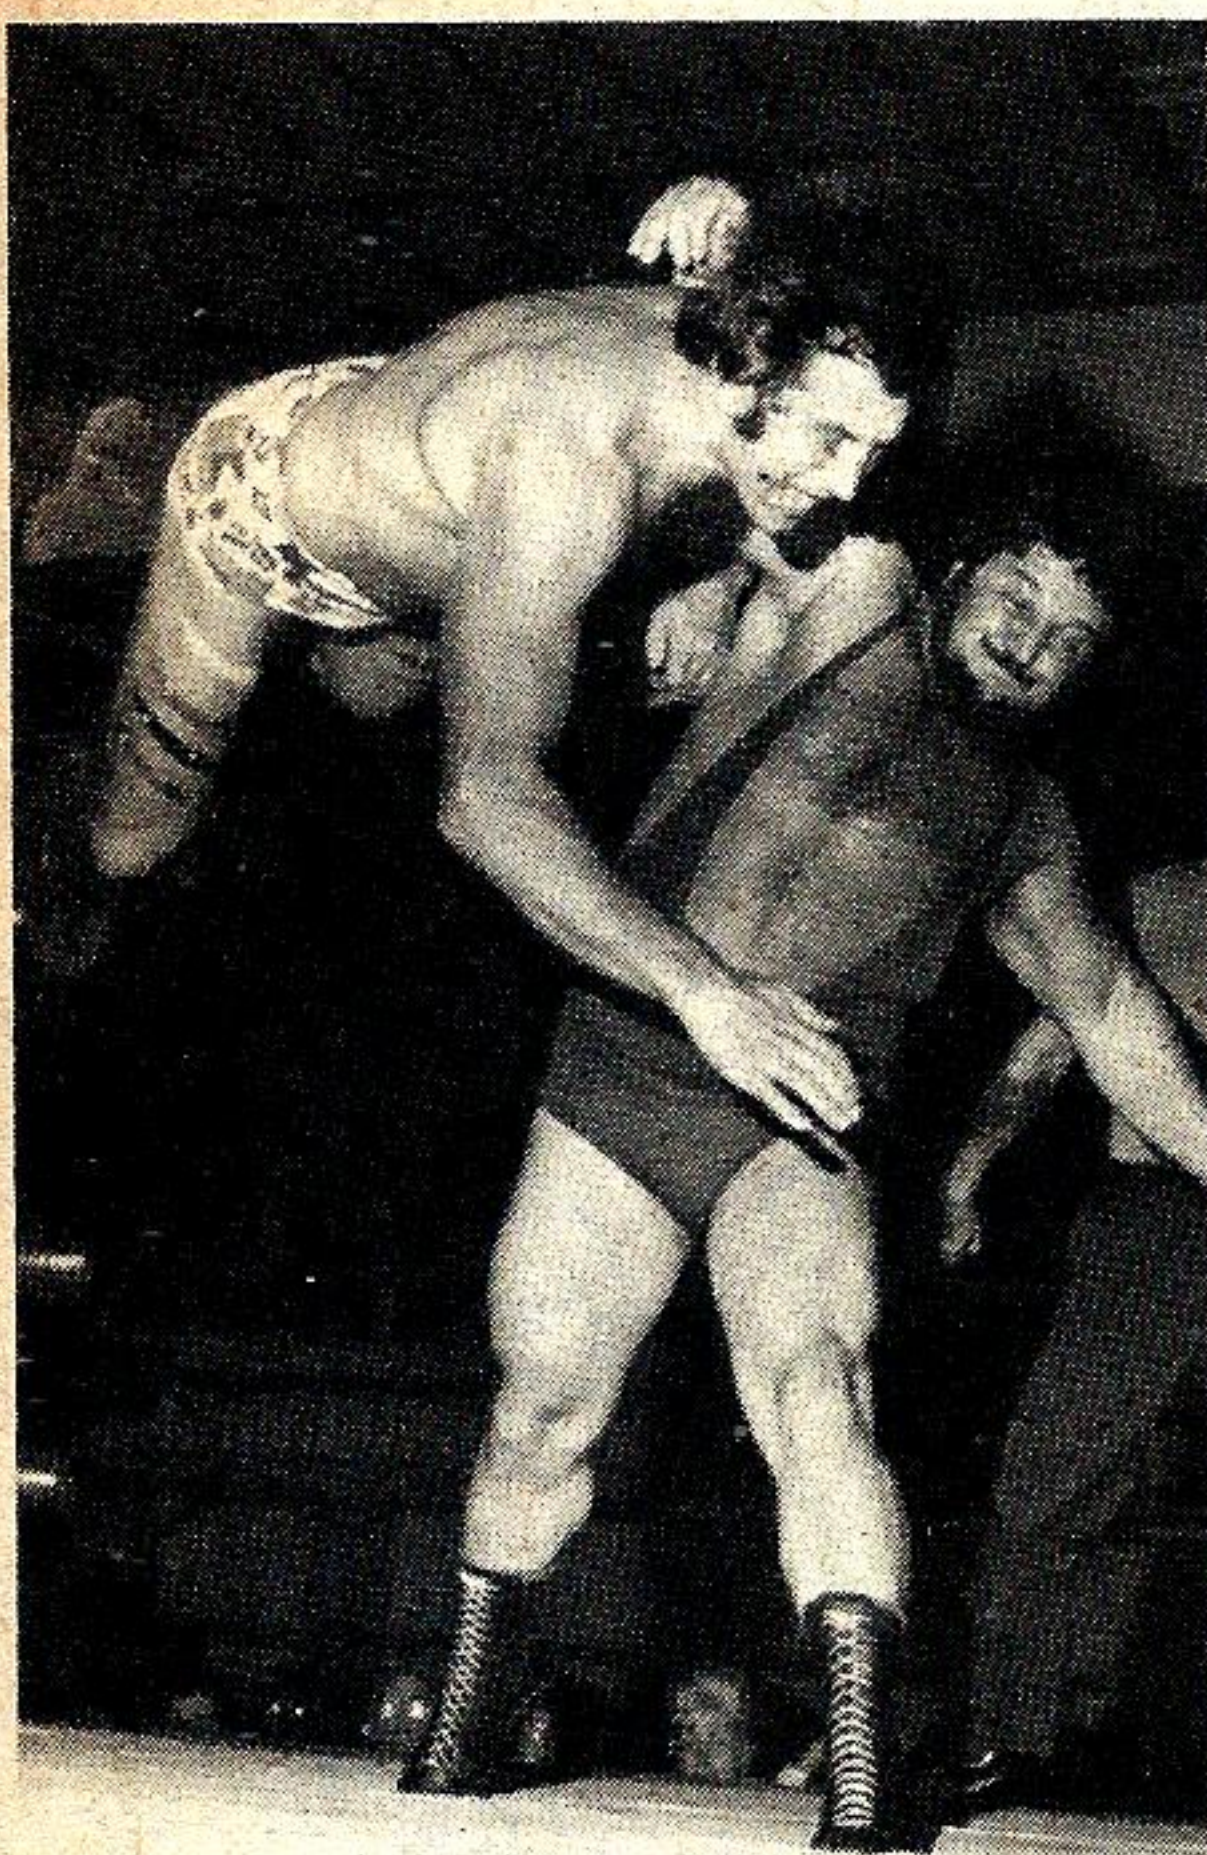

Raised in back country territory, the 232-pound, 6-foot tall grappler served as a merchant marine before entering the professional wrestling campaign several years ago.

He prides himself on his Indian upbringing, though he was not raised on a reservation. His childhood was lonely and rough, but it prepared him to be the wrestler he is today. "Where I lived," reflects Bold Eagle, "it snowed so much during the winter months we had to depend on a horse and wagon to get needed supplies. Our mail was delivered twice a week. We did all we could just to survive."

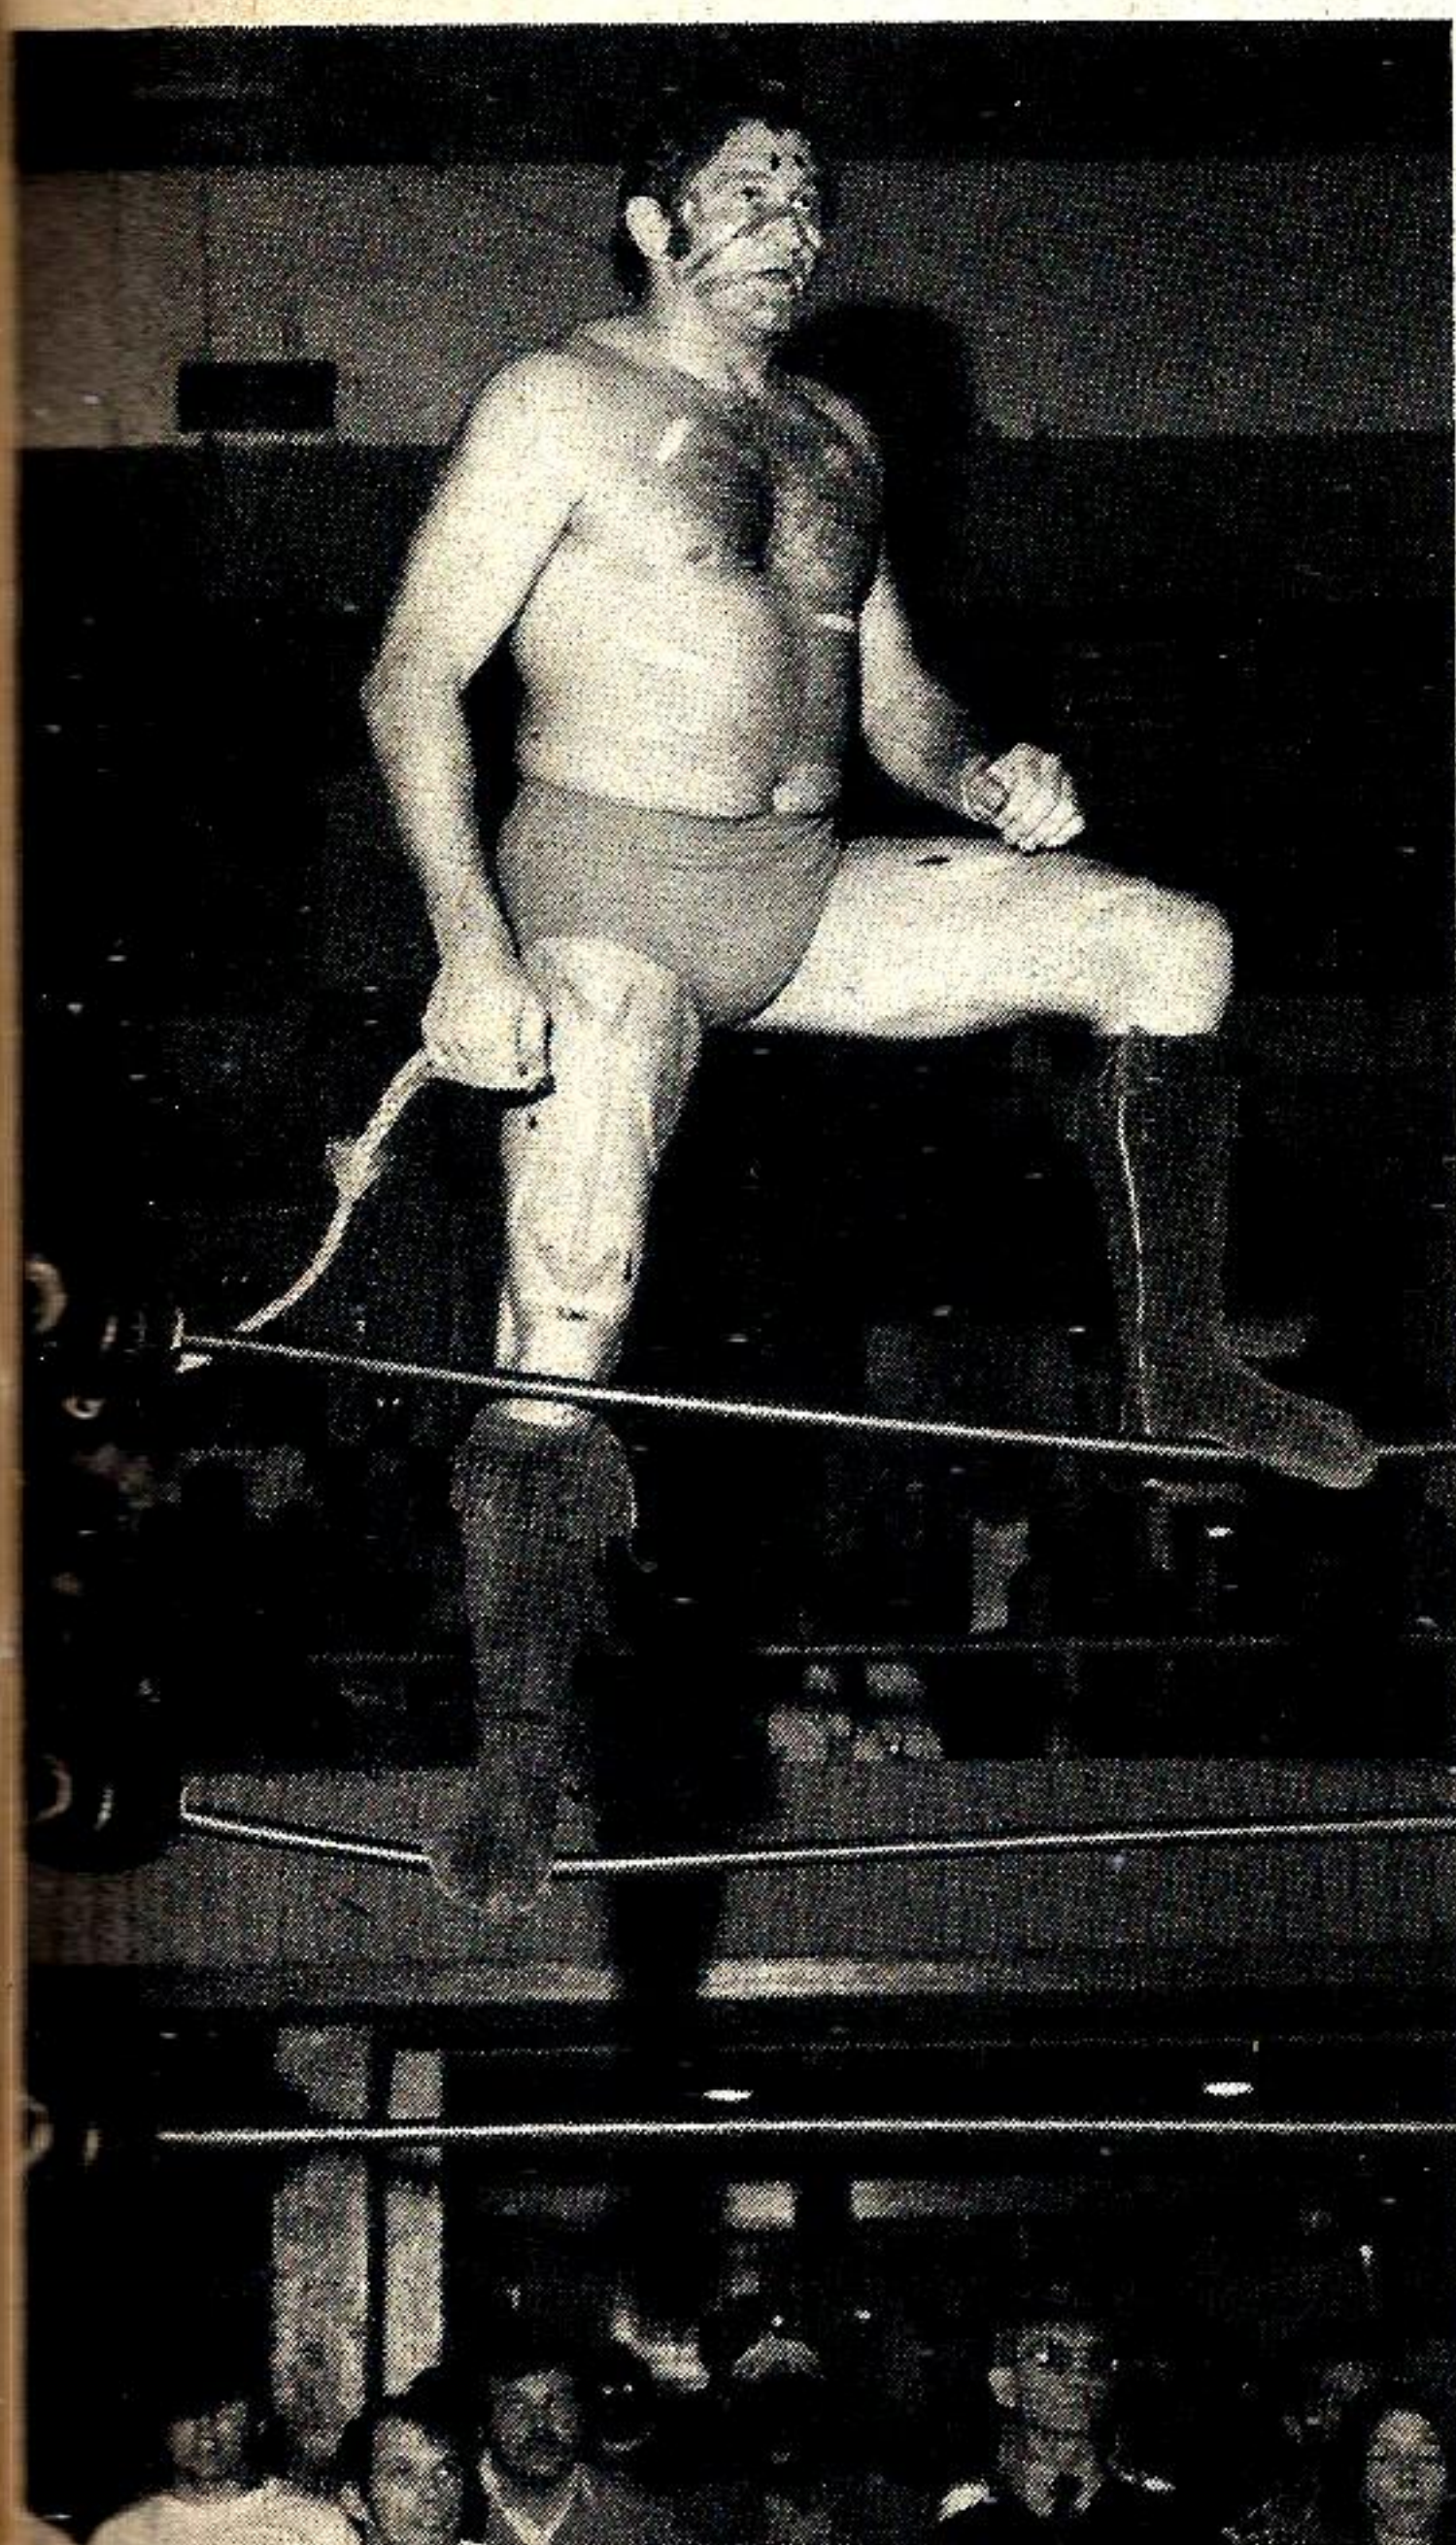

And the loneliness of his childhood still effects him today. "Being a wrestler can be a lonely life," he admitted. "You are constantly traveling. Your social life is limited. But in spite of it all, I won't think about quitting—wrestling is my life, and I intend to stay as long as I am capable of doing my best."

But Bobby doesn't just idle away the hours in his motel rooms on the road, doing nothing. His Indian heritage has taught him to be compassionate. So whenever he's in town and hears of the illness of one of his fans, he pays a visit to the hospital, just to cheer up the fan. He says, "If a fan finds time to see me wrestle, the least I can do is find time to see him when he's sick." He will also go out of his way to visit children's hospitals and other charitable institutions along the road.

In his extensive travels he has encountered many fearsome opponents, including Killer Kowalski, Don Leo Jonathan, Harley Race, and Buddy Rogers. He also earned the United States Junior Heavyweight title at one point in his professional career.

"So many people think wrestling is an easy way to make a living," says Bobby. "So many youngsters think they want to be wrestlers, but they don't know what kind of rugged life it is. But if I had a son who wanted to wrestle, I would do everything I could to help him—after he got all his schooling done."

Much to his regret, Bold Eagle was forced to terminate his education early to help support his family.

Bobby enjoys being around people, and is never too busy to stop and chat, or sign an autograph, or show off the fine collection of authentic Indian costumes he uses in the arena. Before facing an opponent, he applies war paint to his face and body, beats a war drum and does a highly spirited dance, making sure everyone in the crowd knows what his heritage is.

And he takes that Indian fighting spirit into the arena. His speed and agility, together with his muscular body, have made him tough for an opponent to beat.

"I'm a clean wrestler," Bold Eagle maintains. "I don't have to resort to using dirty tricks to prove myself."

Looking back on his colorful career, Bobby Bold Eagle well remembers some of his most remarkable matches. "Although all matches are tough," he said, "there are two which stand out in my memory as being the most thrilling. One was against Roger Kirby and one was against Danny Hodge.

"Both these guys had held the World Junior Heavyweight Title at one time, and could play it clean or rough. They never tried to clown it up when they battled me, though. They knew better. But they both kept me on my toes the whole time."

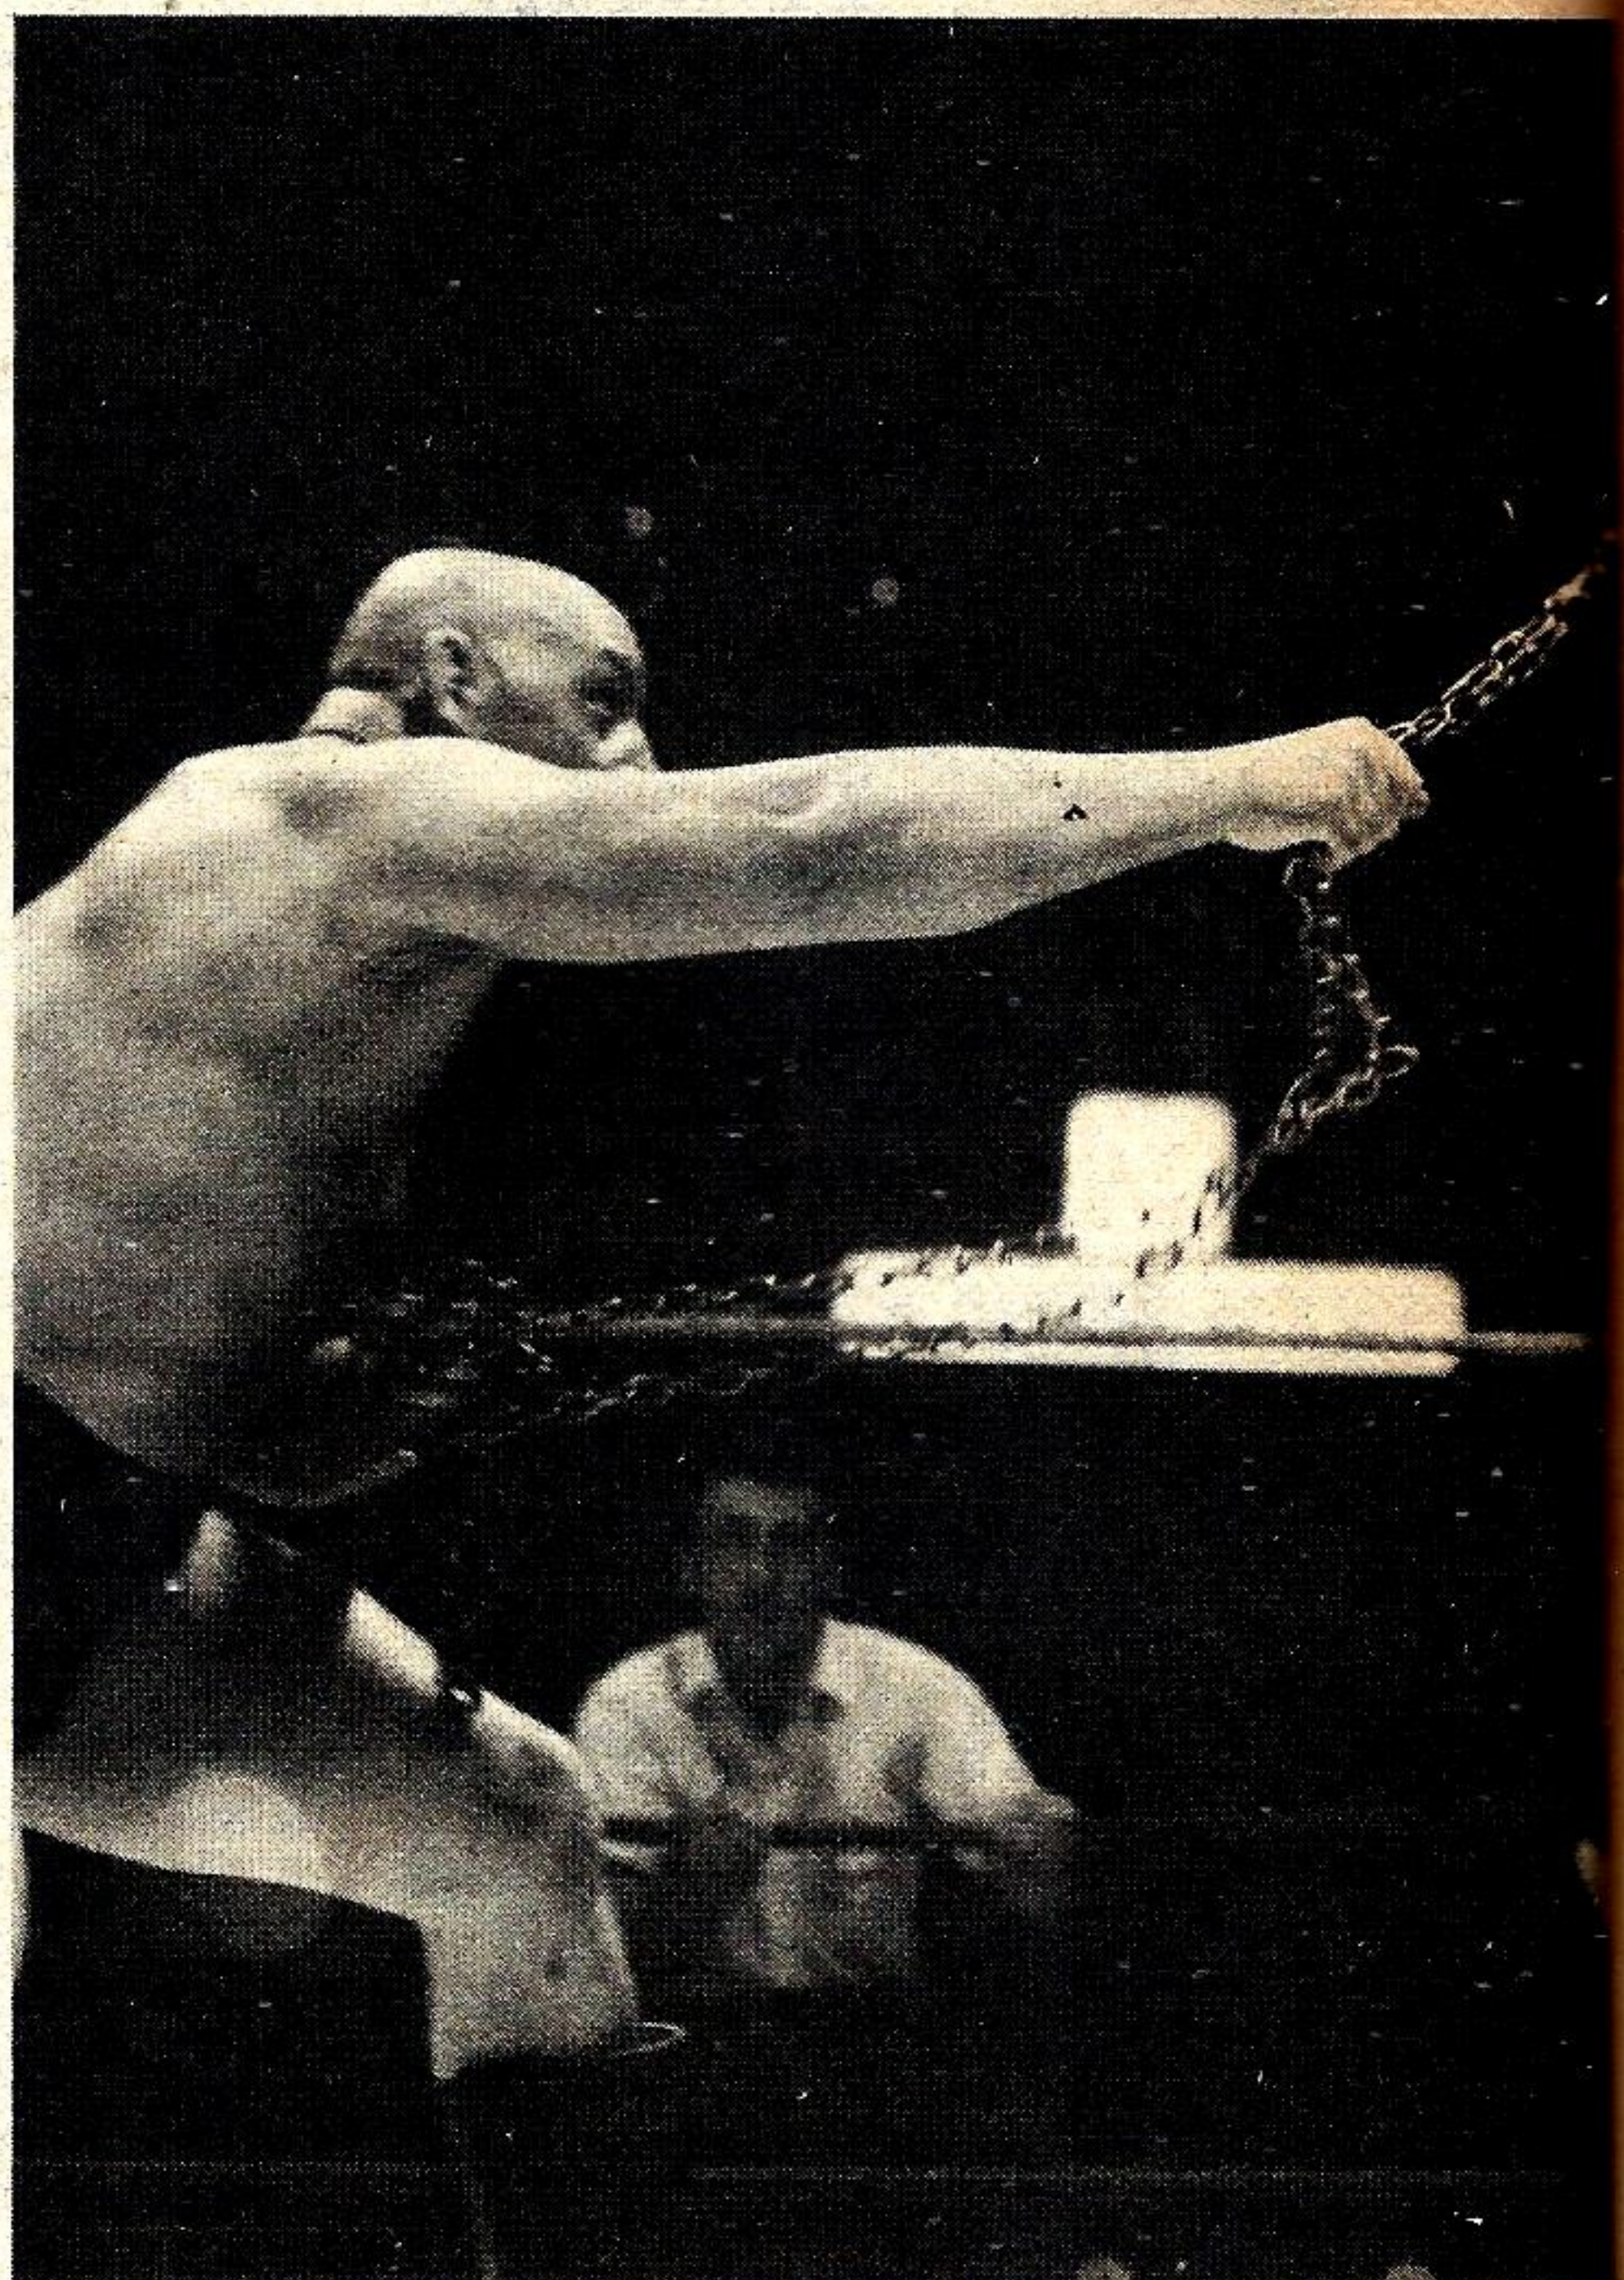

And after many years as a professional, Bobby Bold Eagle is still in there, plugging away. He is a proud man, a sensitive man, an outstanding athlete, and above all, a great wrestler. □

TAG TEAM B

MATCHES?

Right: Luigi Macera tries to defend himself against the Mongols by using a chair. It is action like this, seldom seen in single bouts, which have made the tag team battle skyrocket in fan popularity.

Men are double-teamed. Illegal tactics prevail throughout the bout. Yet the tag team match continues to grow in popularity and may be replacing the single match in the fans' hearts!

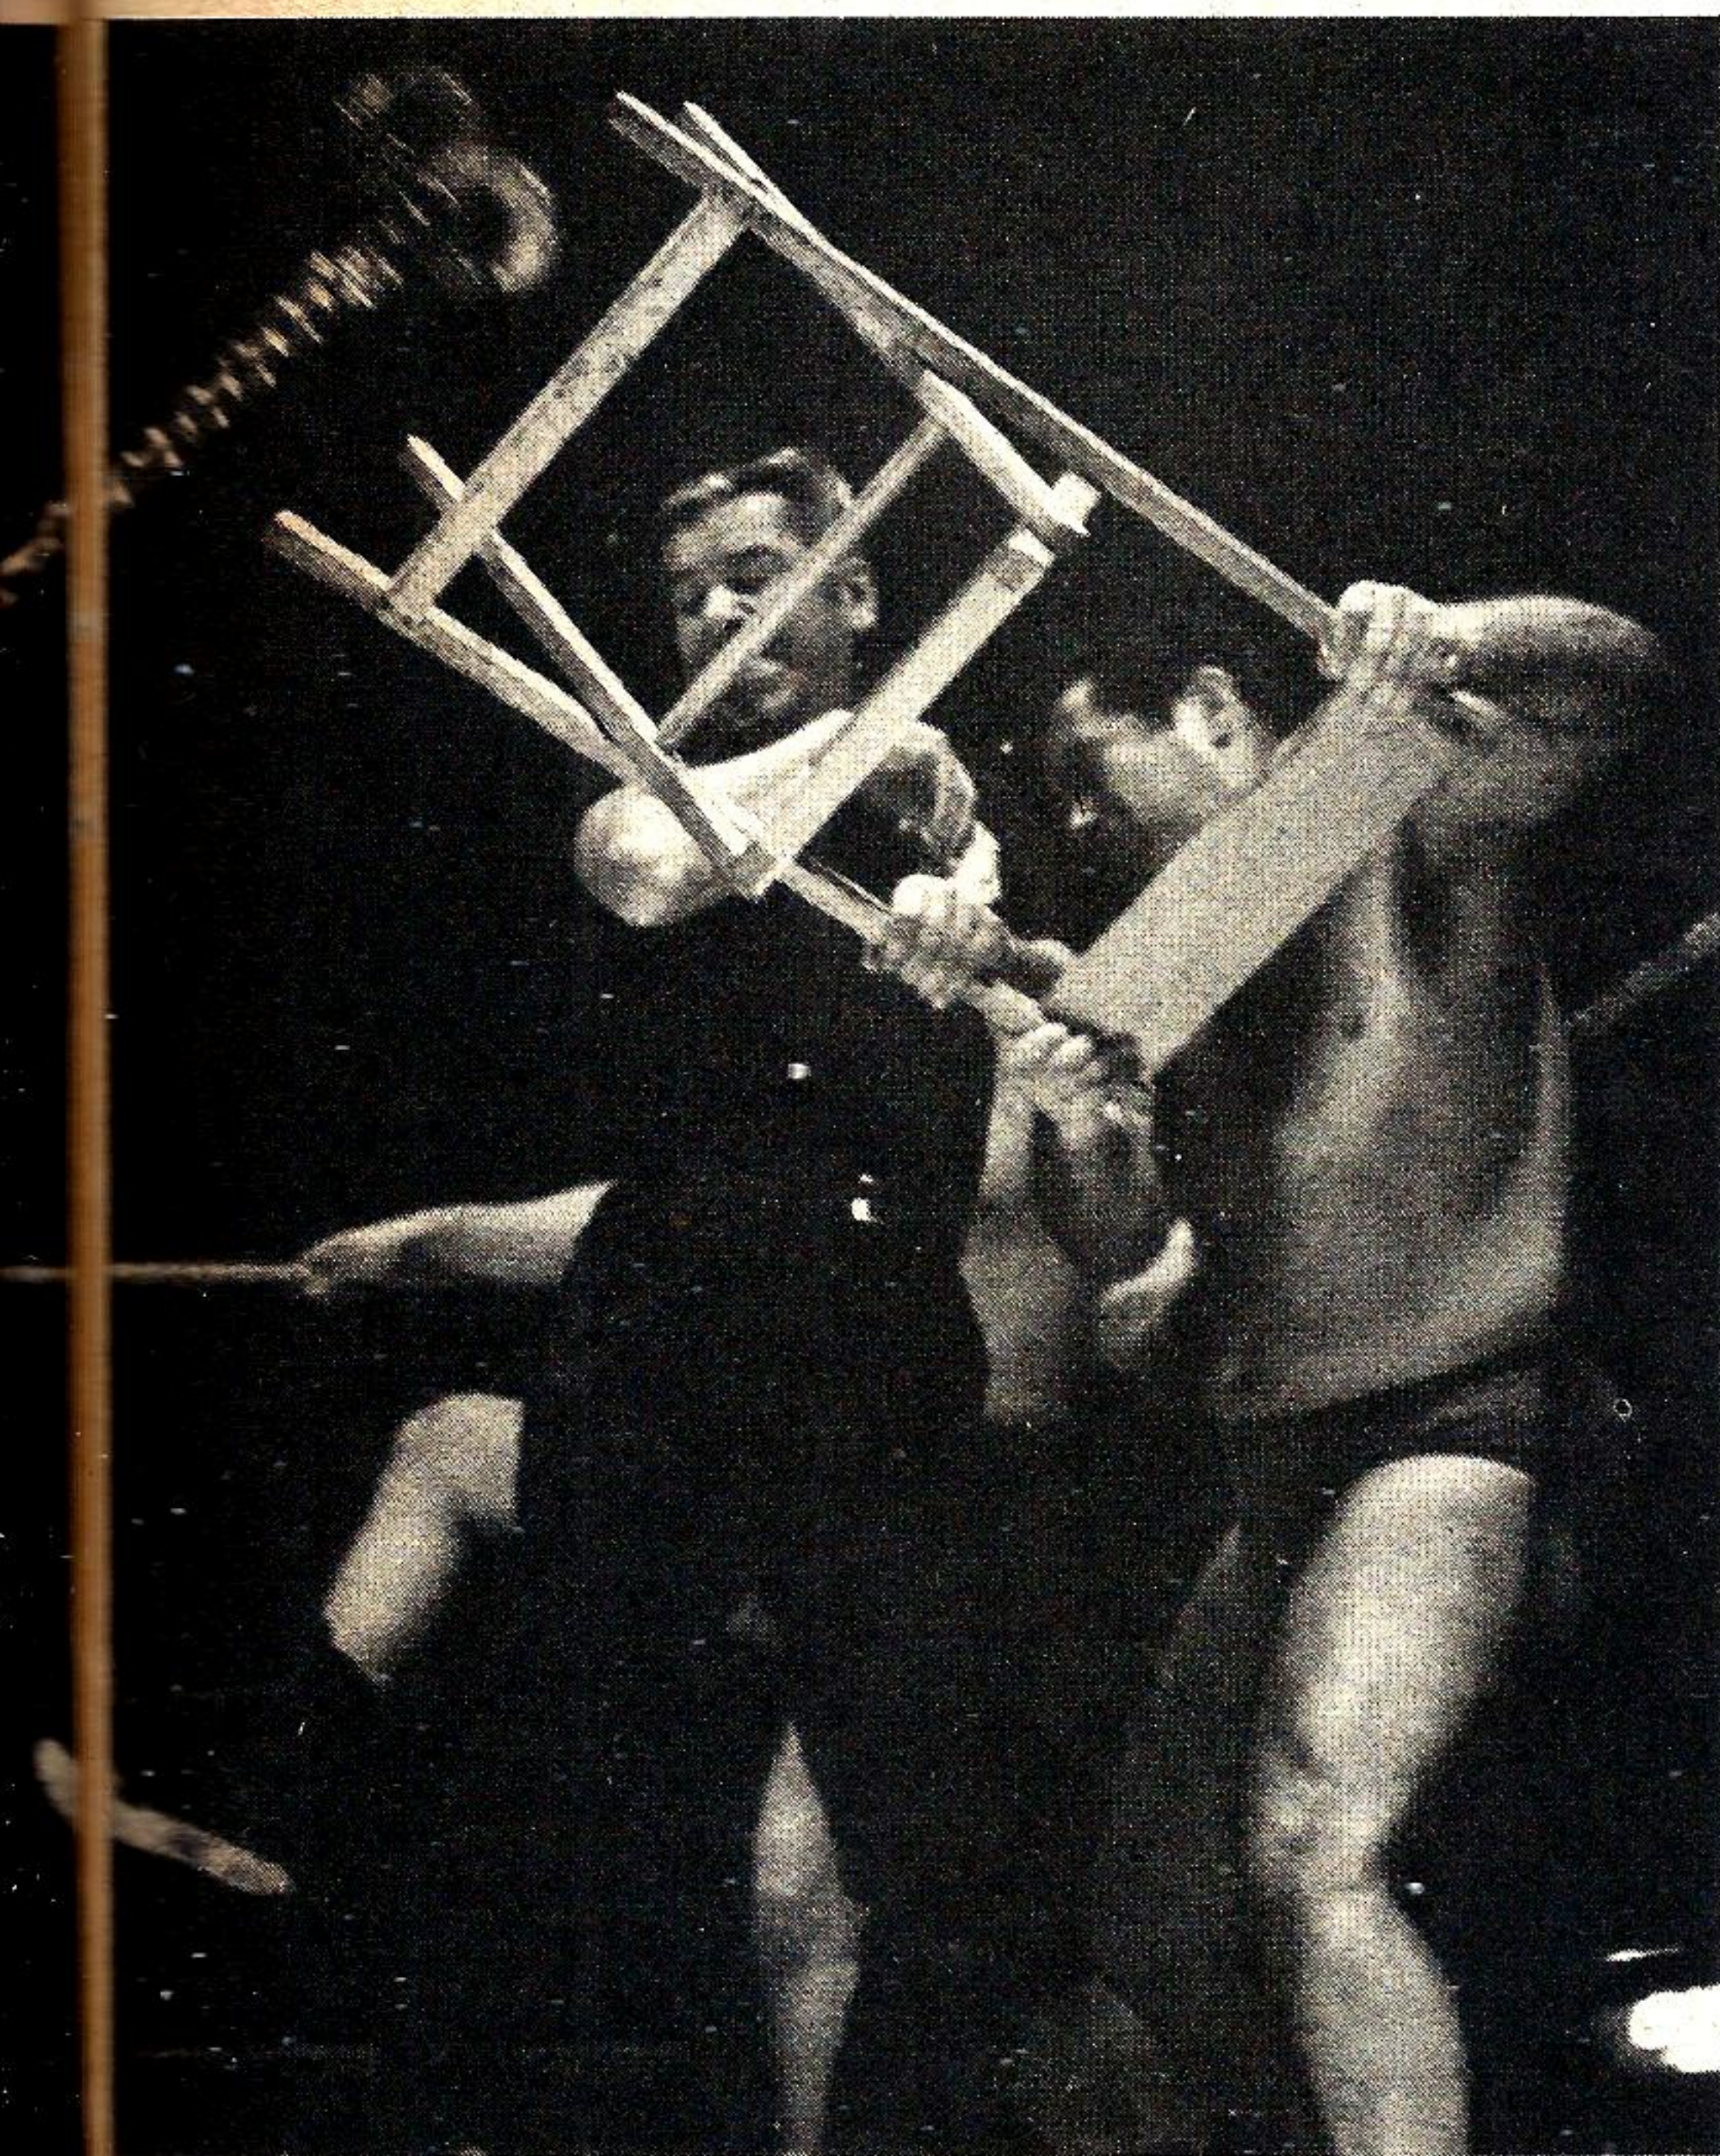

One of the most vicious and successful teams in wrestling today is the Valiants. Here they doubleteam Billy Red Cloud. Although the Valiants are hated, there can be no denying they are a very exciting tag team.

WRESTLING IS THE most ancient of sports. Its origins lie in the battles between outraged cavemen over food. The Greeks refined it by adding rules, regulations, and standard maneuvers. Yet, over the centuries, it remained a contest between two individuals.

In modern times, the individual cannot exist solely by himself. Team sports have gained great popularity as man regards himself as a part of the whole. Working together is recognized as a more difficult accomplishment than conquering alone.

Reflecting this modern sensibility, tag teams have been gaining greater and greater importance in wrestling.

BOUTS—

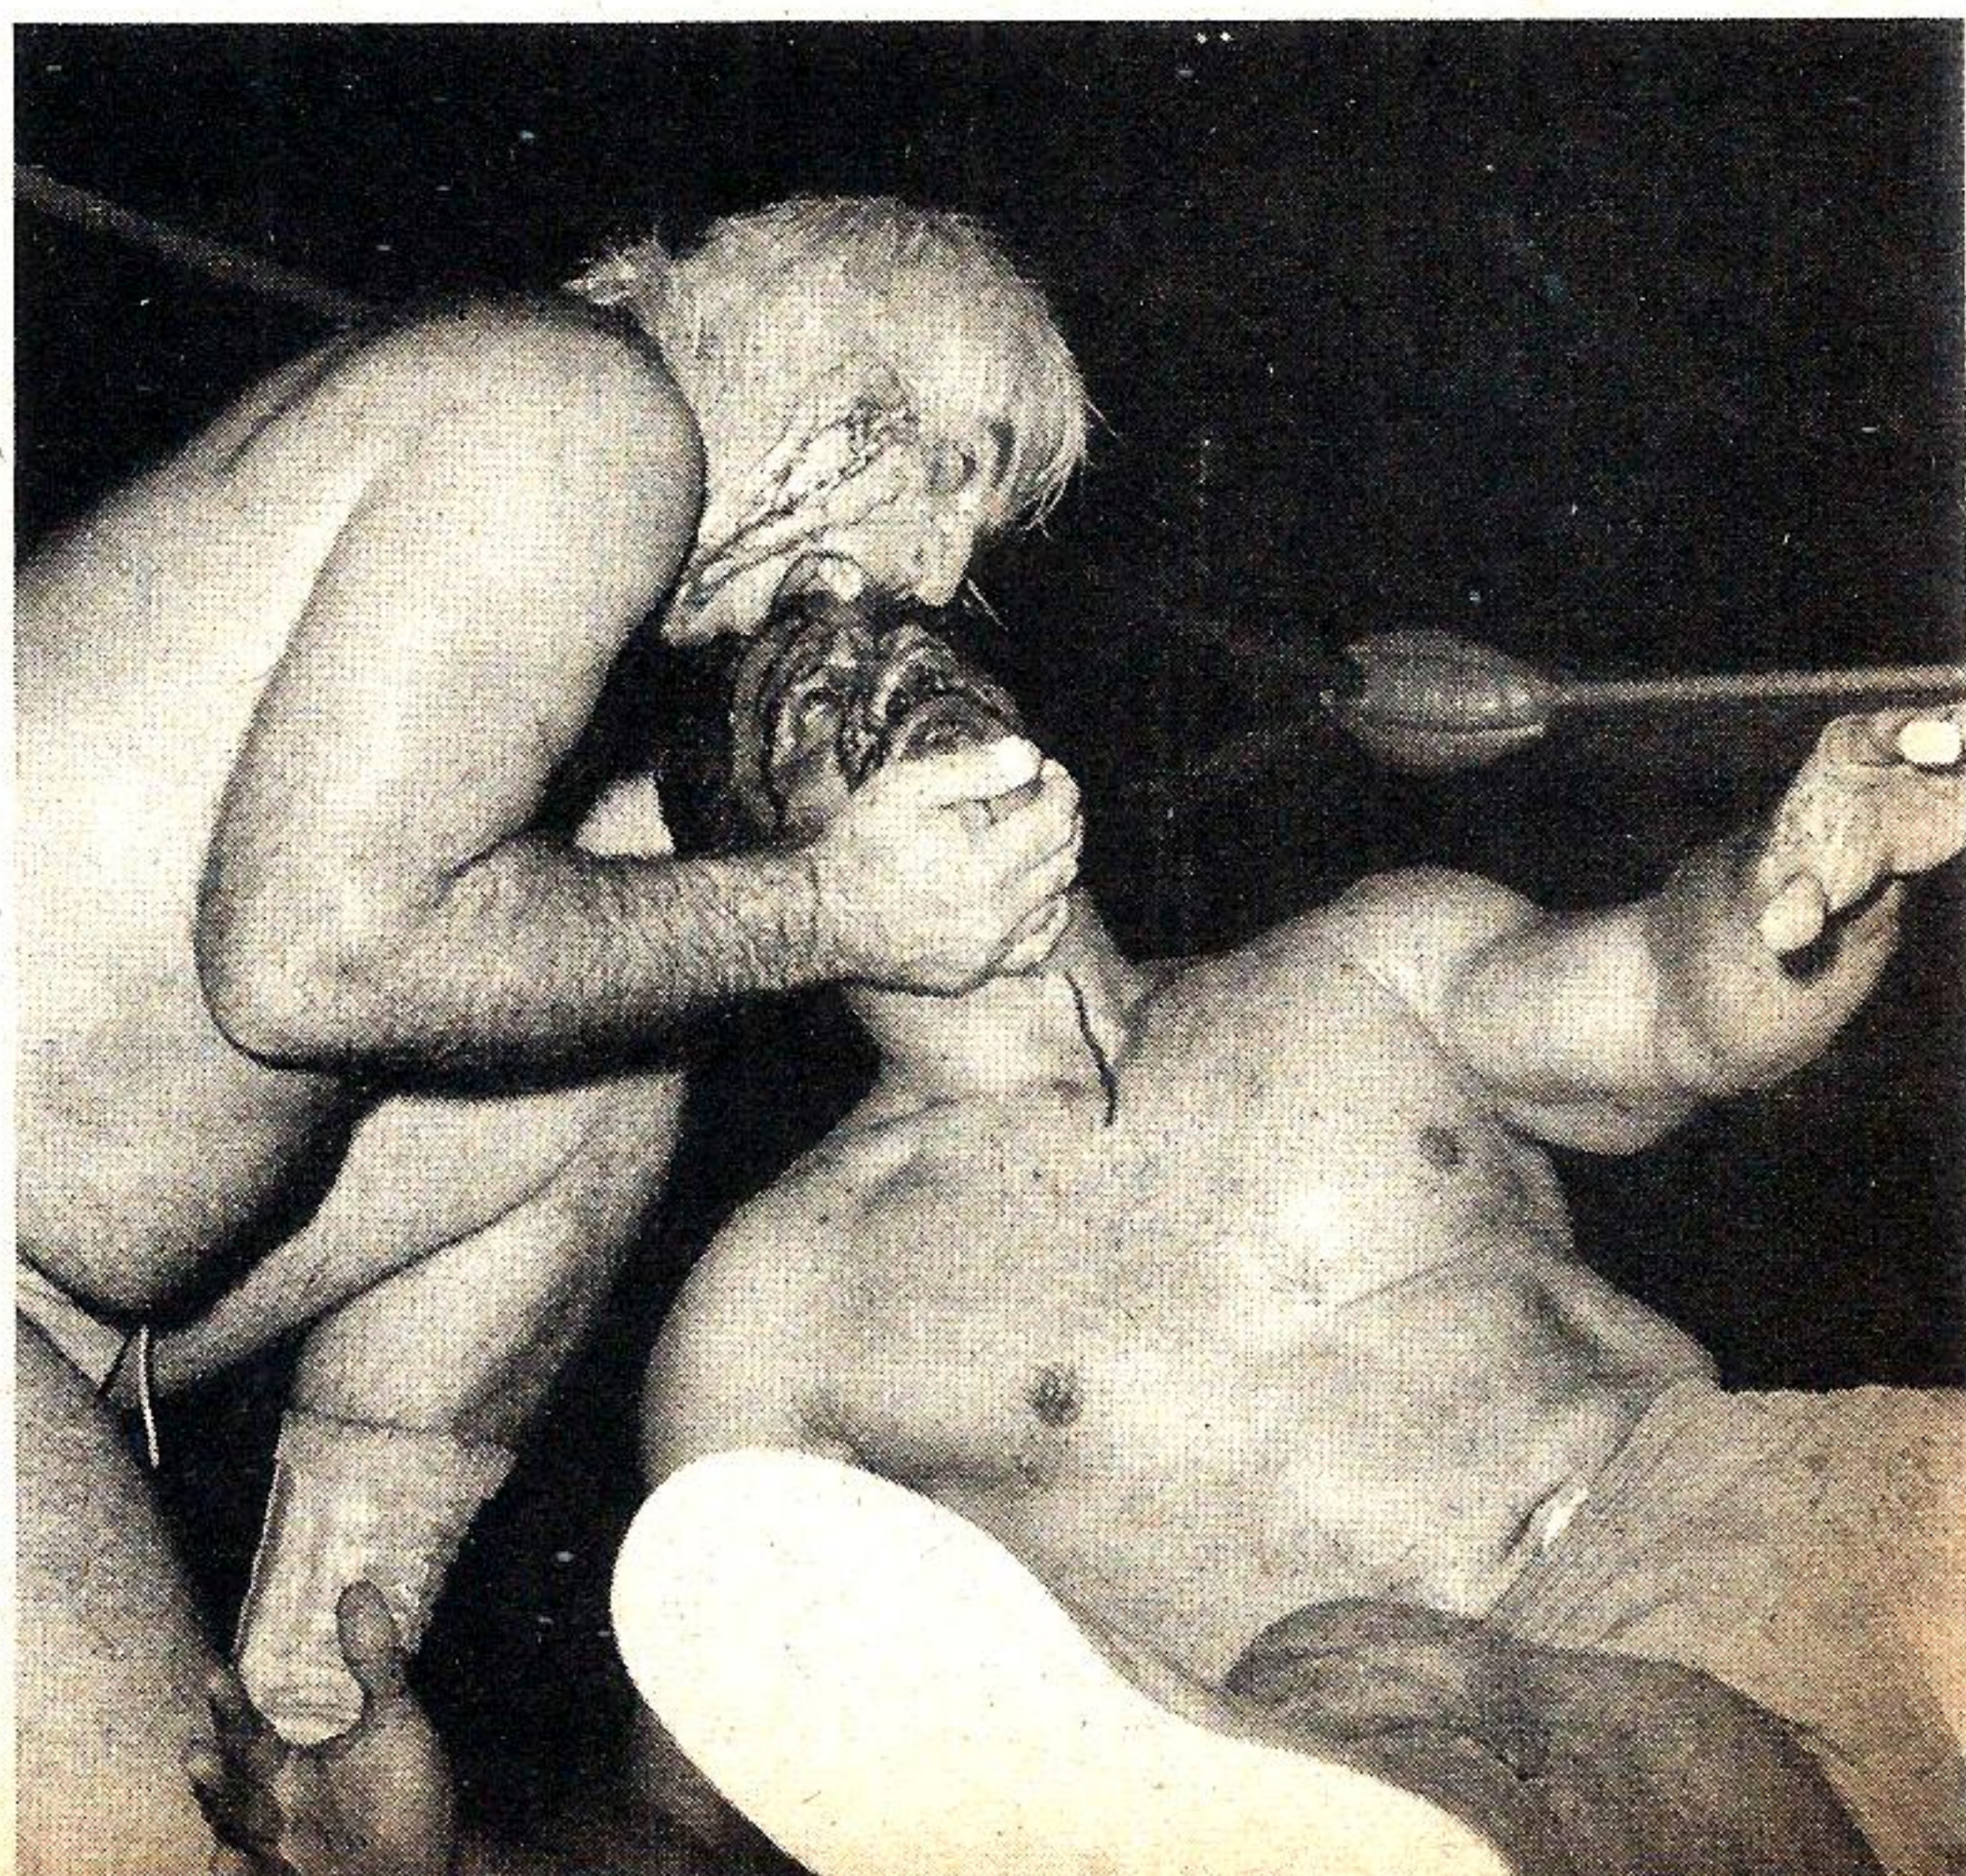

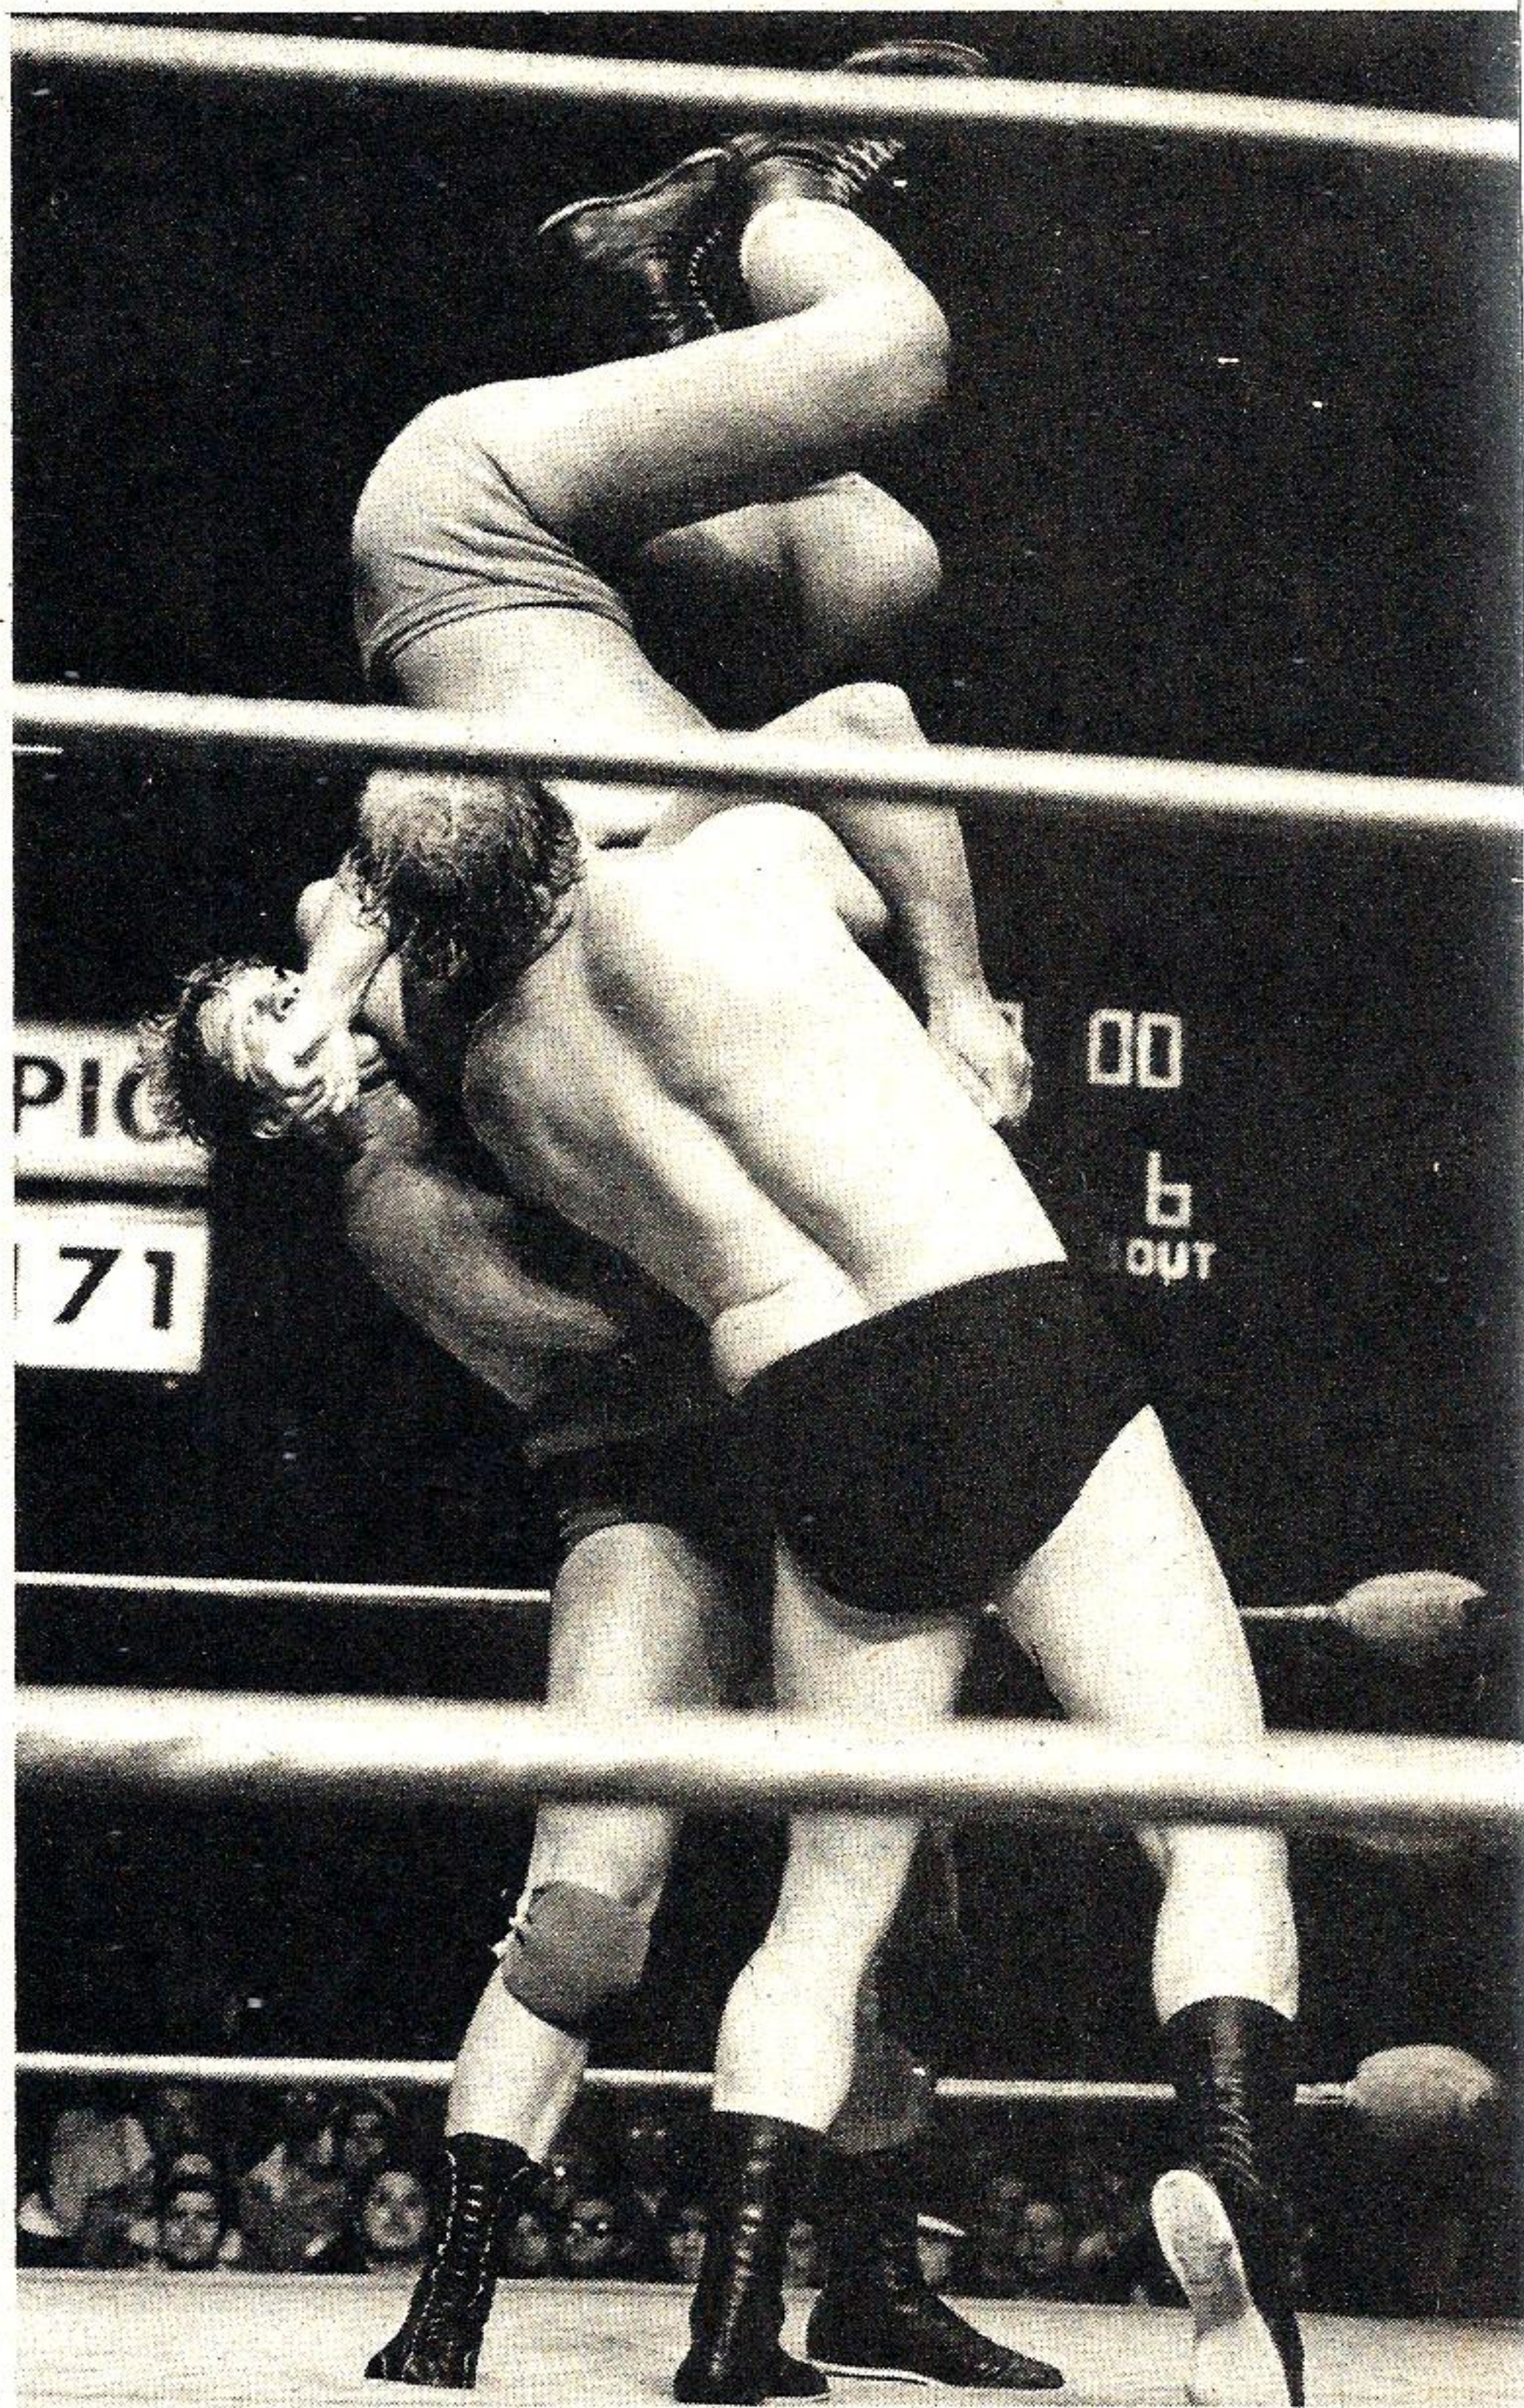

While fans still idolize the single man who defeats all others to become champion, they have also demonstrated strong loyalty to accomplished tag teams. They are thrilled by the action of these matches. The reason for this excitement is no mystery.

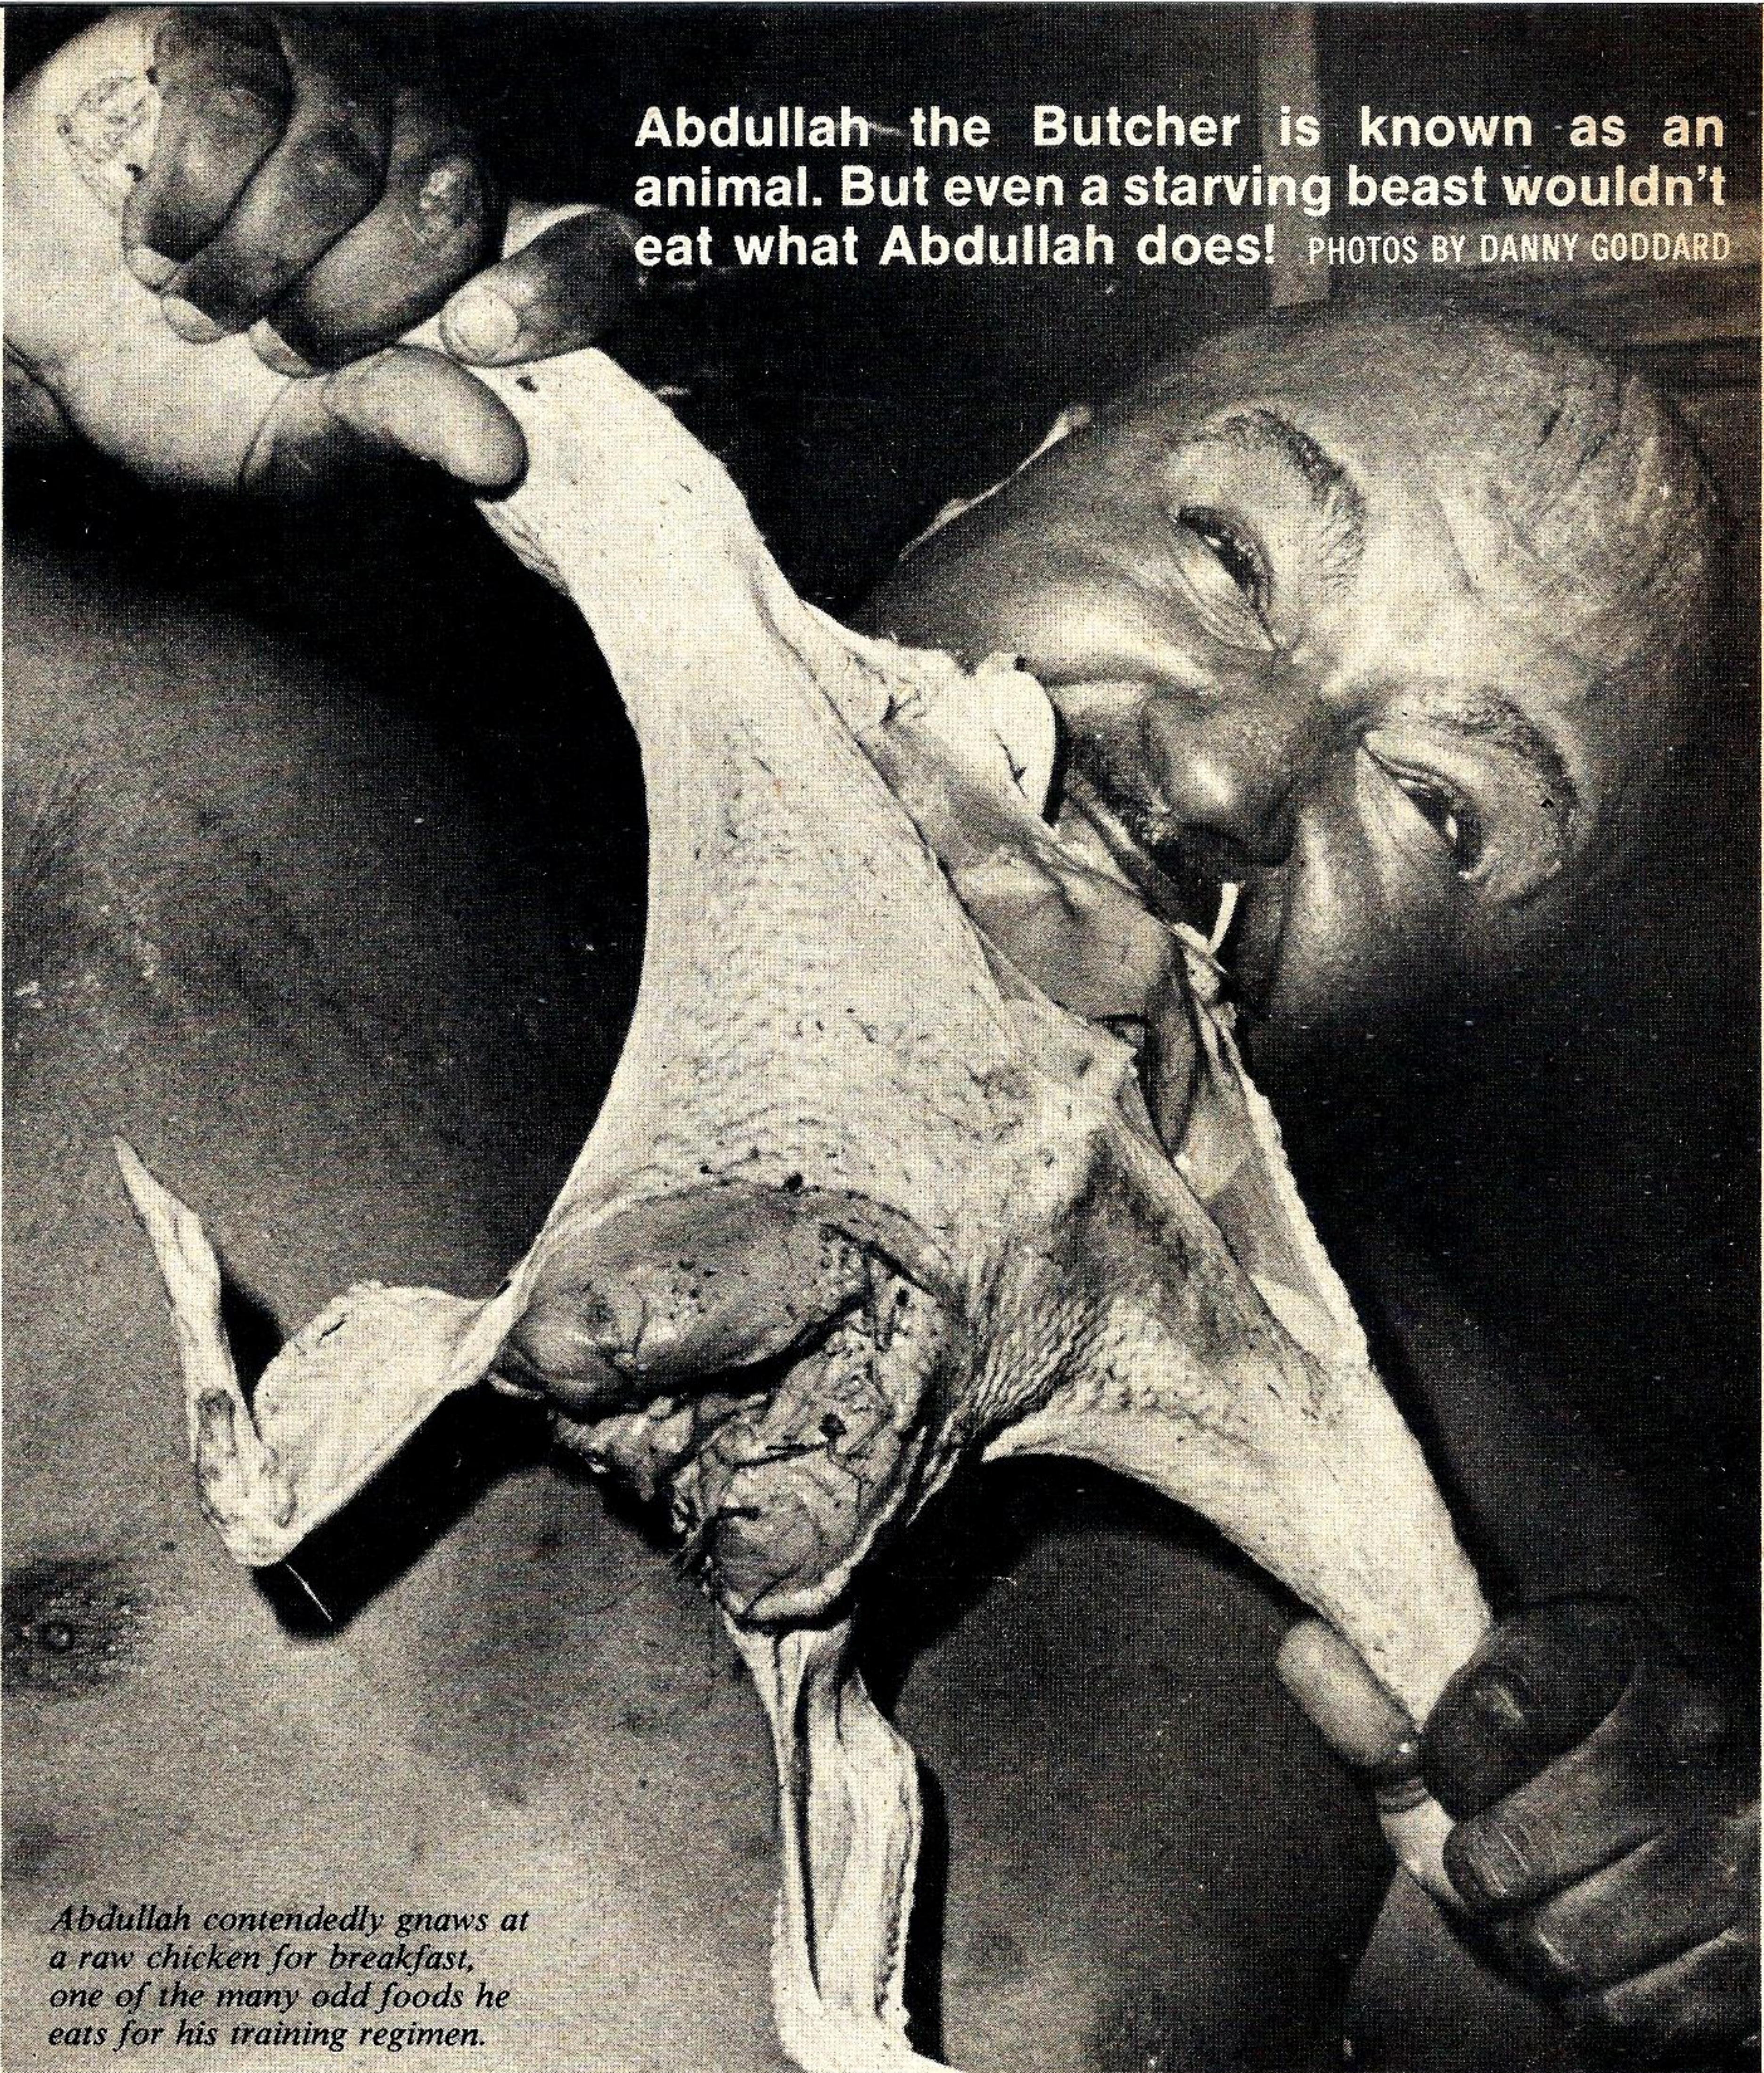

First of all, the danger inherent in a tag team match is vastly greater than in a single match. Because there are two men on each team, they can doubleteam a victim, causing much pain in a very short time. The chance of death hangs over any match which features one of the more notorious duos. Their capabilities are limitless—as is their cruelty.

The risk a man takes in choosing a tag team partner is enormous. If a partner has a bad night, or fails to take the battle seriously, a man could wind up being carried out on stretcher. One's own skills are worthless without the equal abilities of a great partner.

THE NIGHT THE FANS CHEERED MAD DOG VACHON

MAD DOG VACHON stood outside the ropes, pounding a helpless John Tolos, and the crowd screamed with delight. They were cheering Vachon—something he rarely hears.

The more the crowd cheered, the more Mad Dog pounded cruel, vicious blows upon Tolos' body. And the more Vachon hammered away at the despised "Golden Greek," the louder the crowd roared. It was a strange moment indeed.

The confrontation between Tolos and Vachon had been a long time in the making. They have hated and despised each other ever since they first heard of one another.

"Tolos keeps saying he'll destroy me," said Mad Dog. "Well, I'm tired of hearing him shoot off that mouth of his. I'll tell you this: Wrestling is not big enough, especially in this area, for both of us. I'll show him who the boss is if we ever meet."

Tolos, naturally, felt differently about the situation.

"I don't dislike Mad Dog Vachon," said John. "I hate him! I despise his ugly bald head. I despise his scraggly beard. I despise his pudding face. I'll thoroughly whip, crush, mash, beat, pulverize, ostracize, pound and ground his face around. He's through, I tell ya', when I get done working him over. Through! Getting run over by a hundred cars on the local expressway will be more pleasant a happening than what I'll do to his misfit body!"

After all the threats and insults, the two men finally met in the squared circle. And for more than half an hour, they beat and battered each other. Every time Tolos was hurt by a Vachon blow, the crowd cheered wildly. They were delighted to see the man who had savagely brutalized Jose Lothario and Alberto Madrill get battered.

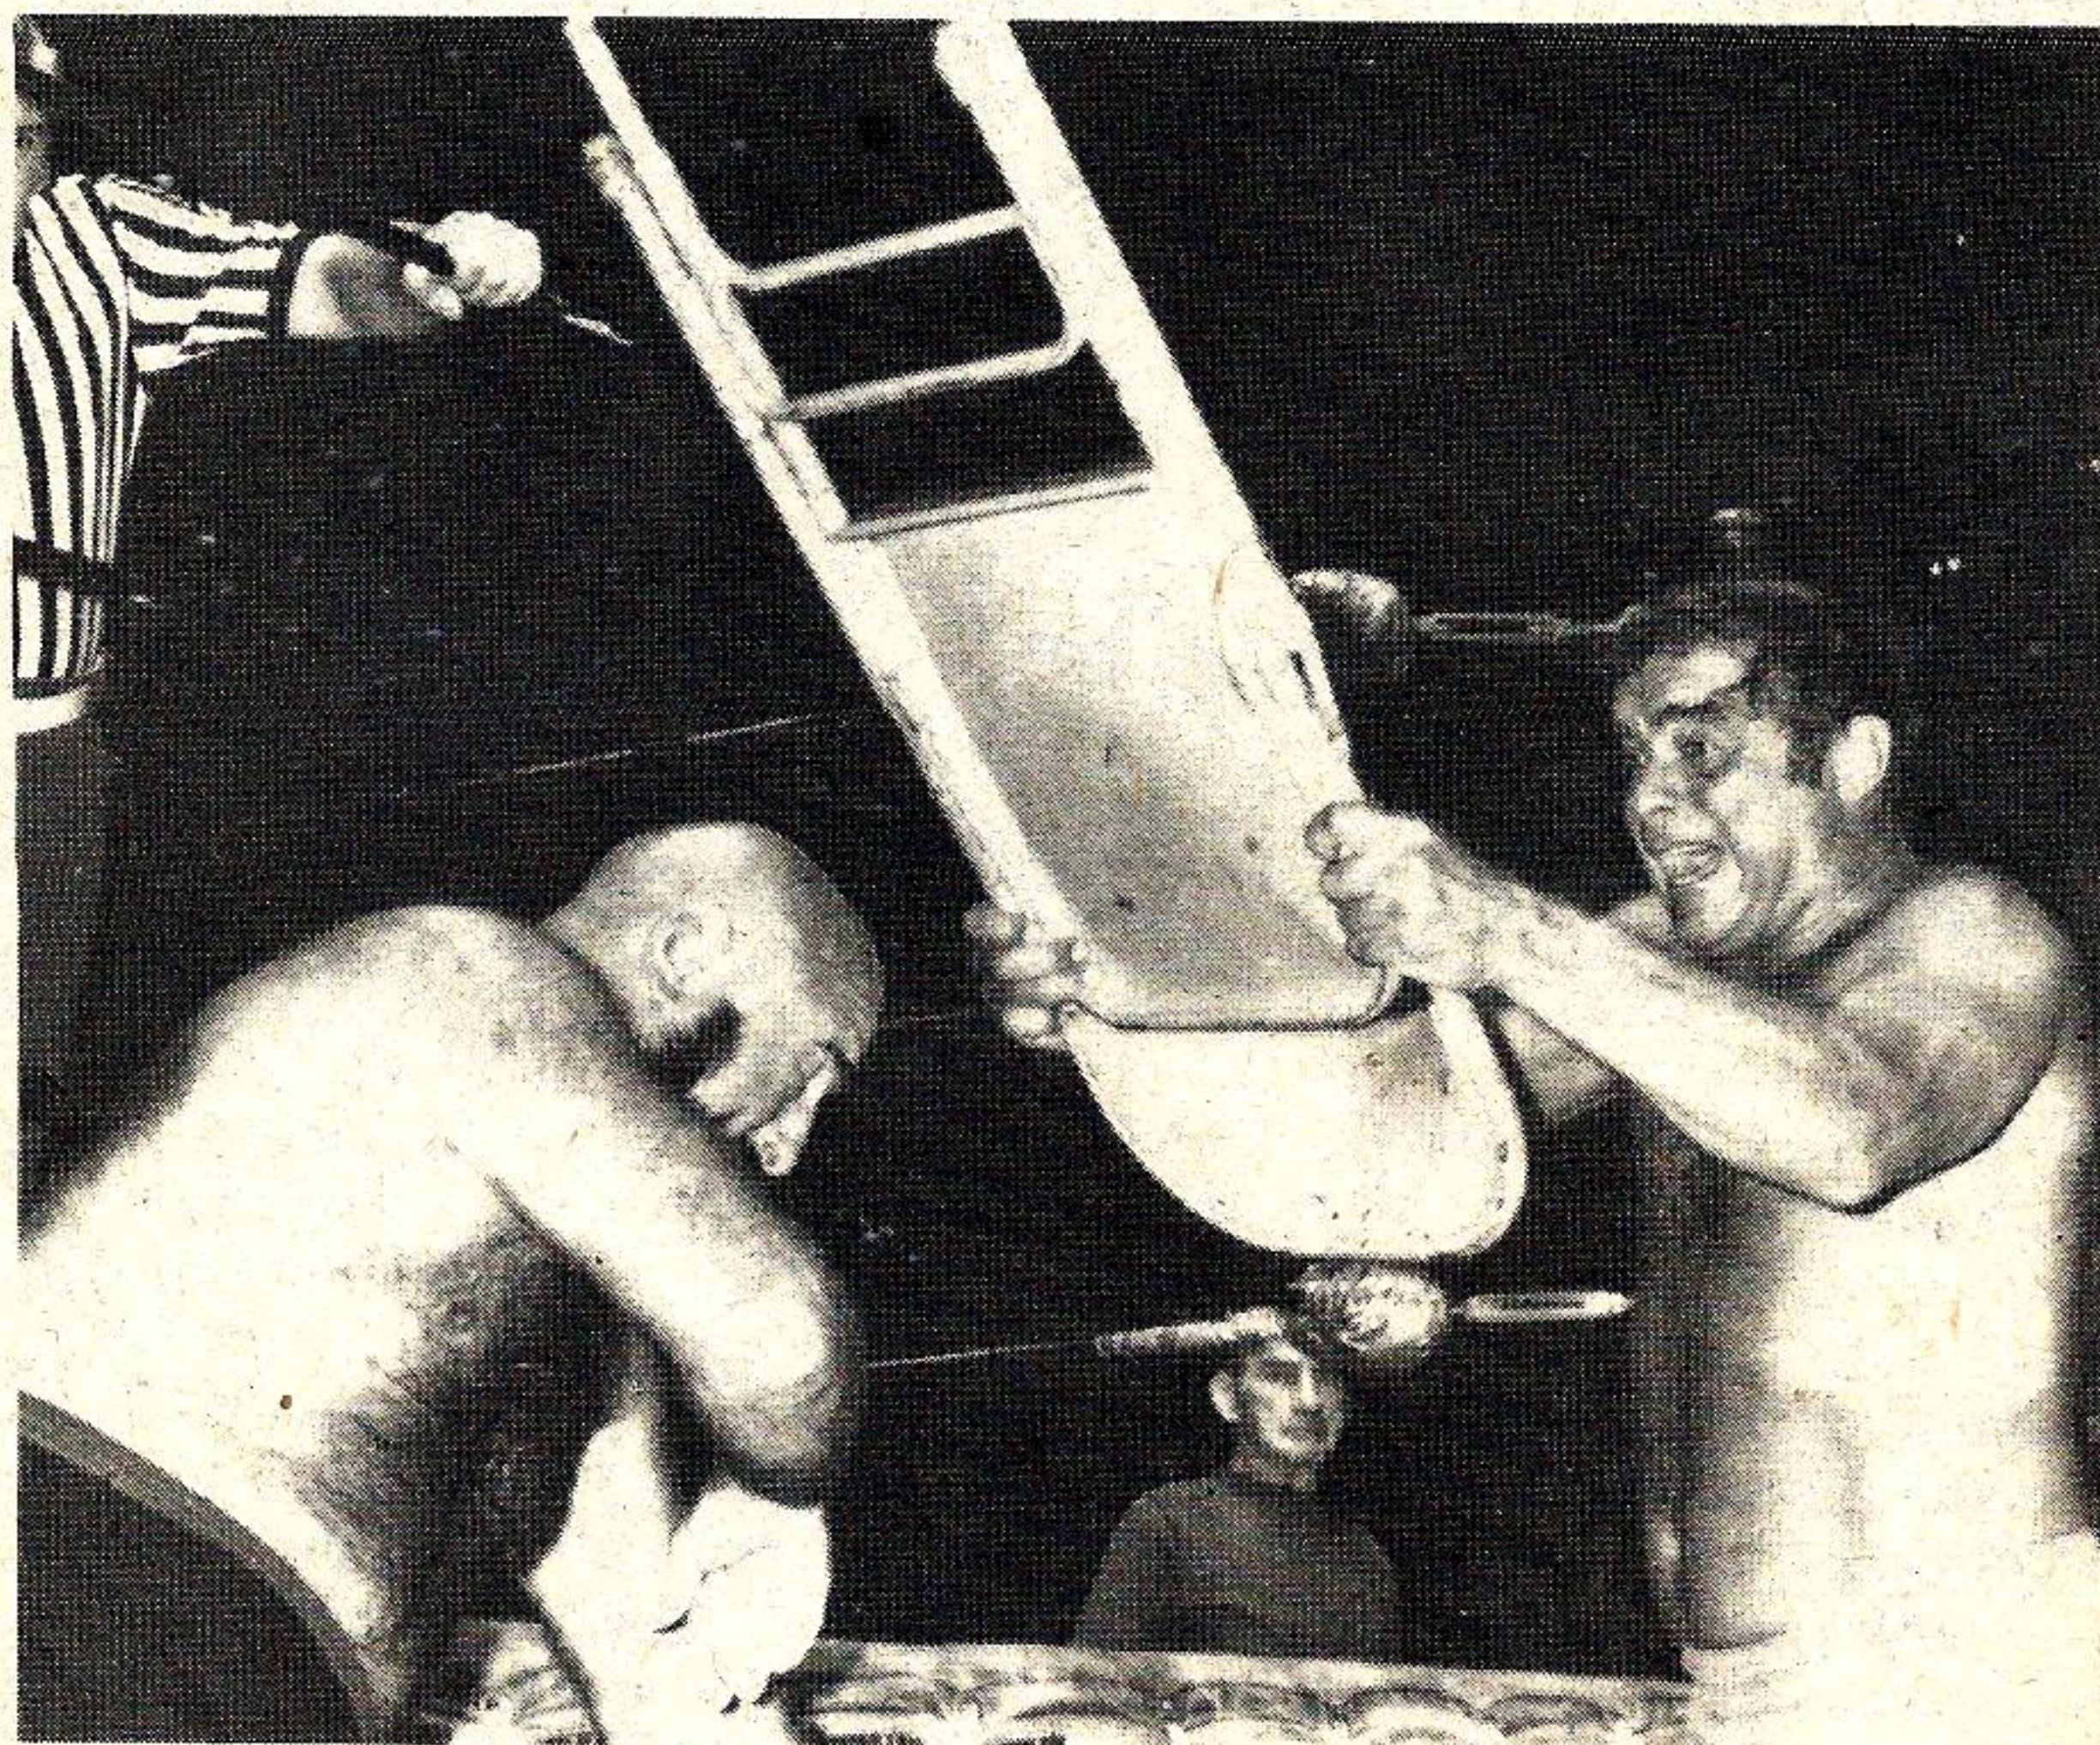

The cheers did strange things to Vachon. They made him rage even harder than usual. Even fans who had seen Mad Dog many times were stunned by the exhibition of wrestling cruelty.

No ring was big enough to contain this kind of brawling. It came as no surprise when the two men stumbled over the ropes. The fans rose joyously to their feet when they saw Tolos landing head-first onto the concrete. John could barely struggle to his feet.

Vachon had broken his fall perfectly. It hadn't hurt him at all. He saw his opponent stumbling around, groggy and scared. Tolos' professional mind told him he was in trouble—his aching body told him he was helpless. Like a badly wounded animal waiting for the kill, Tolos resigned himself to Vachon's attack.

Against the ropes, Mad Dog Vachon smashes John Tolos over the head with a chair (above). One of the many times the action spilled over the ropes and onto the concrete, Tolos returned the favor (below). The action returned to inside the ring, only to spill over time and time again. And each time Vachon got the upper hand, fans cheered him on, perhaps the only time in Mad Dog's career when he was the fan favorite. Mad Dog liked the cheers!

There are times when fire must be fought with fire. That's why Mad Dog Vachon was chosen to punish the hated John Tolos

THE VALIANTS -- CHEATING THEIR WAY TO ANOTHER WORLD TITLE

DIAGRAMS AND SCOUTING reports cover the large table. Pouring over them are "Handsome Jim" and "Luscious John" Valiant, studying each piece of paper as if it held the secrets of the universe. For the Valiants, perhaps it does.

A coffee pot constantly perks in a corner of the room, enabling the Valiants to put in 15 hour study sessions where they devise new and usually illegal stratagems. They hope these plans will lead them to their third tag team championship.

The Valiants hold the intensive skull sessions at least twice a week. The rest of the time they can be found working out in the gymnasium. Over and over and over again, they attempt to perfect newly devised maneuvers. It's a long and debilitating labor, totally out of character with the image the Valiants like to project. Those fans who know them simply as posturing braggarts don't know them at all.

This is not to say the conceit and cruelty is gone. When in front of wrestling press or fans, the Valiants become their familiar reprehensible selves. During a recent press conference they called in Chicago's finest hotel, they expounded upon their greatness—at great length.

"You're eating the best food in the best hotel in the world," Jim Valiant declared, "and daddy, you're listening to the best tag team in the world. We are the most beautiful and most talented. Someday, you can tell your grandchildren you saw us and it may save you from being put away in a nursing home. The wonder of us is that strong and that immortal!"

"Many of you in this room are familiar to us, have written about us many times. We realize a lot of what you've written is just the result of jealousy. You criticize what you envy.

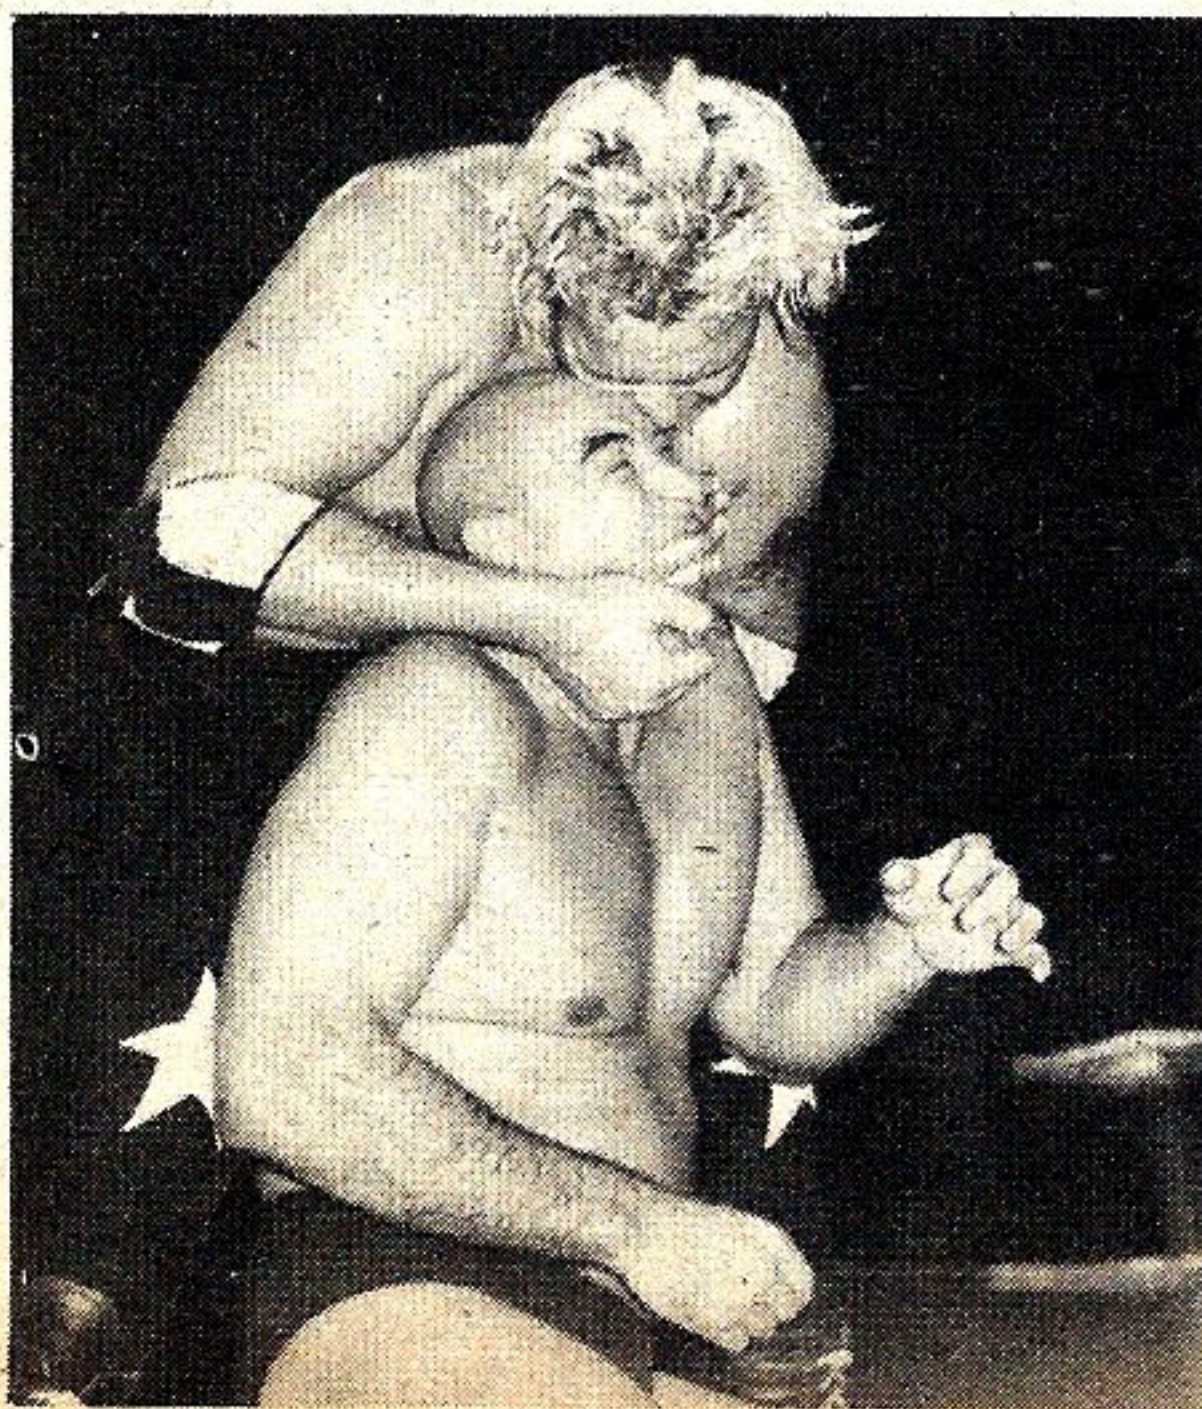

With their usual cruel determination, "Handsome Jim" and "Luscious John" Valiant have set their sights on the A.W.A. tag team title. They've done it before. Can they do it again?

Bloody and battered, it is a happy Valiant tag team who are the new W.W.A. champs (left).

We're so wonderful, though, we're willing to let bygones be bygones.

"A lot later, if we feel like it, we'll answer your stupid questions. Now, while you eat our food and we give you an excuse to get out of your shabby offices, you're going to listen to us. Do you understand?"

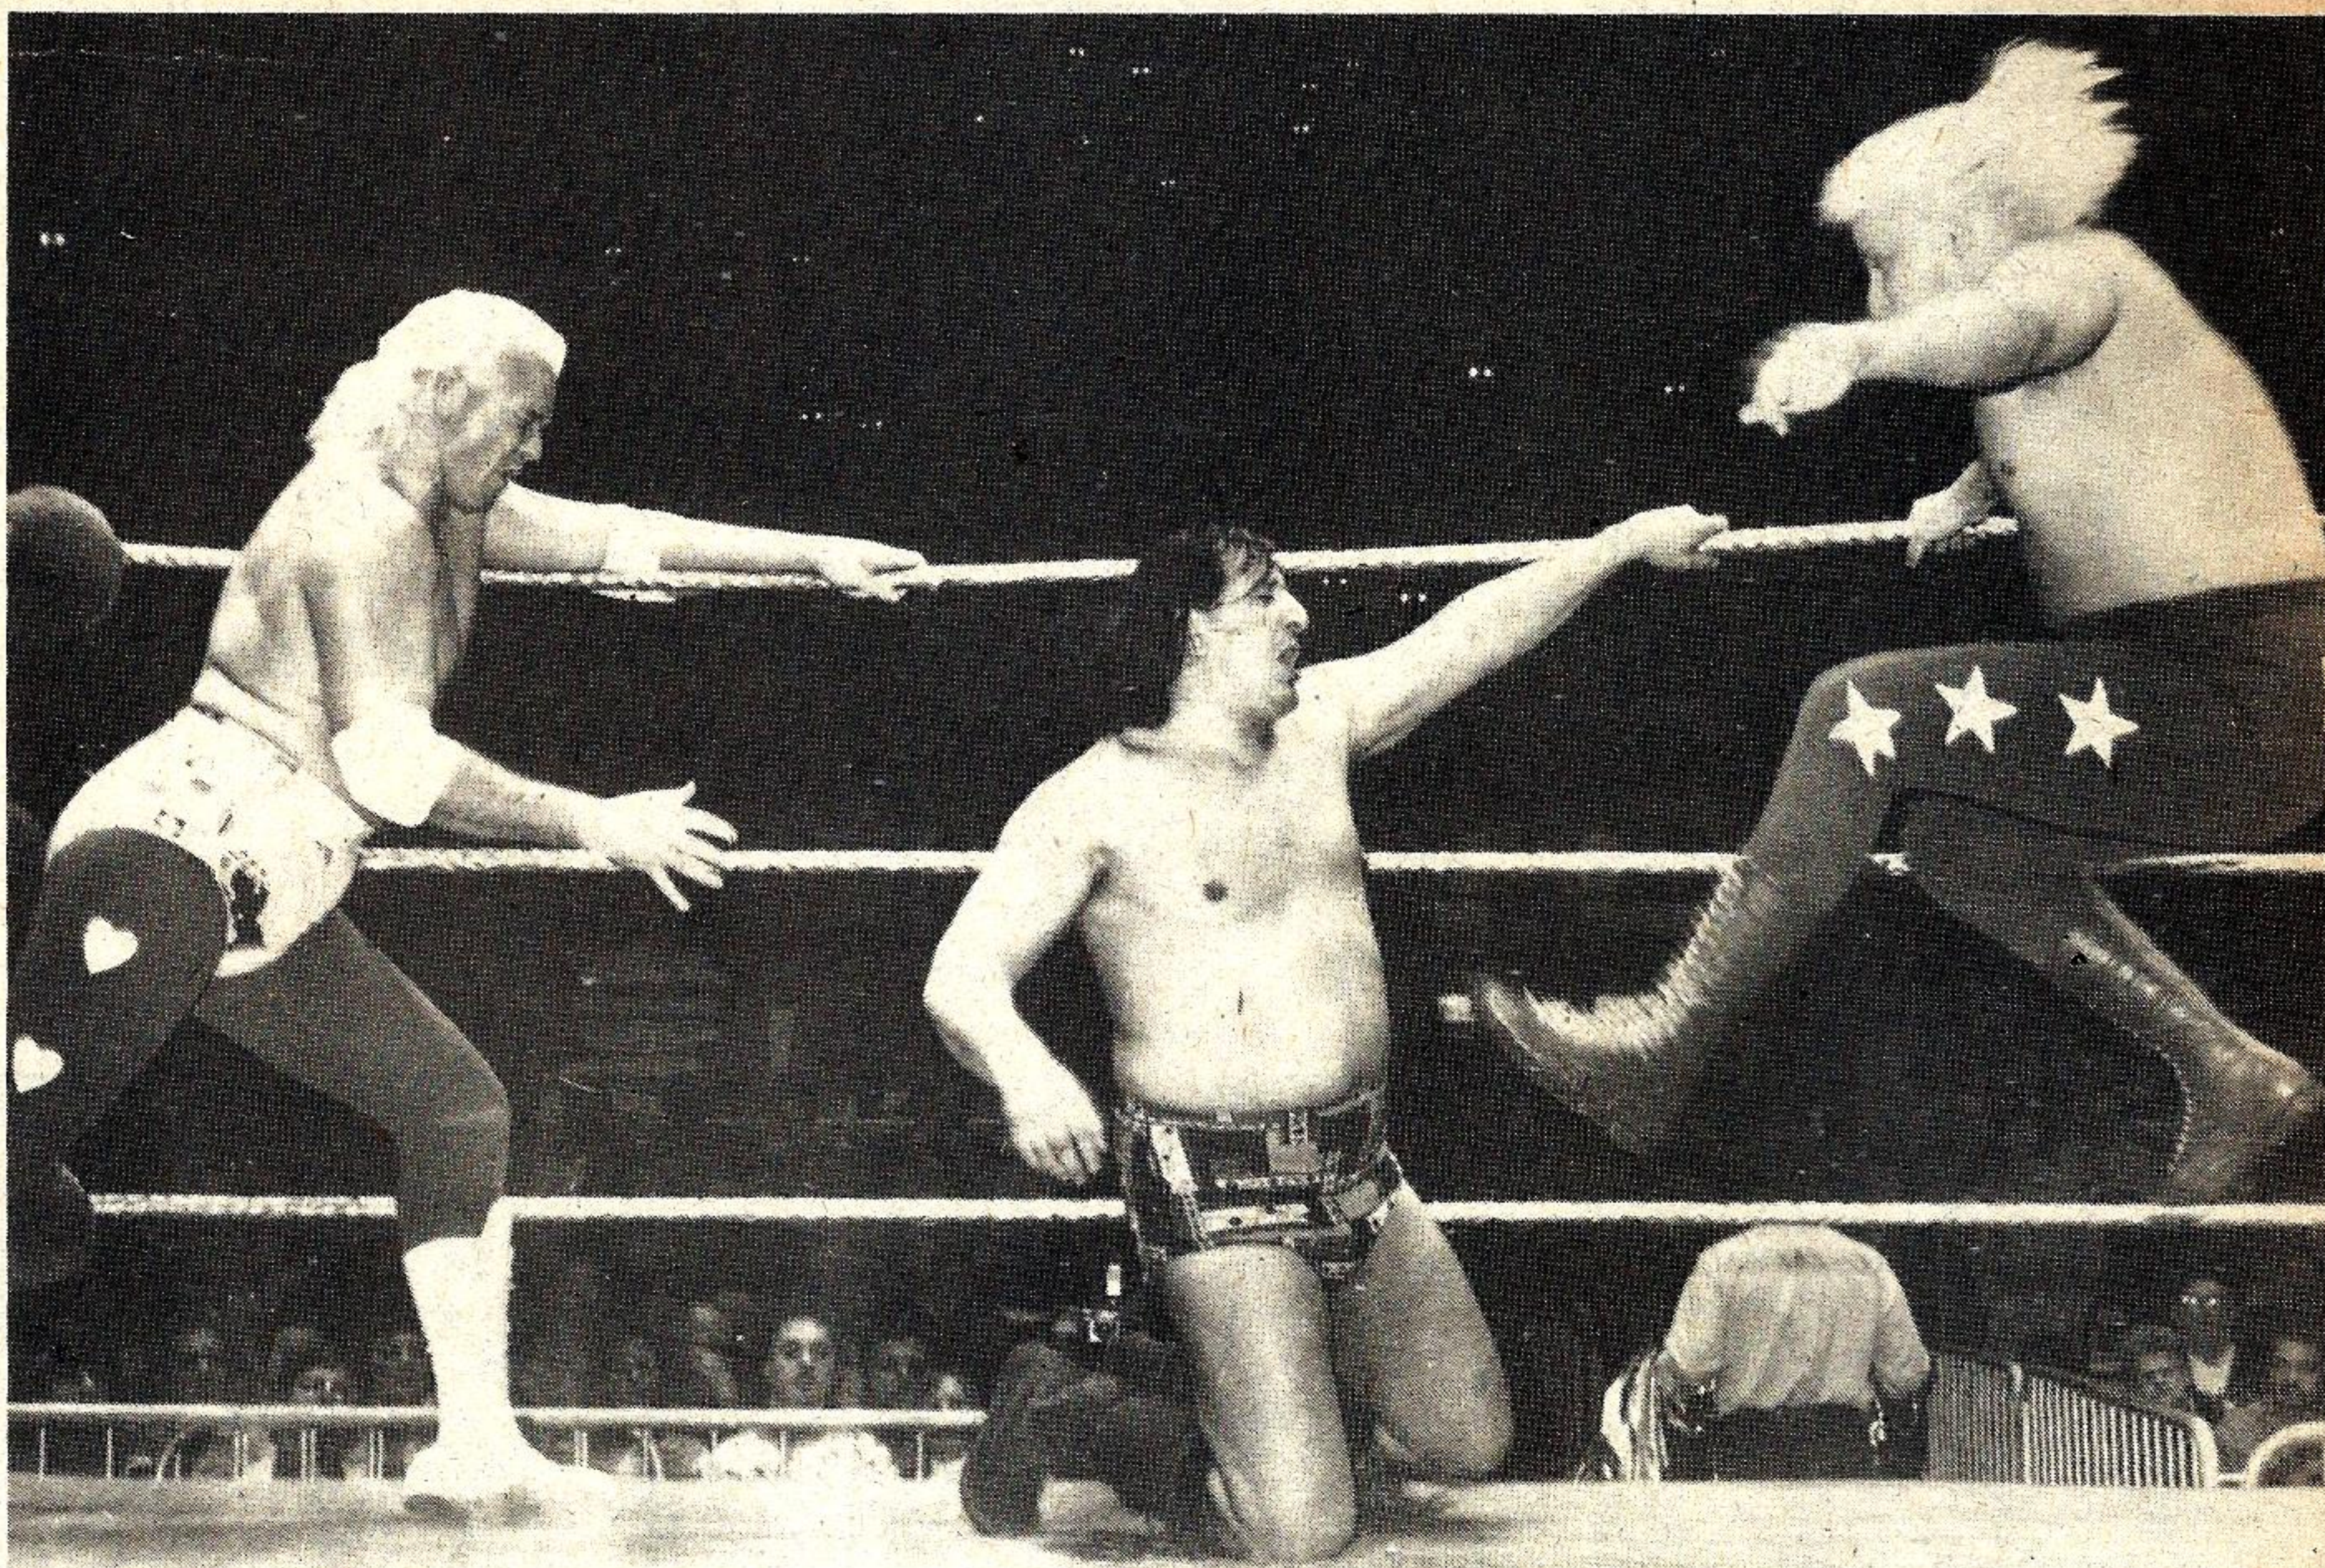

Silence followed the question—most reporters were still helping themselves to the buffet. They knew Valiant's raving would continue for hours no matter what happened. And they were right. Jim happily kept talking although no one seemed to be paying much attention. He was just happy to talk into the microphone and hearing his voice amplified.

"All things come in threes," Jim observed, "and we've only won two tag team titles. Therefore, we have another title to win. After looking over the world, we decided the only real challenge for us would be in the A.W.A. So we've come to this area to get this title. Be assured, we will!"

At this point, John stepped to the microphone.

"I want to tell you all," he shouted, "some of our past accomplishments, in case you've forgotten. I'm going to tell you about the greatest era in W.W.A. wrestling, when the Valiants were its champion. I'm going to remind you about our great manager at the time, the magnificent Bobby Heenan. Then we'll cover more recent history, when we ruled the W.W.W.F. under the guidance of the one and only Capt. Lou Albano, a man whose name Above: Chief Jay Strongbow is savagely doubleteamed by John and Jim during the Valiants' reign of terror as W.W.W.F. tag team champions. Even men of Strongbow's caliber wound up bloody and bruised! means 'champions!' "

John droned on for almost half an hour with his version of recent wrestling history. He went into length about the titles the Valiants had won and the teams they'd beaten. To no one's surprise, he failed to mention the kind of tactics it took to defeat these teams.

John's bragging began to get under the skin of many reporters. Some of the wrestlers John bragged about crippling were their friends. Memories of bloody opponents, viciously and illegally battered senseless, made the food taste lousy. Most of the reporters came to eat the Valiants' food and ignore the speeches. However, John made it impossible for any man of integrity to stay silent.

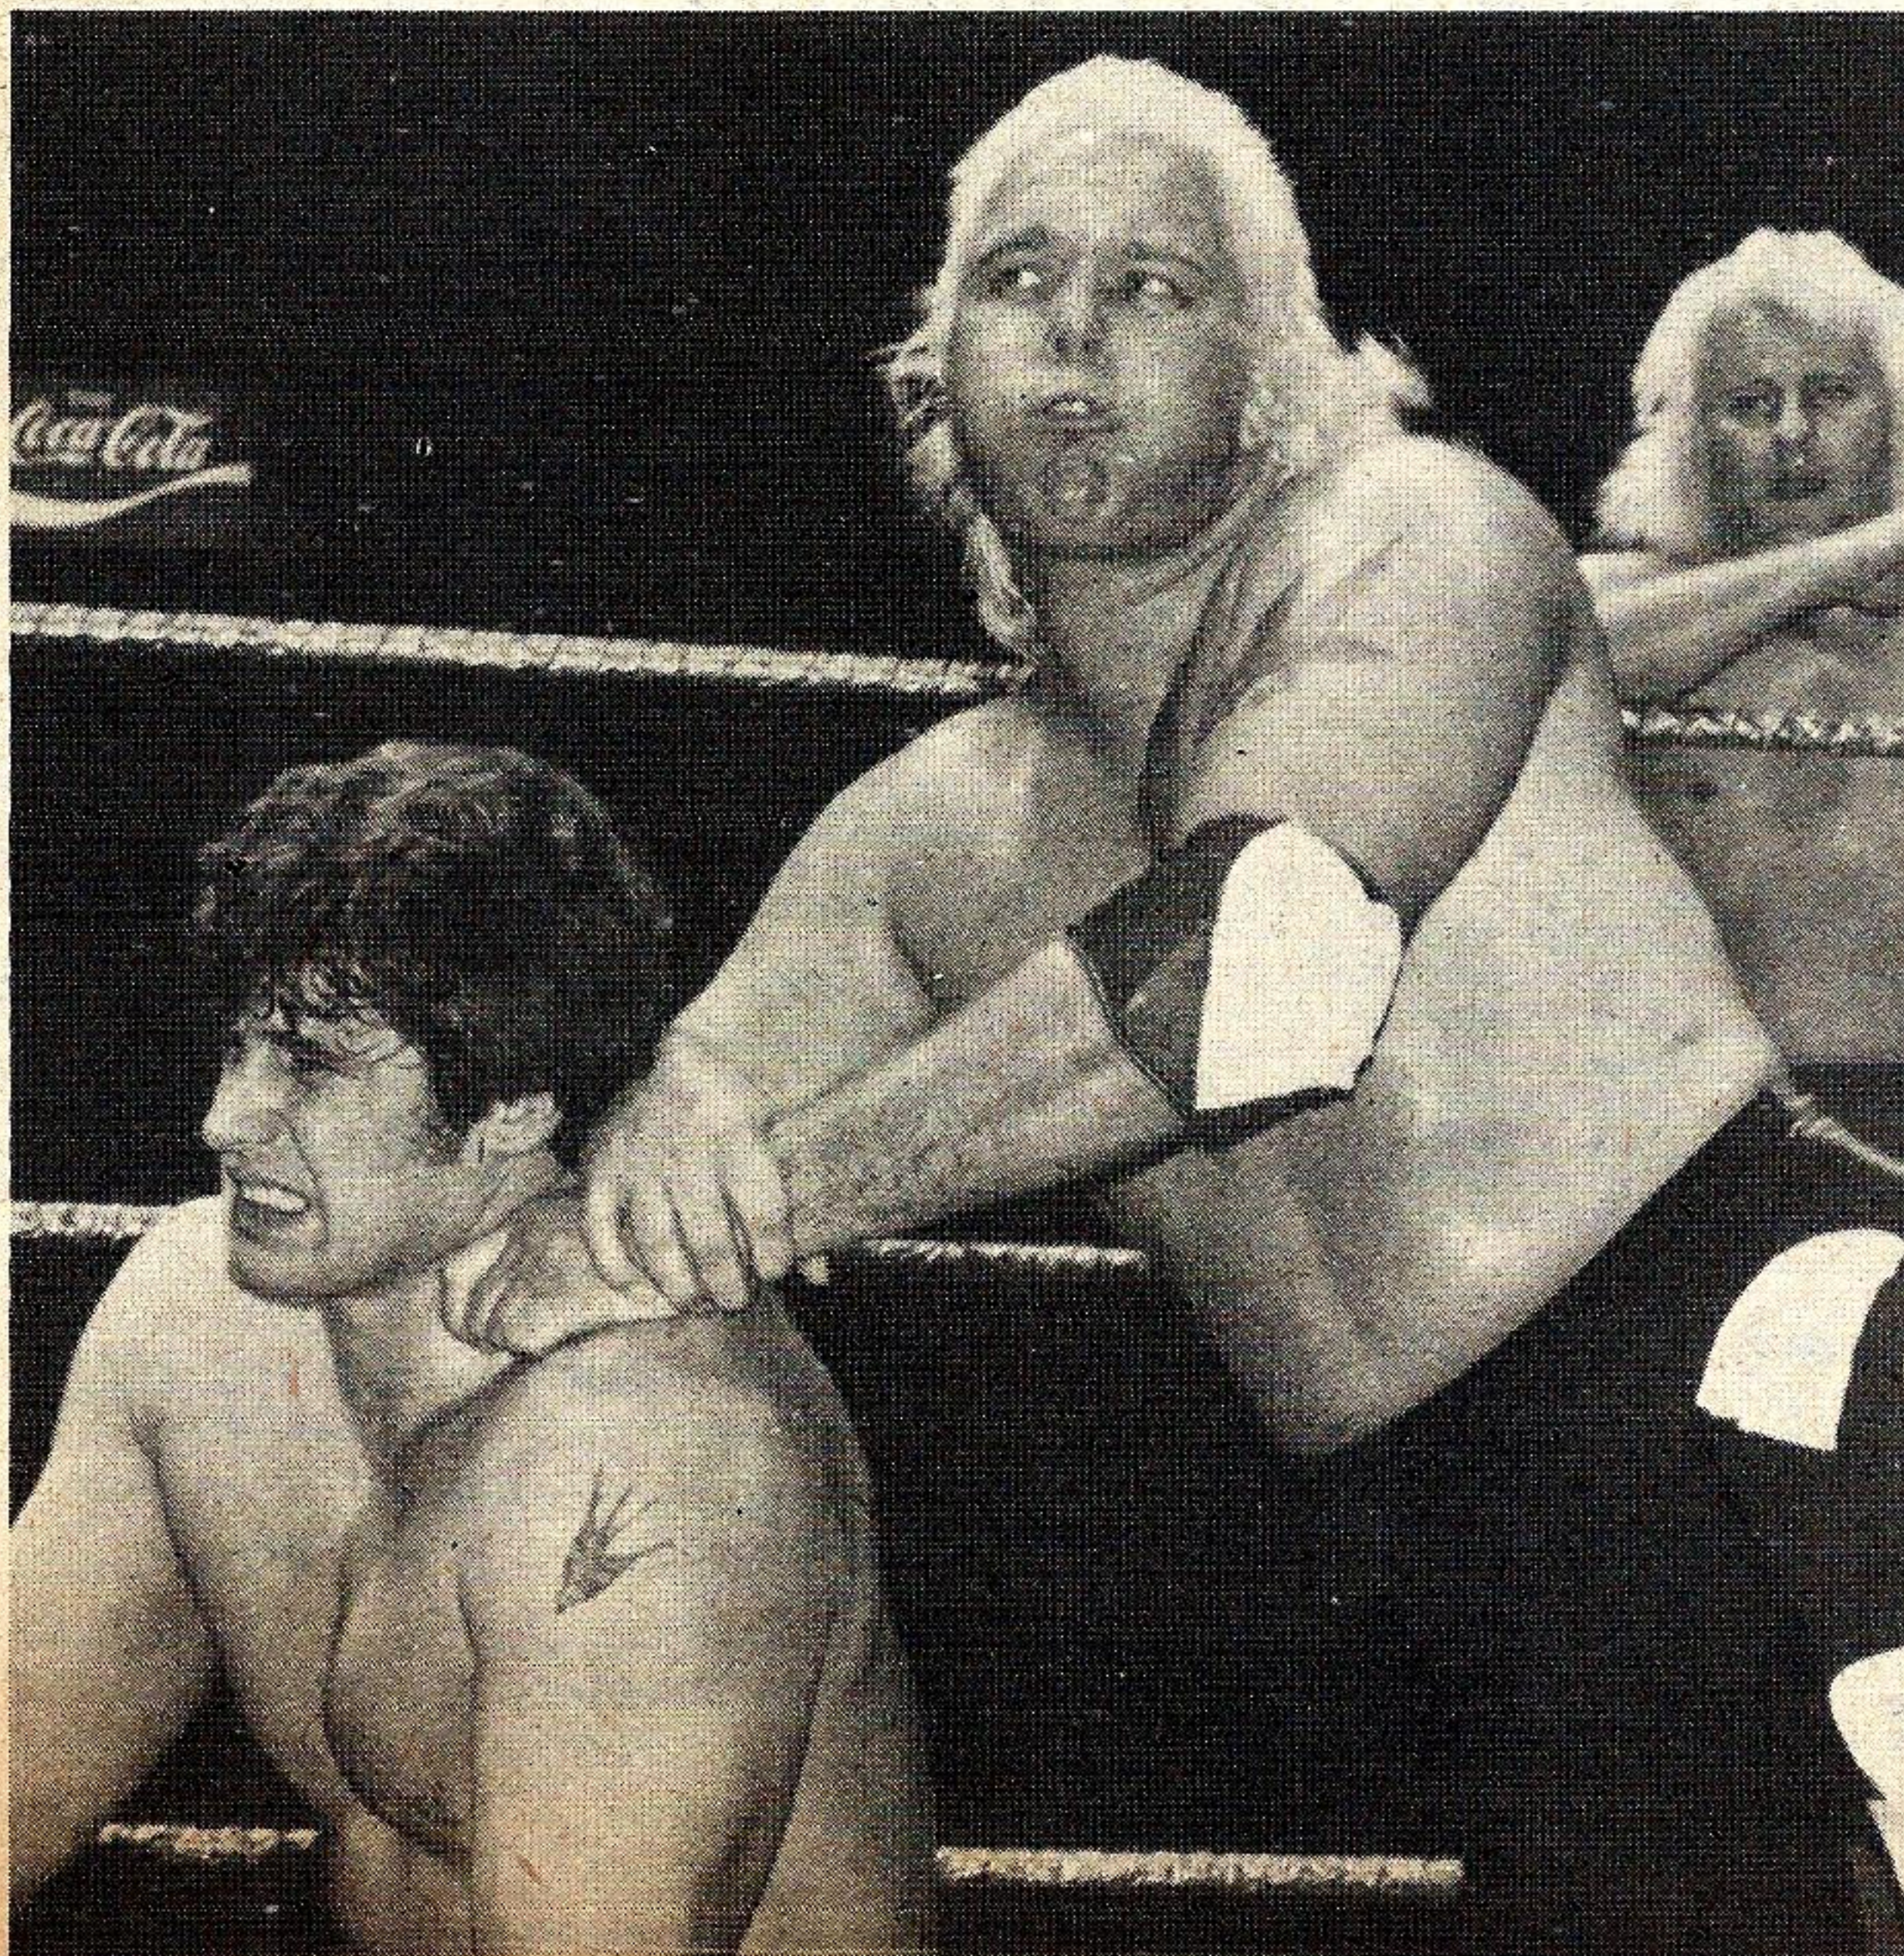

"Will you start using legal tactics?" one reporter snapped, interrupting John's monologue.

"We've never used anything but legal tactics!" Jim angrily shouted. "We wouldn't even know how to do an illegal tactic if we wanted. We're so good that we don't have to break any rules! No one can name an instance when we used a dirty tactic!"

Immediately, the room exploded with reporters' shouts. They shouted names at the pair, men who had been ruthlessly mauled by the Valiants' horribly effective cheating. They yelled back times when the distracted referee couldn't see the Valiants mercilessly doubleteam a helpless opponent. Each reporter cited many different examples. Every match reminded someone else of at least four others. The Valiants were first stunned by the shouts, then angry.

"You miserable ingrates!" Jim snarled. "We bring you here—into more splendor than you'll ever see again—and then you insult us! None of you are ever coming here again! Have you got that straight! Never again!"

For the next 20 minutes the Valiants shouted at the reporters and the reporters shouted back. Finally, it dawned on the press the Valiants were enjoying this. Getting people angry is what they enjoy best—second only to illegally bashing opponents!

The Valiants delighted in hearing reporters shout the names of men they'd beaten senseless. It reminded them of how well they've accomplished their goals. They don't really care what anyone calls them.

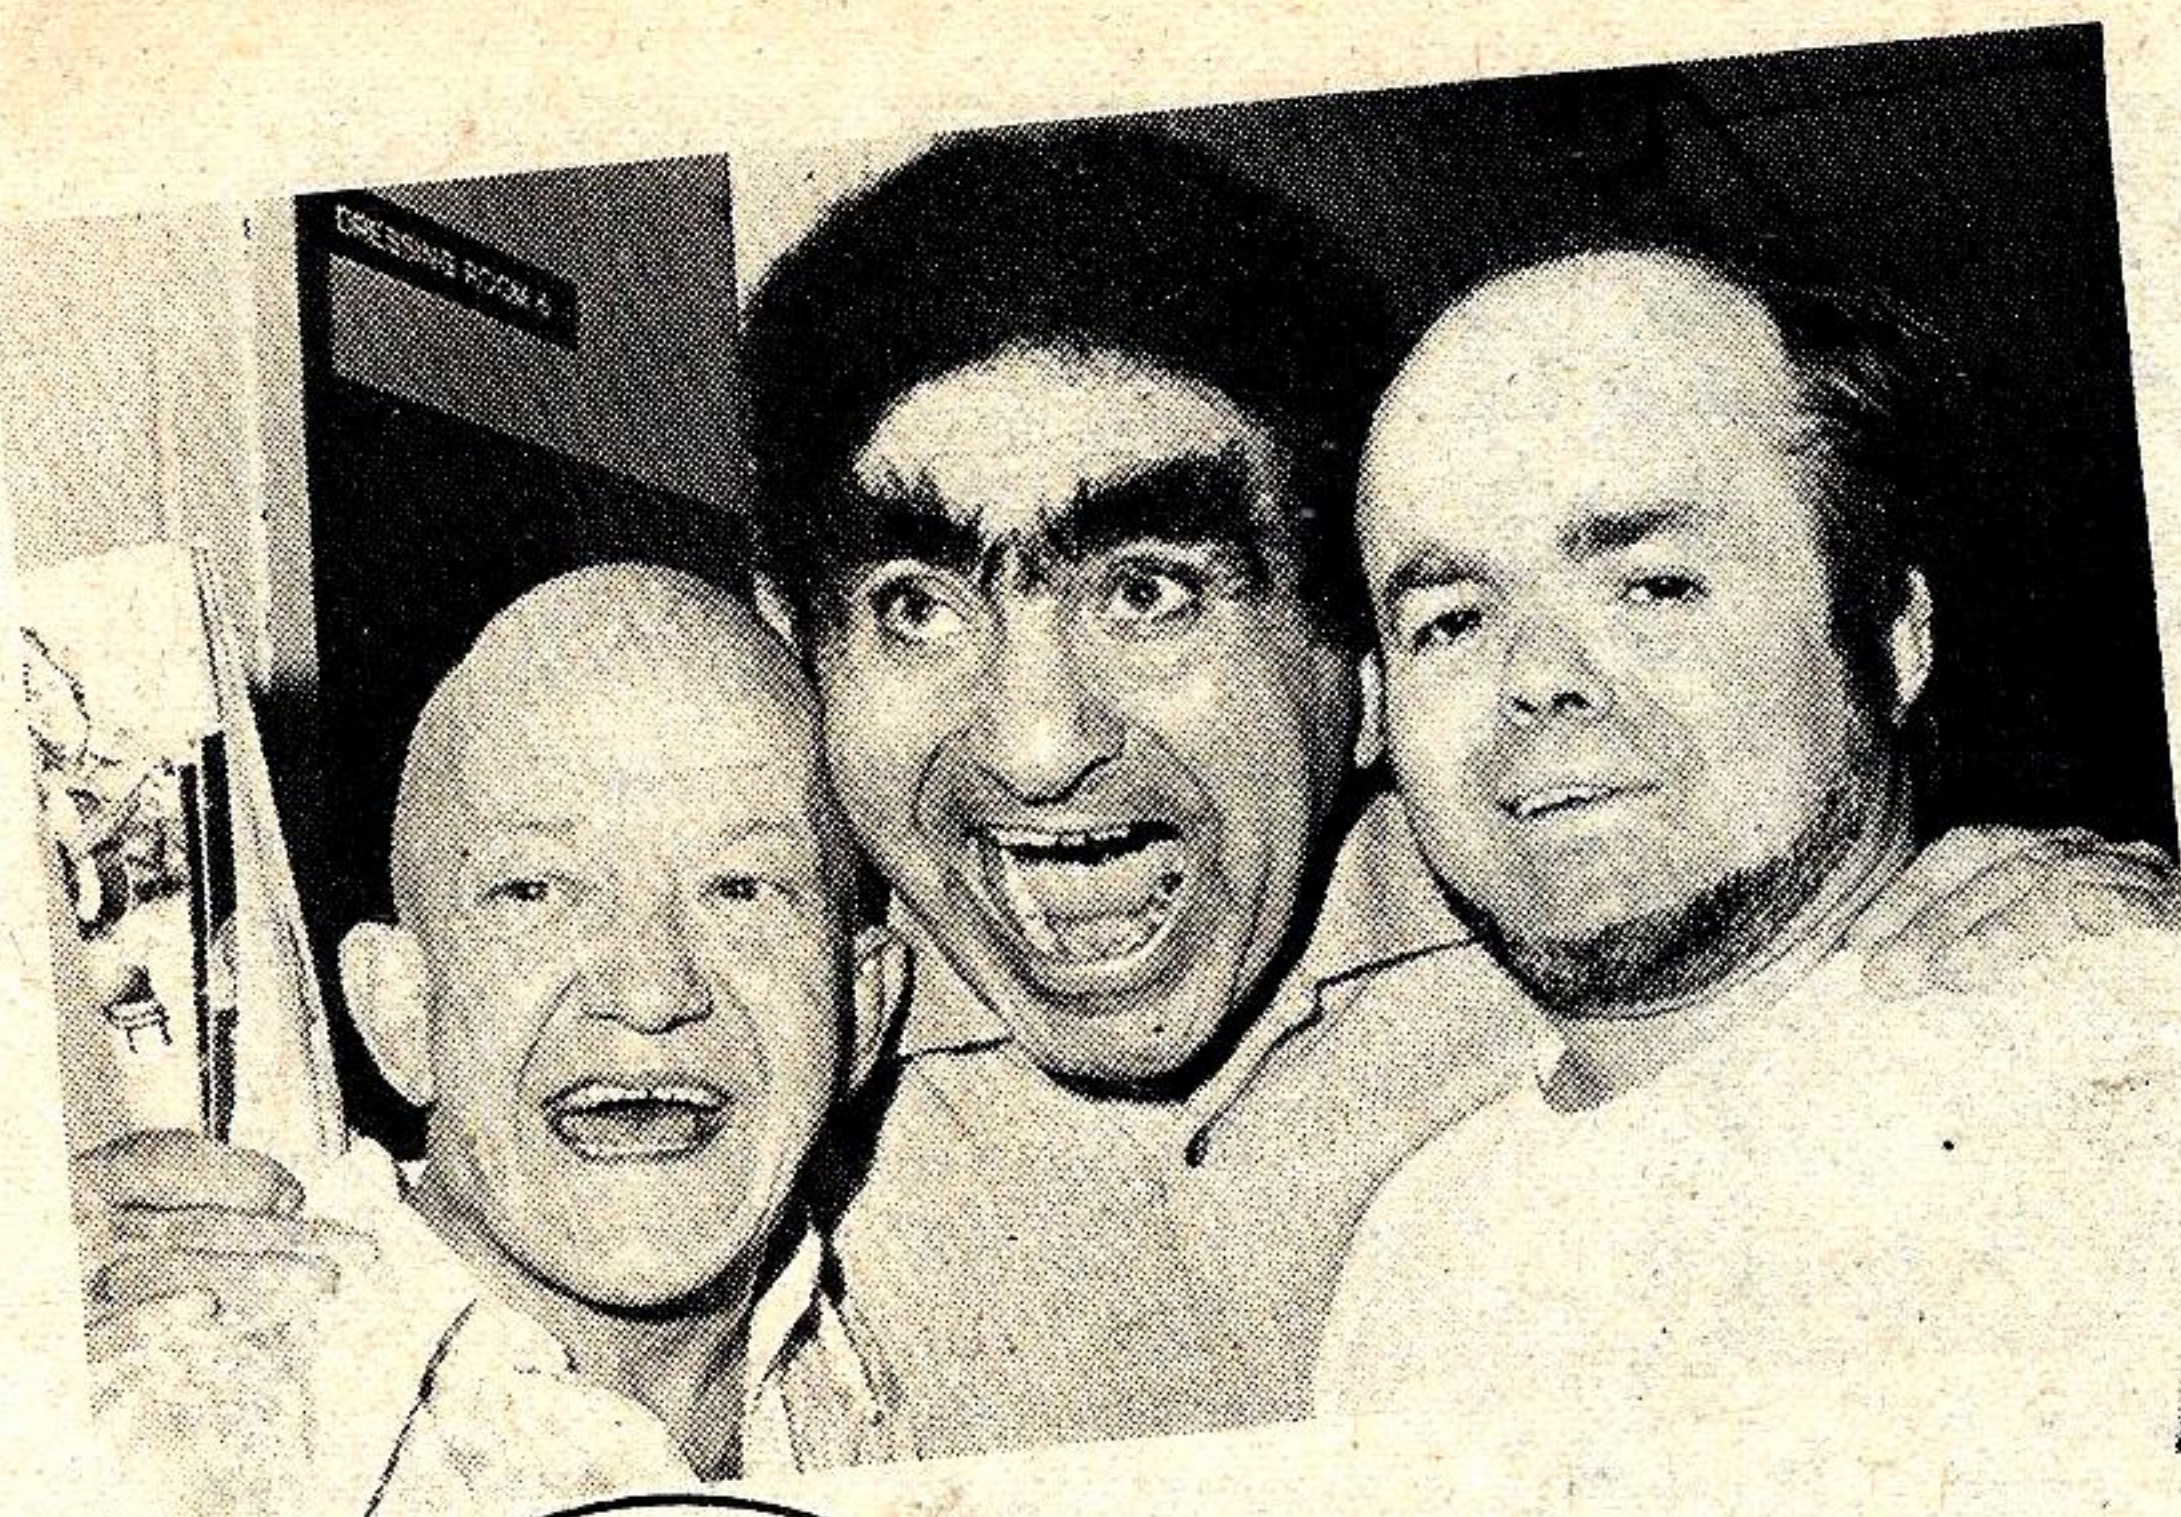

At times, people forget the Valiants know they cheat, despite what they say in public. They practice for months to perfect a single illegal maneuver. They know it's illegal. All they care about is its effectiveness. Instead of insulting them, the reporters were actually praising them.

Later that week, the Valiants showed everyone they weren't willing to rest on their laurels. Against Jim Brunzell and Greg Gagne, the pair showed they are still devising new and cruel ways to defeat opponents.

They also revealed they still have a lot of work to do as they perfect these maneuvers. Time and time again Gagne and Brunzell were able to escape and even reverse the holds. The Valiants rarely fell back on their most famous holds, preferring to test their new moves under battle conditions. The match proved they still have some work to do.

However, one can rest assured the Valiants will work out all the kinks in their new strategies. Despite their public utterances, these men are dedicated grapplers. They won't rest until they're invincible.

The Valiants are very serious men. And they are seriously determined to win their third tag team title. They've mangled many fine men on their way to winning two titles. There will be many more mauled athletes as the Valiants try for title number three. □

SKY
LOW
LOW—

A GIANT AMONG MIDGETS

He stands four feet tall and the wrinkles are cutting into his face. In his chosen profession—there is nothing left for him to win. He's already won it all and conquered every obstacle. He is truly one of the greats of our sport!

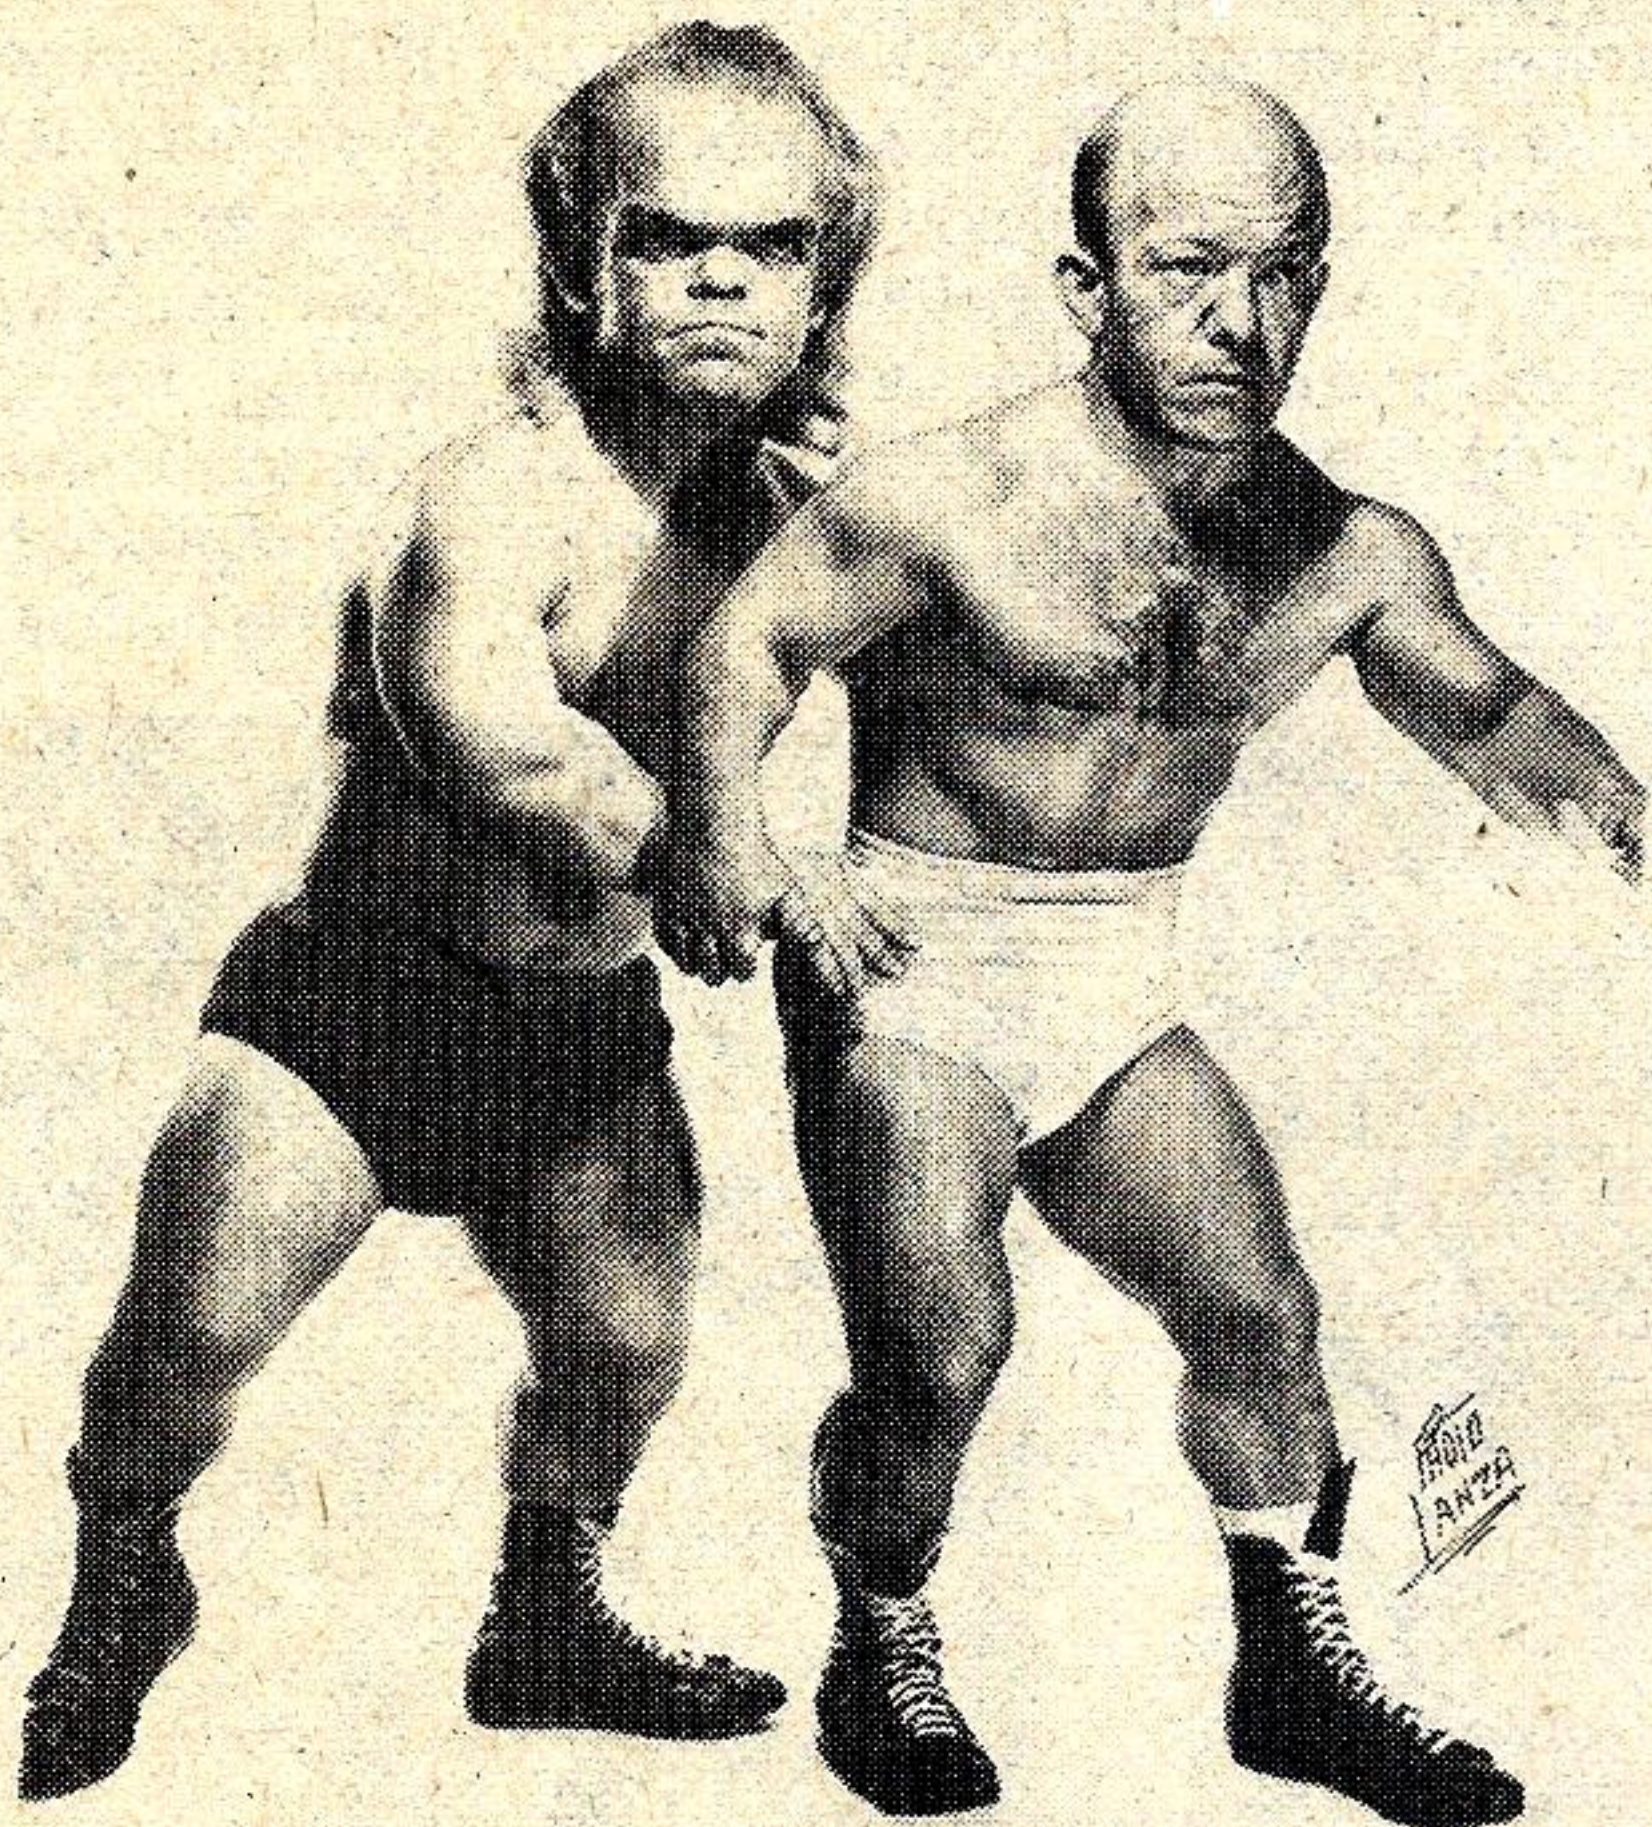

ALTHOUGH SKY LOW Low is only four feet tall and weighs 89 pounds, he's considered the biggest man in wrestling!

"I look up to him," joked Little Brutus, one of Sky's closest friends and his tag team partner, who himself is just a fraction of an inch smaller than Sky.

"What I really mean," Brutus continued, "is that everyone in the business looks up to Sky because of what he stands for. He was one of the pioneers in midget wrestling. He helped pave the way for the rest of us."

It's almost as big as they are, and Sky and Little Brutus (right) are justly proud of the Midget Tag Team Championship trophy they possess. Sky admits adopting his style from the famous Fuzzy Cupid (below), Sky's tag team partner and one of midget wrestling's all-time superstars.

"Wait a second," Sky shot back, "I'm not that old! I admit I helped the midget cause in wrestling, but I wasn't the first. I think you were Brutus!" Sky and Brutus chuckled.

Chuckling can be a hard thing for a midget. But Sky admits "I never considered being a midget a handicap. As a matter of fact, I have more friends than anyone else I know."

Sky is a lovable character outside the ring, but once he gets inside, watch out! He's always been a roughhouse wrestler.

"I didn't start out that way," he admitted. "I learned that from an old friend, Fuzzy Cupid. When we used to team up I always wound up getting a real beating because I tried to stick to the rules. Fuzzy never took a beating. So I decided to try his style and it worked for me. Fuzzy and me won the midget tag team title and a few years later I won the world title from Little Beaver."

As rough as Sky is, you'd assume most people would hate him.

"They don't," said Wahoo McDaniel, a close friend of Sky's. "Wherever Sky wrestles he's the center of attraction in the dressing room. He's a great story teller. Whenever we're in the same room, he'll hop up on my lap and tell me funny stories. He calls them 'tall tales.' See what I mean? The guy is really with it. His size makes no difference at all. He's not self-conscious at all."

"I'll say," interrupted Tony Marion. "He doesn't realize his size. I've wrestled in a mixed tag team match where I'm supposed to wrestle the big guy and he's supposed to take on the midget. But not Sky. He's got to take on the big guy. And you know something? He does a lot better than some big guys I know."

Sky admits his size does present some problems. But most of them are funny.

"I remember one time I went to the airport with Haystacks Calhoun," Sky recalled. "He's 601 pounds. The airline wanted to charge him double fare because of his size. So, naturally, I figured I should only pay half fare. When I told this to the ticket clerk she said, 'Forget it' and we both paid the regular fare."

"There is one really funny thing we midgets can do. I hope you won't think it rude but I've got to tell you."

"Sometimes when you're traveling you have to stop and go to the john. In many cities they only have those 10 cent pay toilets. Well, one time I didn't have a dime and believe me I wasn't about to go and beg for one. So what did I do? I crawled under the stall door and got in for free. You should have seen the look on the other men's faces in the washroom. It was hysterical. I'd like to see Calhoun try it. Ha, Ha!"

Does it annoy Sky when people look at him "weird" because of his size?

"Heck no," Sky said. "I realize I'm the center of attention. I've

FOR EVERY PROFESSIONAL athlete there exists a goal, an unrealized ambition which drives him past the disappointments and grueling existence. For Billy Robinson, his quest is to defeat A.W.A. champion Verne Gagne.

When Billy migrated to these shores from Great Britain, promoters from all the associations pleaded for his services. There was never any doubt in Billy's mind, though, as to where he wanted to go. He quickly signed with the A.W.A. (many believe for less money than another association offered him). Money wasn't as important as wrestling against Verne Gagne.

"When you discuss great wrestlers," Billy explains, "there's no real way to prove one is greater than the other. Once grapplers pass a certain point of expertise, all you can go by is a gut feeling. My gut feeling is that Verne Gagne is the most graceful and accomplished of all the champions.

"Verne has become a symbol to me

Even when he manages to capture Verne Gagne in an excruciating Boston crab (above left) or a painful backbreaker (above right), Billy Robinson can't seem to defeat the great A.W.A. titleholder.

WHY BILLY ROBINSON WILL NEVER DEFEAT VERNE GAGNE

of the degree of continual excellence unequaled by any other athlete. I wouldn't have been as proud of defeating Brisco, Sammartino, or Mascaras as I will be when I defeat Gagne."

For several years, Robinson has pursued his goal of taking Verne Gagne's title. For several years, Robinson has failed.

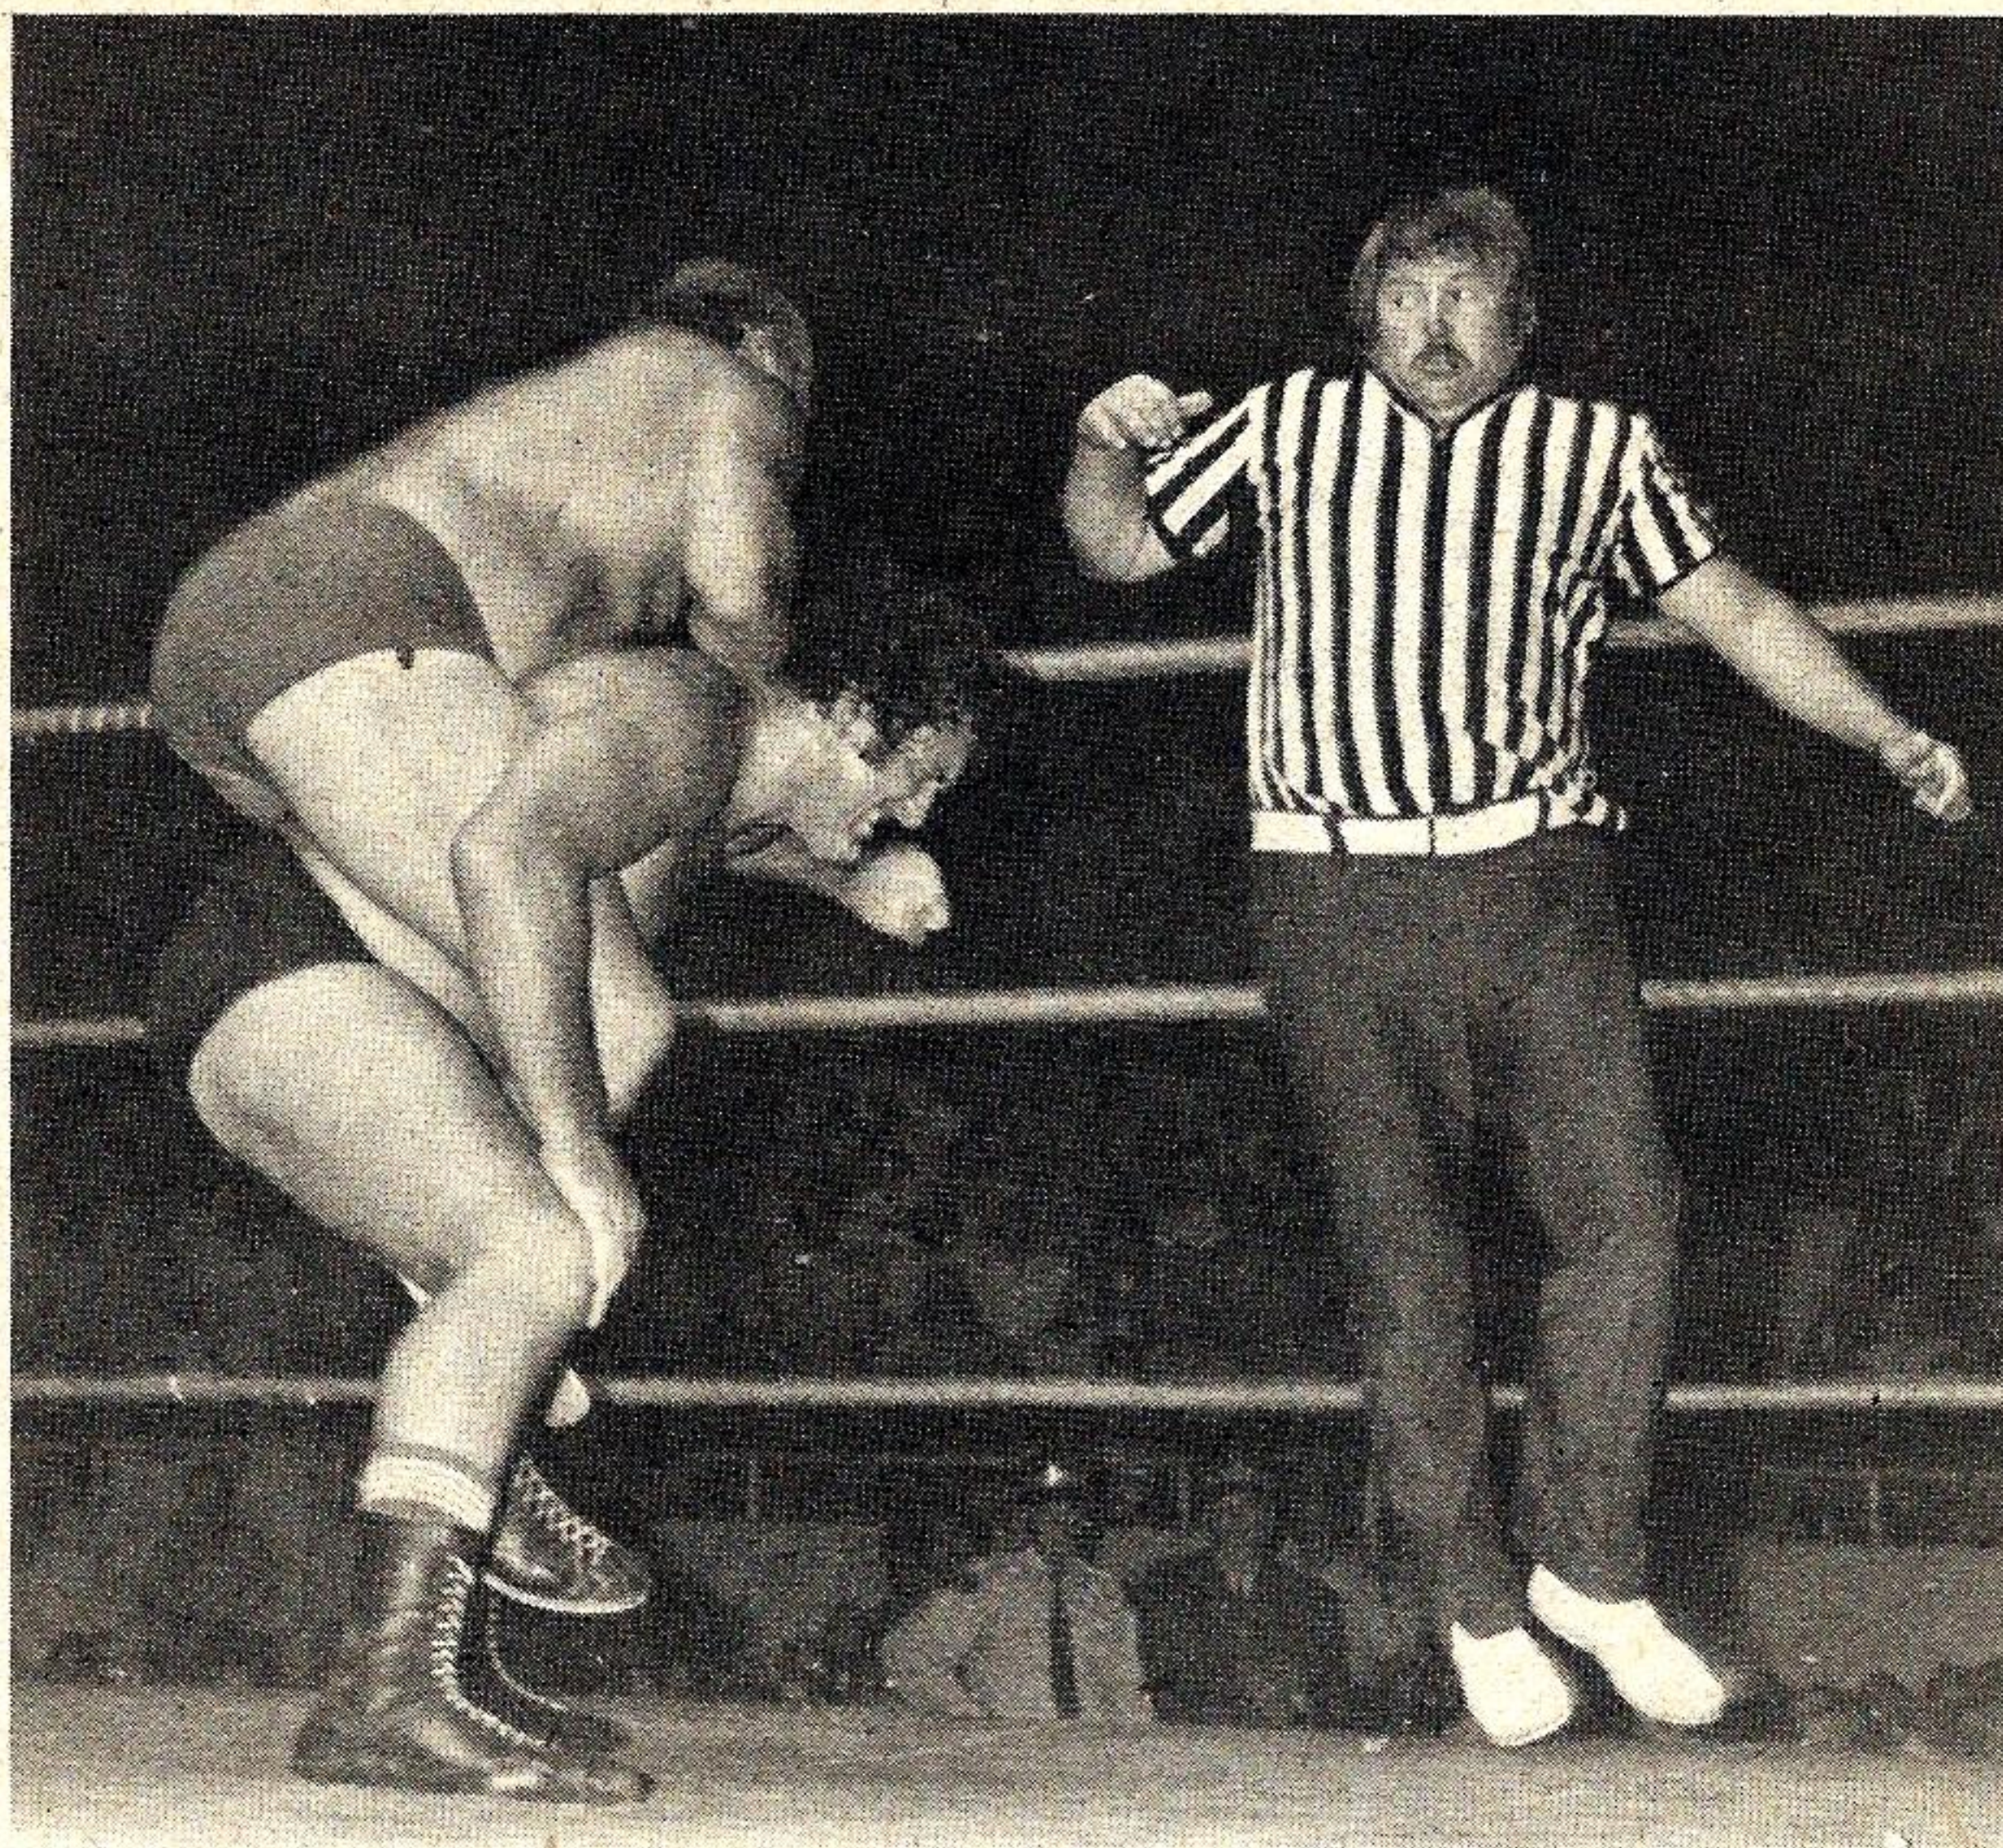

"I don't think any less of Gagne's skills," Robinson declares, "but I do think less of Verne as a person. The man is ruthless and unscrupulous in keeping the title. He'll take advantage of any technicality to retain the belt. He doesn't care if he defends it honorably, just as long as he's got it after the match is over.

"Verne is still the man to beat. Now, I want to defeat him more than ever. I've just got to use more guile when I

Millions of fans all over the world have thrilled to Billy Robinson's attempt to wrest the A.W.A. crown from Verne Gagne. Has Billy's quest finally ended—in failure?

Above: Billy catches Verne with a great kneedrop. Right: Billy is ecstatic when he thinks he is the new A.W.A. champ. A few hours later, the belt was taken away on a technicality.

Above: Verne has Billy in great pain as his powerful legs squeeze Robinson around the chest. Right: It takes all of Gagne's great courage not to submit as he falls victim to Robinson's version of a half Boston crab, guaranteed to make most men scream in agony!

wrestle against him. His ploys are getting more and more shoddy the longer we wrestle each other. Soon, he'll run out of ways to avoid losing.

"I still believe Verne has some vestige of professional pride. There are some moments when I see a reminder of the man I once admired so deeply. I think he'll take a loss rather than do anything which will totally alienate his fans. If I didn't believe that, I wouldn't bother."

There are many who think Billy should stop bothering. They note how bitter Robinson has become; a dangerous condition for any scientific wrestler. No one blames Billy for his anger, it's only natural. However, it can only serve to injure the man's sensibilities.

"Billy," says his friend, Wahoo McDaniel, "has been banging his head against the wall. His craving for Gagne's title has become more than a rivalry; it's his only reason for wrestling. He develops new skills only if they can be effective against Verne. He doesn't care there are hundreds of other fine wrestlers, all of whom have to have special consideration. Billy is caring less and less.

"I've seen this happen to a lot of guys, both in wrestling and football. They start seeing one guy as the guy they've got to beat—and they get destroyed by everyone else.

"This hasn't happened to Billy yet; I hope it never does. Billy is good for wrestling; this means that he's good for me. If only for selfish reasons, I want to see him realize there's more to wrestling than beating Verne Gagne.

"I don't blame Verne," Wahoo adds, "for using any technicality to save his title. We're all professionals and it's our business to know every possible way to win. We love what we're doing, but I don't know anyone who has yet turned down a paycheck.

"I'm sure if Billy wasn't so involved with this quest, he'd be a lot more sensible about this whole thing."

Most of Billy's friends use phrases like "losing his senses" to describe Robinson. Professionals shouldn't allow themselves to get emotional about their matches, at least not to where it interferes with their professional intelligence.

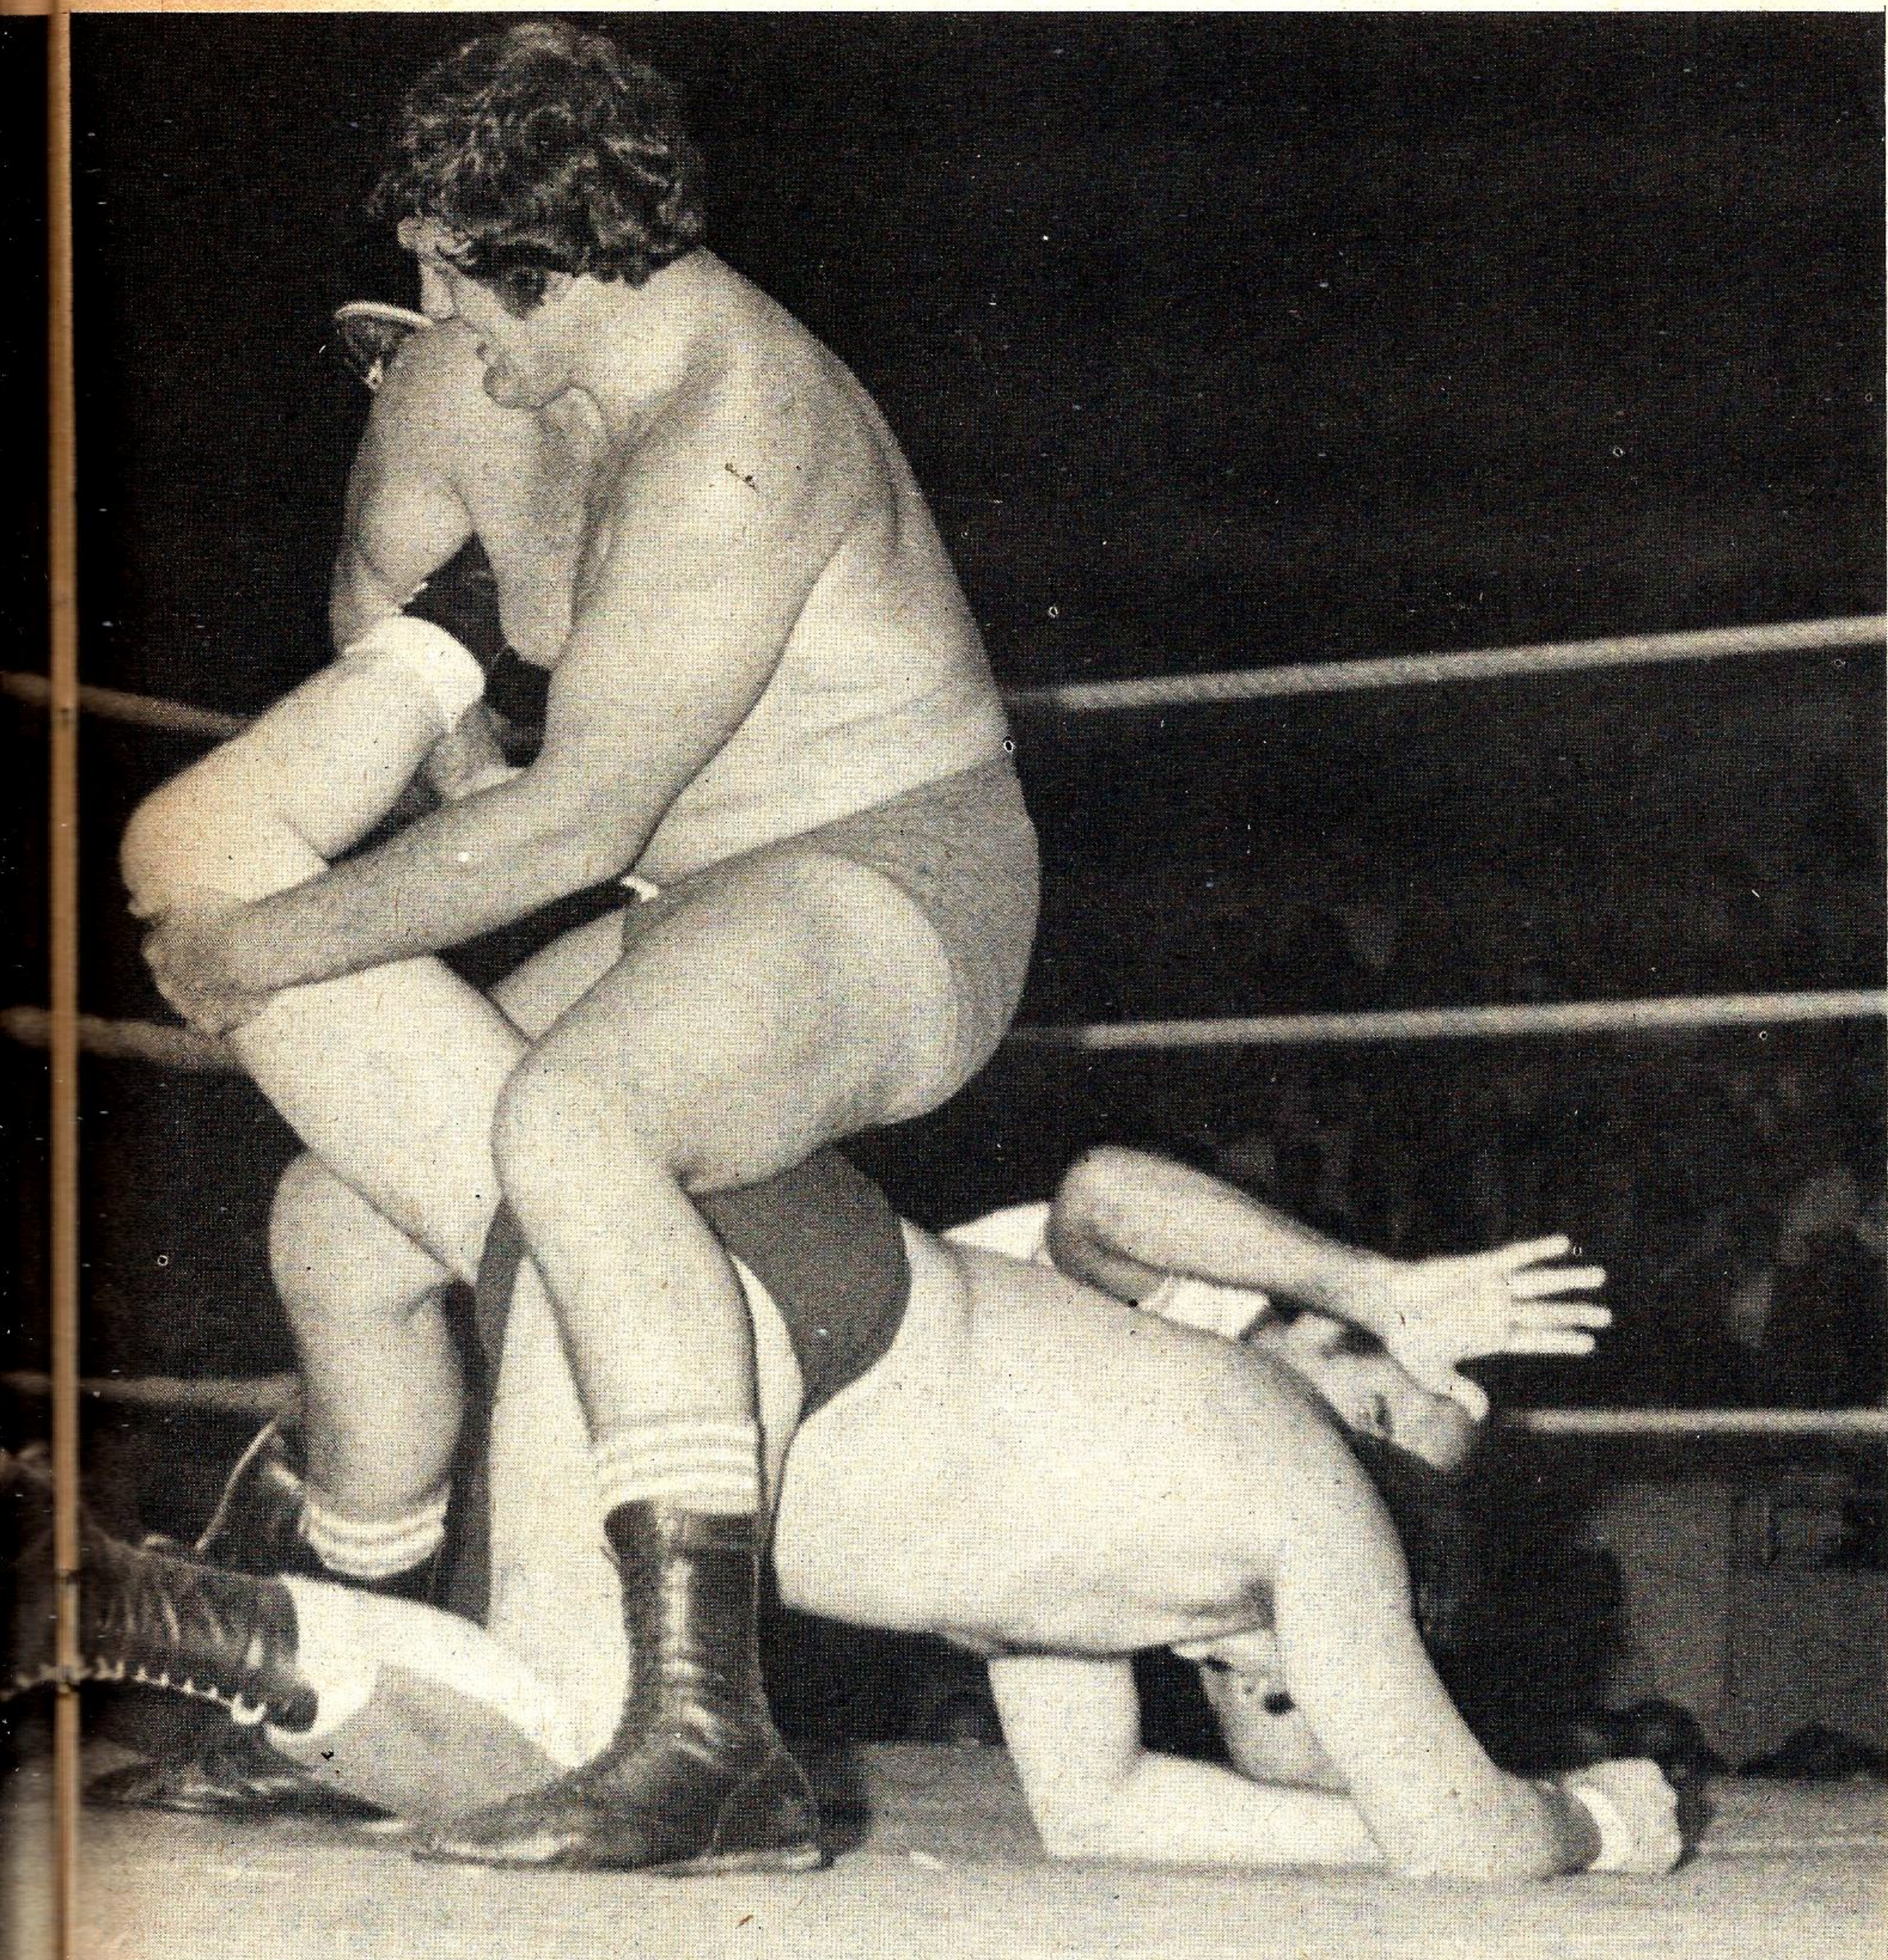

"No matter how much I hate a guy," says Crusher, who's been known to despise many of his foes, "I never let myself lose my professional cool completely. When a guy really does go over the deep end, he's lost. There's always got to be some remainder of logic left. Even if I'm not interested in winning but just in hurting the guy, I'm always using strategy, never blindly rampaging.

"I think Billy is losing his professional smarts. He craves the title so much he's losing his perspective. He might be able to beat Gagne if he could just stop caring so much, take it easy. Of course, that's a whole lot easier to say than do!

"I think Billy should leave the area," Crusher advises, "at least for a little while. He ought to get himself new challenges. There's more to wrestling than the A.W.A. championship and defeating Verne Gagne."

That's the advice Billy has been getting from most of his friends. However, it's all falling on deaf ears.

"Billy won't listen to us," McDaniel says, "until his skills really start to deteriorate. That's when he'll get scared. He's such a fine athlete, however, that even at less than he's capable of being he's a great mat star.

It's hard to argue with success."

Even Verne Gagne thinks Billy might be better off trying to pursue other goals.

"Billy," Verne says, "would probably be doing himself a lot of good by forgetting about me for awhile. Some people might think I'm saying that for selfish reasons; they realize Robinson is one of the toughest opponents I've ever had to face. I'll admit Billy's great. However,

Robinson could become greater.

"It'll probably be harder for me when he returns. If I was only interested in my title, there's nothing I'd like better than Billy remaining in his rut. Wrestling needs Billy Robinson at his best; and I'm interested in what's best for wrestling."

Robinson has heard all the advice. The decision remains his alone. And Billy has decided he wants to get Verne Gagne's A.W.A championship. □

IT WAS BILLED as the "Battle of the Blondes."

It was a match that pitted a shapely blonde who could pass for somebody's kid sister against a sexy blonde known around the country as one of the most formidable opponents in the wrestling arena.

It was a contest between a petite southern newcomer known as Joyce Grable and an experienced veteran grappler known as Paula Kaye.

Everybody figured Paula to win this one, but Joyce somehow walked off as victor. It left everyone open-mouthed, including Paula, who had plenty to say.

"I'm not saying she didn't really win," said Paula. "I won't contest that part. But it's how she won that gripes me. You know that girl comes on like Little Miss Cutsie Poo. She walks onto the mat like some kind of sweet little southern gal who wouldn't hurt a fly. And then when she has the admiration of everyone including the referee—she applies some of the dirtiest holds I've ever dealt with in an arena!"

But isn't Paula the one who's known as one of the sneakiest and dirtiest wrestlers around?

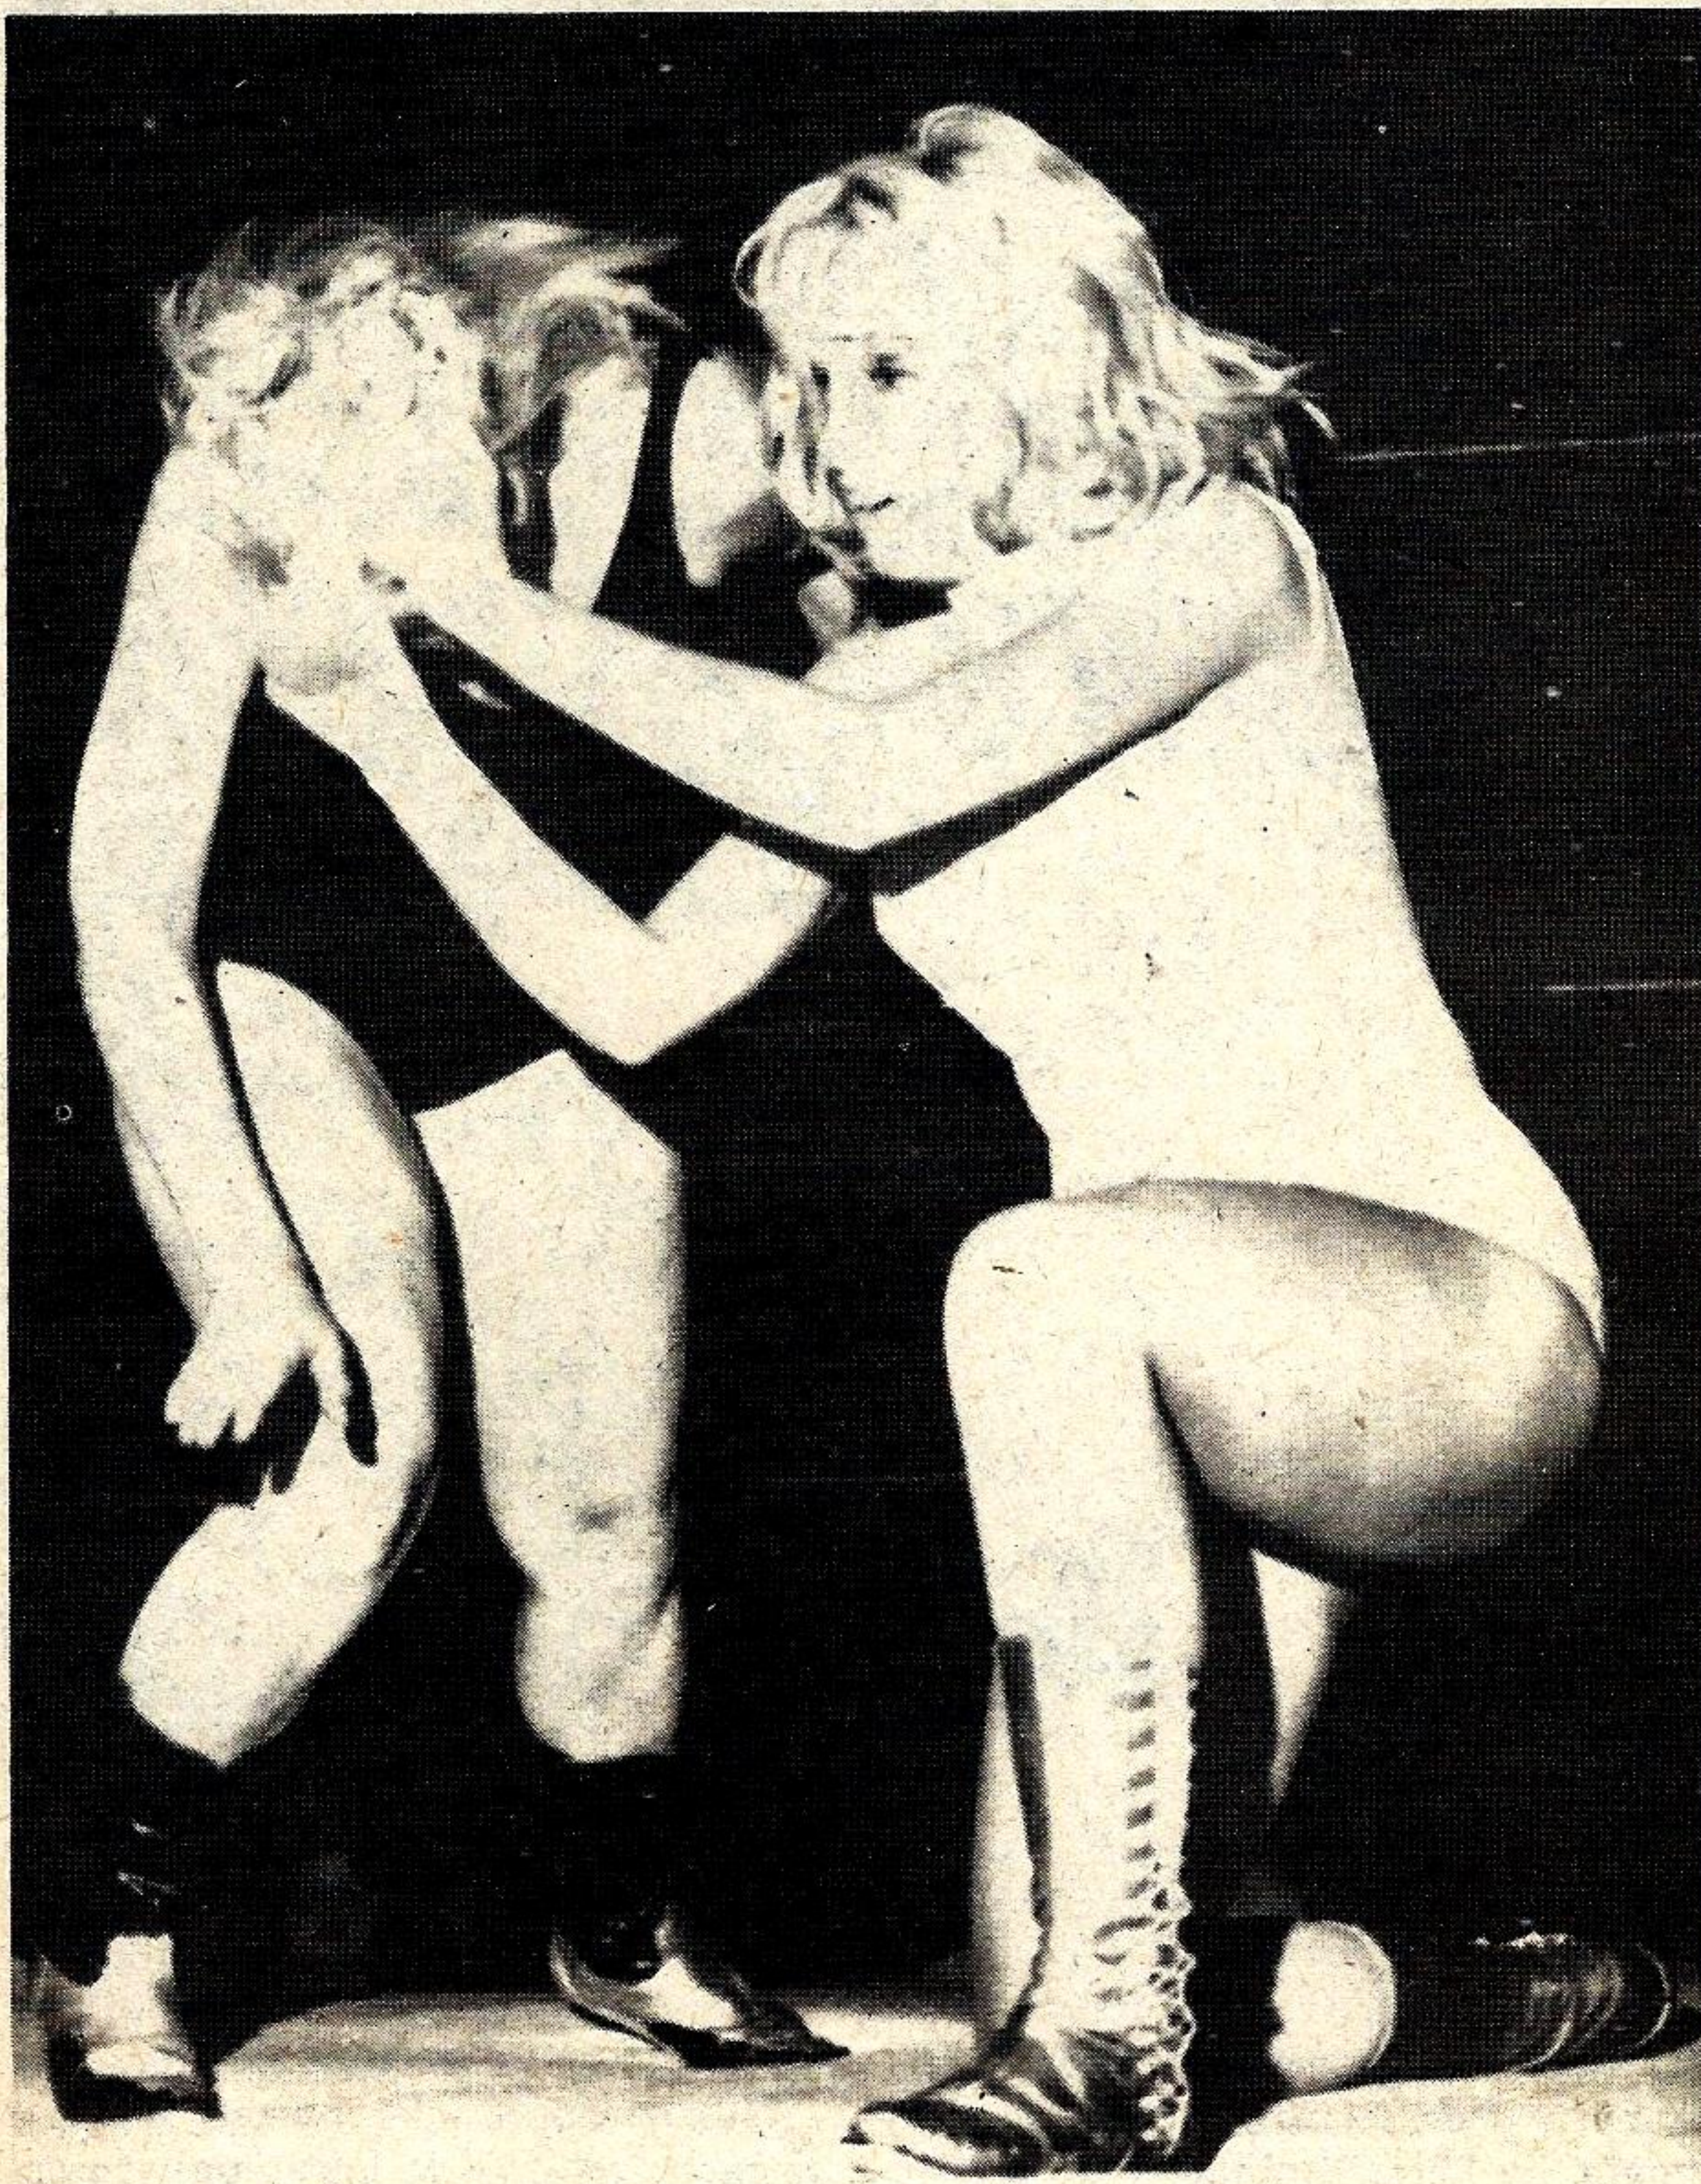

"Well, I won't deny that either," Paula said. "I won't deny I am known as one of the dirtiest and sneakiest wrestlers around. What I will deny is that I am. I've been tagged that way. I've gotten that reputation because of some people who like putting tags on people just like they put tags on objects in a store.

"It's just like this thing with politicians and liberal and conservative and hawk and dove and all of that stuff. You're supposed to be one way or the other, not in between. It doesn't matter what you really are, you gotta be tagged as belonging on one side or the other. And they got me tagged as being a dirty wrestler.

Paula Kaye Charges:

THE
WRESTLER
SEEN!!!"

Paula Kaye charges that Joyce Grable is not the innocent, sweet little gal everyone thinks she is. And this picture, in which Joyce is grabbing a handful of Paula's hair, seems to lend some credence to Paula's claim.

Paula Kaye is angry enough to spit fire. She feels she, along with everyone else, was taken in by Joyce Grable's sweet-little-girl-buildup. And she vows never to let it happen again!

That's it.

"But let me tell you something. It's true I wrestle dirty when I have to. It's true I've wrestled dirty in the past. But I've seen plenty of so-called clean, up-standing, nice girls who have used the dirtiest tactics imaginable and wind up getting away with it. And Joyce Grable is the most recent example!

"You see, those referees are always looking at what I do. Am I doing something illegal? Am I using some dirty tactics? This is constantly going through their minds. And then somebody like Joyce could be gouging and punching and pulling every dirty stunt in the book and they don't even notice that she's there. They just feel little Joyce couldn't be doing anything wrong, cause she's such a nice, harmless, good-natured, sweet, little southern belle.

"You know something? I believed it too for a while. And I believed it 'till it was too late. I mean too late—this time. I was taken in by the whole bit—the whole sweet, looks-just-like-your-younger-sister bit. I gobbled it down and now I'm going to throw it right back up in Miss Grable's face if she has the courage to face me again.

"You know something? If you think I was taken for a chump, you guys should really be the ones with red faces. Boy, you were taken beyond belief! You guys must have been looking at this girl with blinders. You didn't really know where she was at.

"I read right in your own magazine, THE WRESTLER, about nobody believing Joyce Grable is a wrestler, and how she was a nice girl with a soft voice, born and raised in the south and constantly trying to prove she was a wrestler.

"Well, I was one of those who didn't believe she was a wrestler. I figured she really didn't belong in the arena. I figured it really wouldn't take much to prove it. I'd send her packing her bags to get into some career in modeling or the movies or something more like where she seemed to belong. I wasn't really gonna hurt the kid. She seemed like such a sweet kid who was really mixed up and had to be set straight. She seemed from that article to be somebody who just happened to get into the wrong occupation, you know, one of those people who thinks she wants to grow up to be a certain type of person and one day finds out she was only dreaming and made the wrong choice.

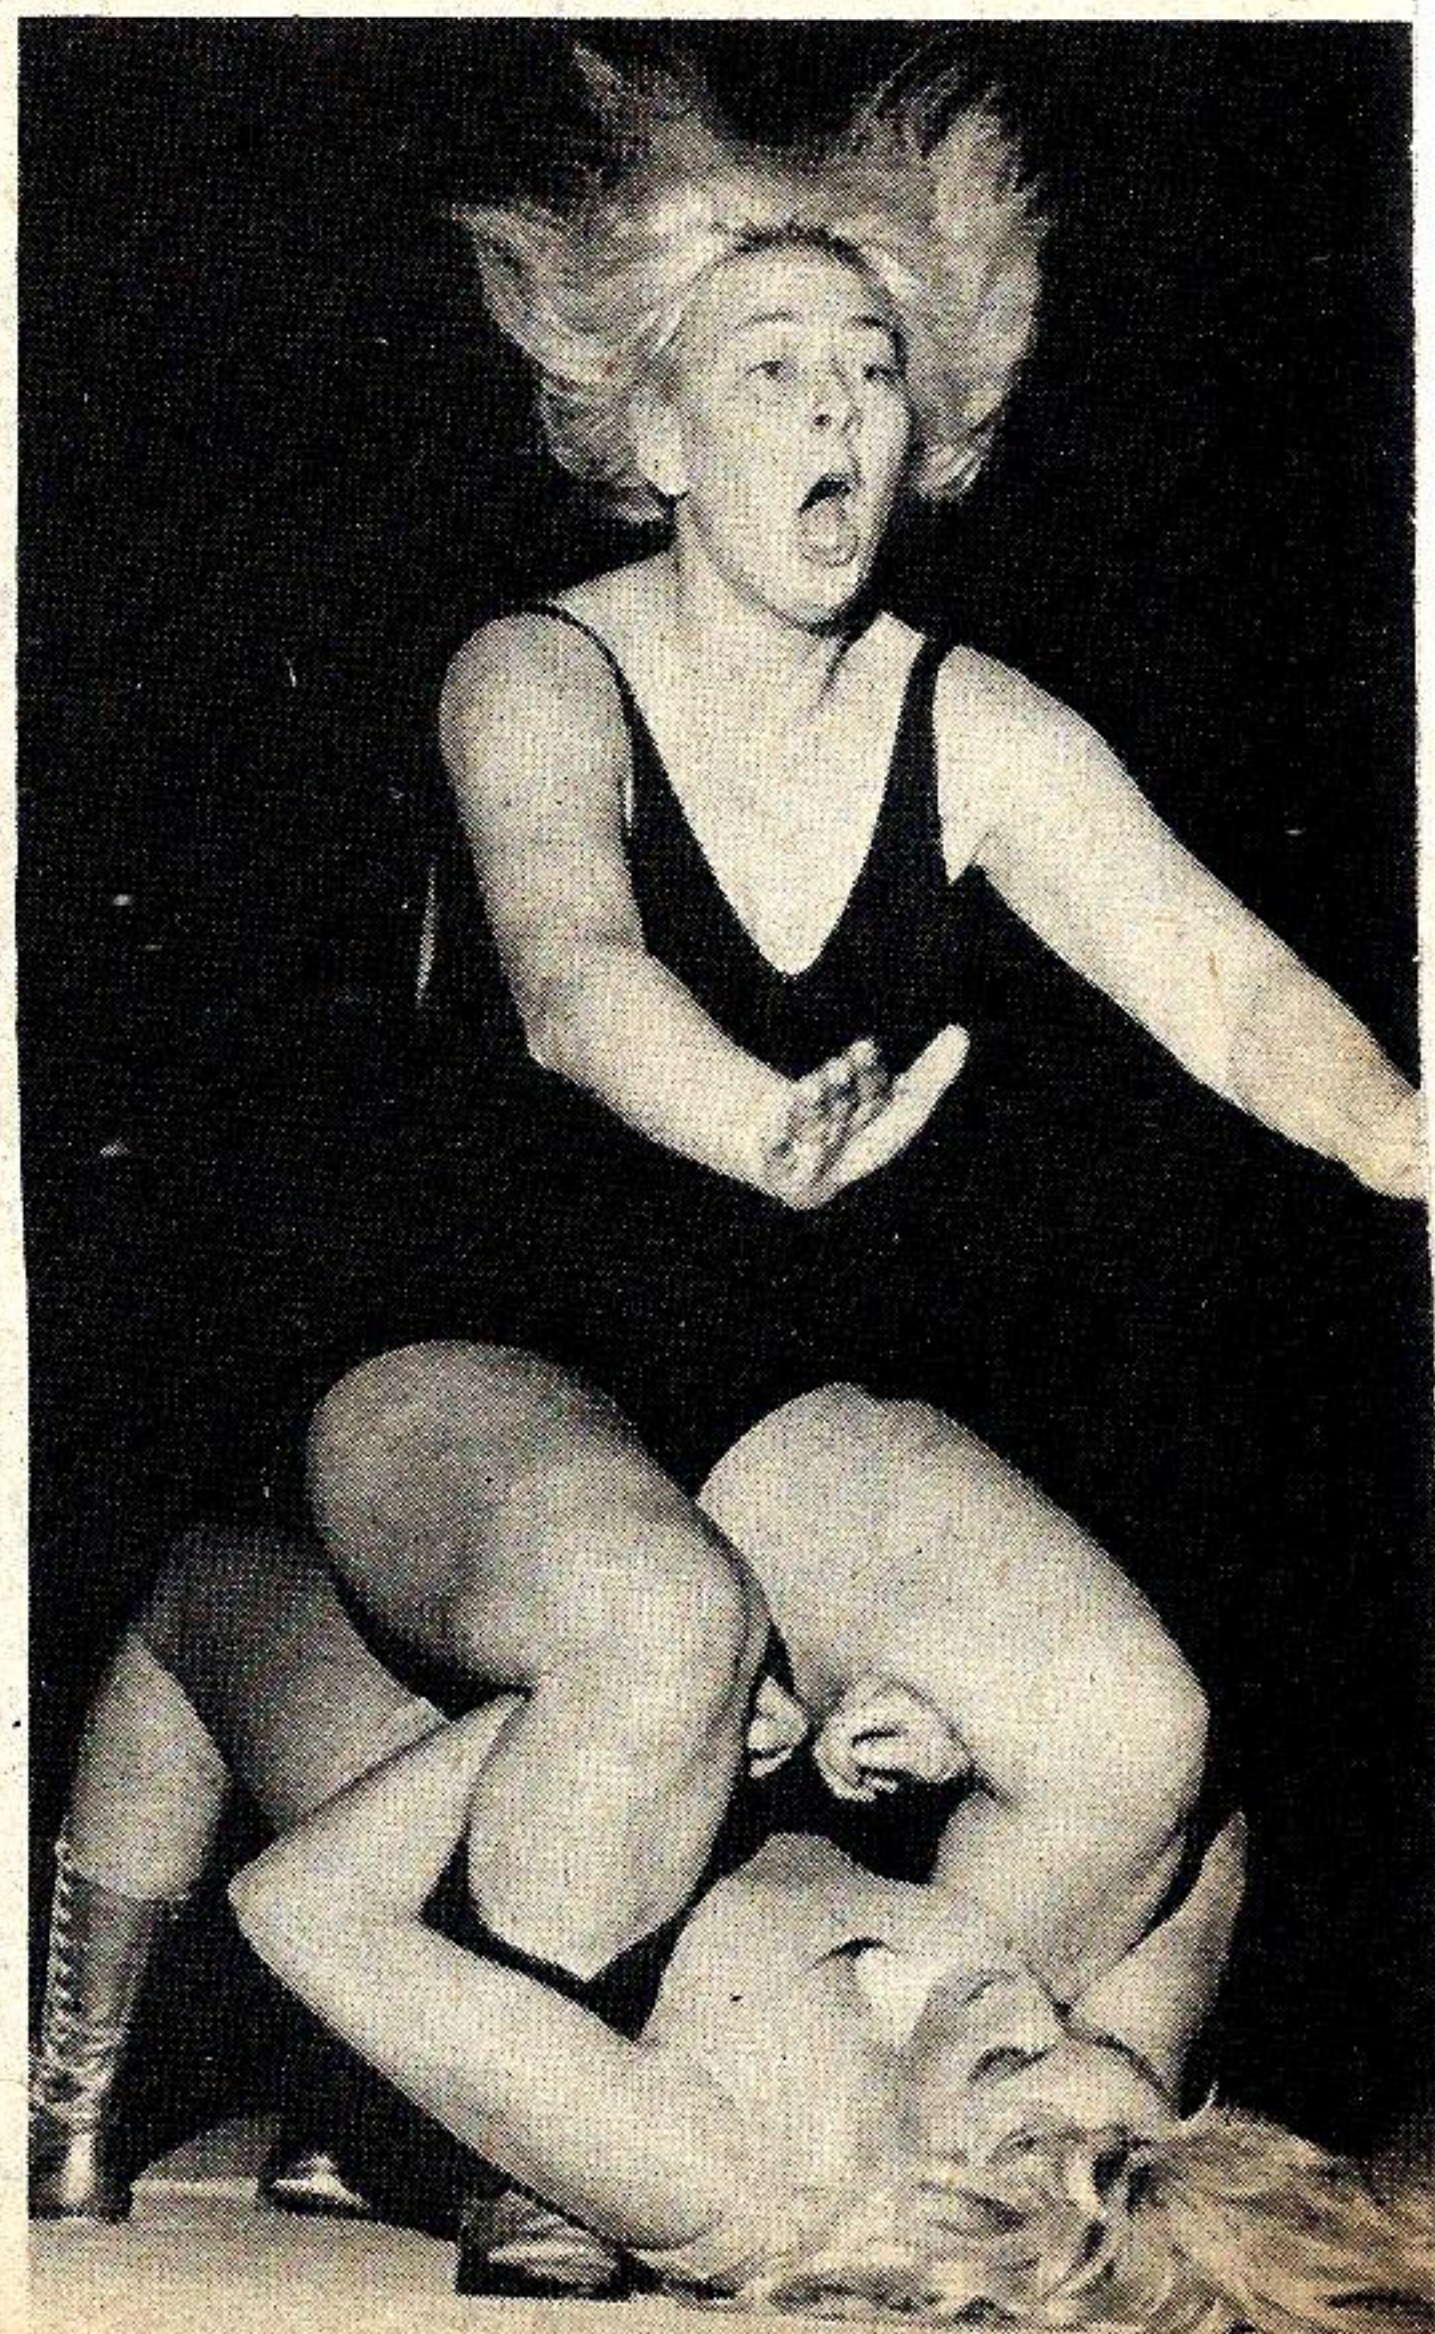

"So I figured I'd treat her gently

Hair flies all over as Joyce twists Paula's arm making her almost somersault forward. Paula claims that because of her reputation the referees keep a close eye on her while they overlook illegal tactics of the so-called "good" girls.

Referee Angelo Martinelli begins counting as he warns Paula to release Joyce (above) from what he considers a choke hold. Paula insists the hold was nowhere near being a choke. Meanwhile, Joyce releases Paula and sends her flying with this boomerang. Yes, Joyce sure can wrestle.

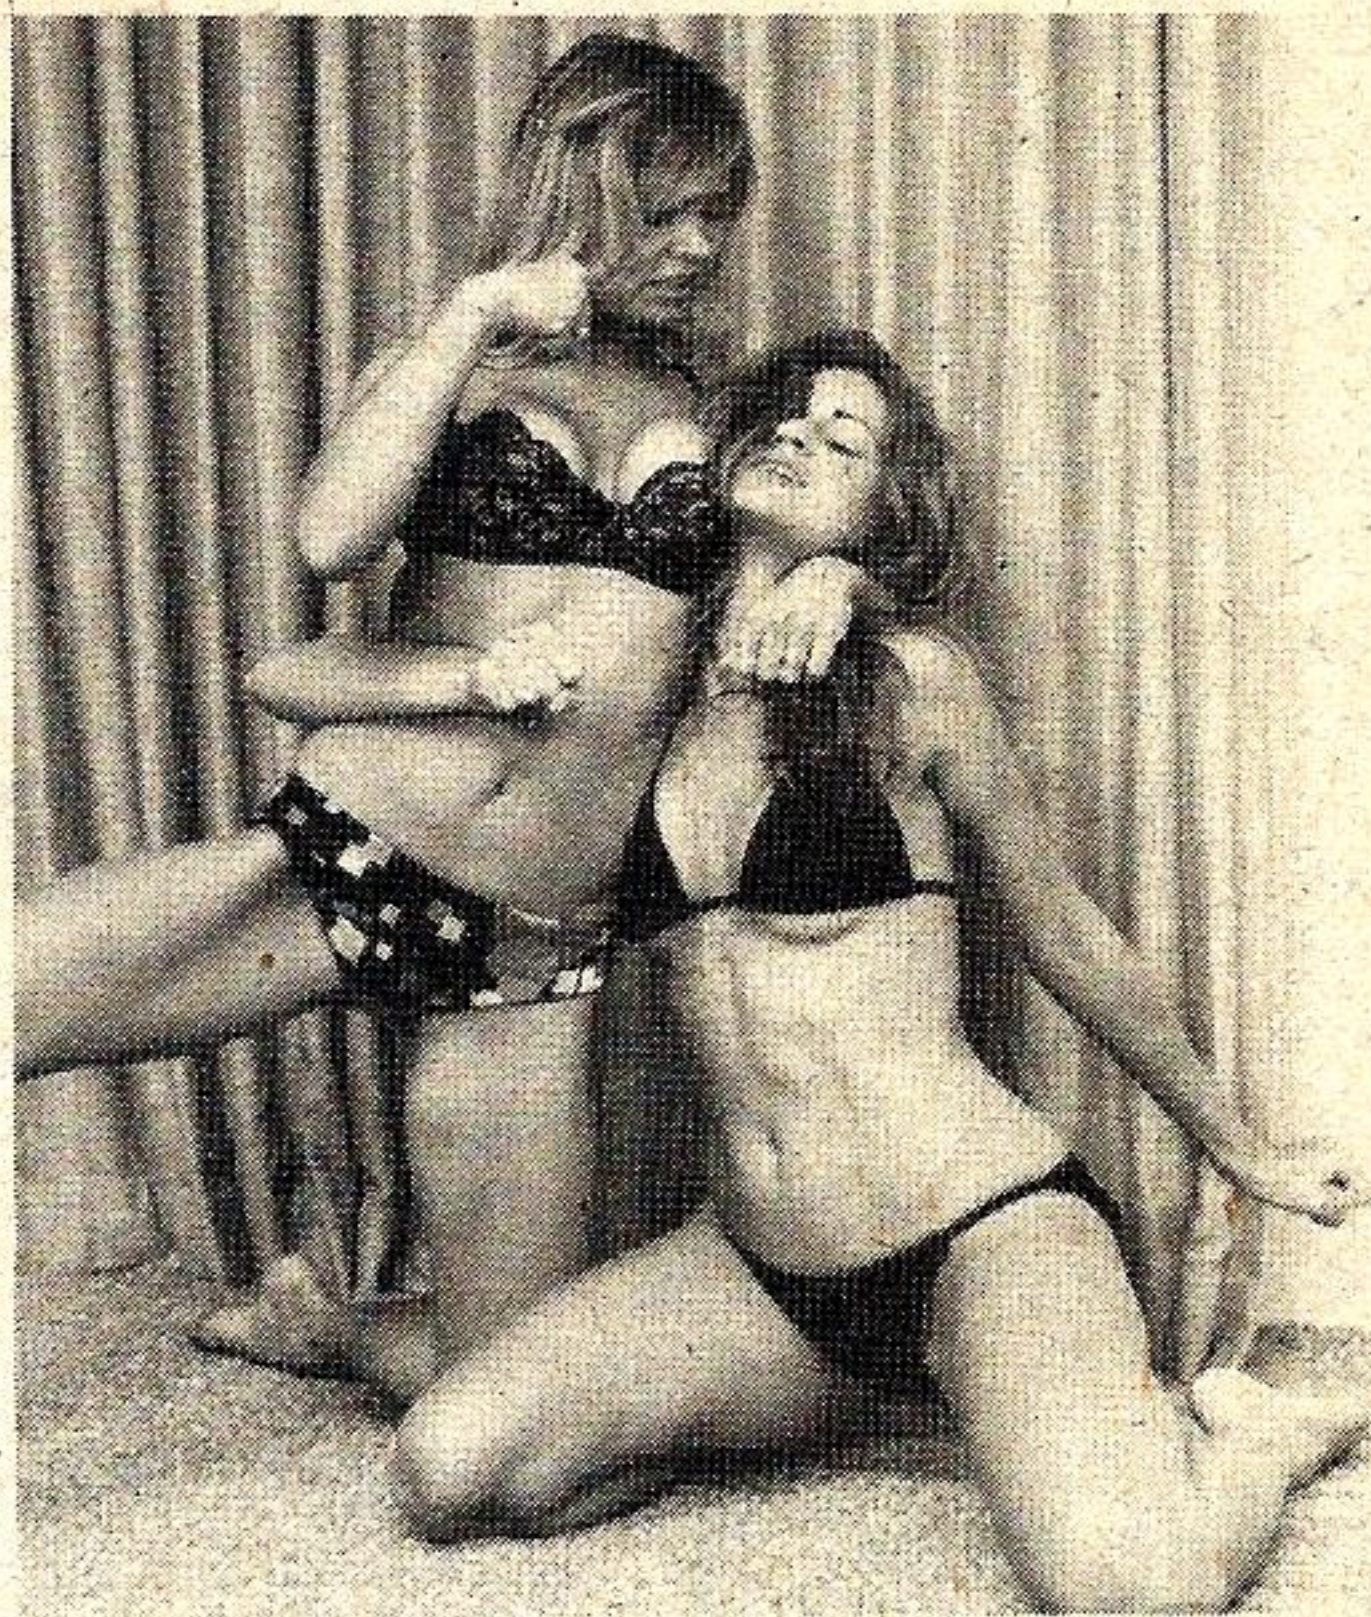

THE IMAGES OF two voluptuous beauties flickered on the screen. The only sounds in the room were the whirring of the projector and swish of champagne bottles being removed and replaced in ice buckets. In a leather chair, her body gently squeezed in a shimmering gown, sat Cynara, former apartment house wrestling champion and the most revered of all the sport's participants.

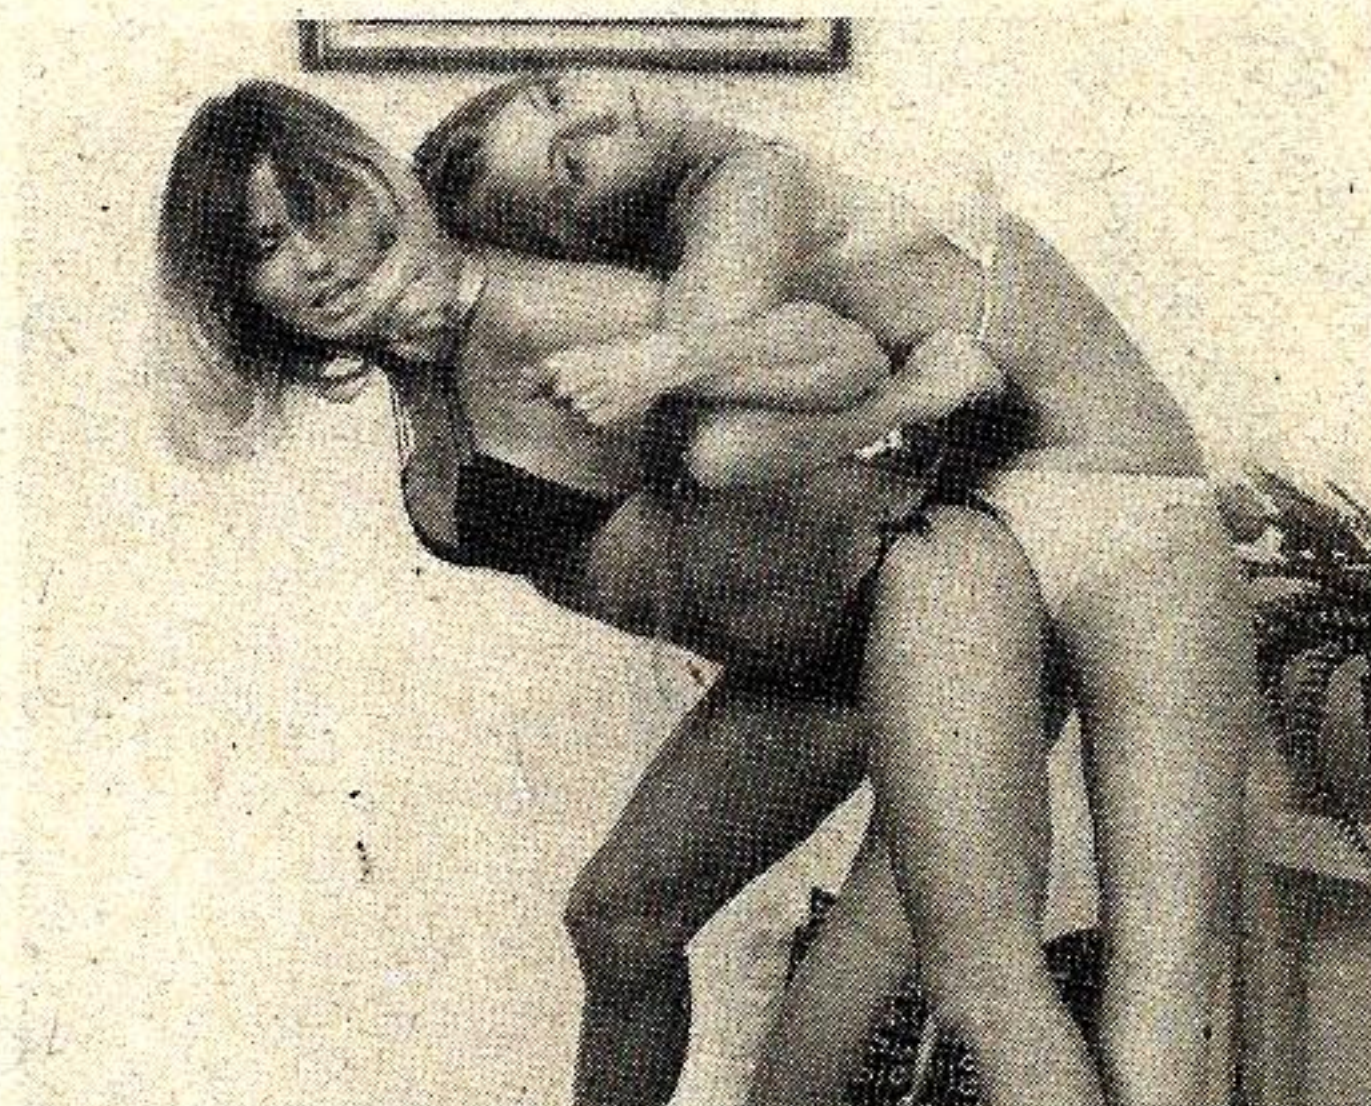

The magnificent blonde beauty's lush mouth formed a half-smile as she watched herself wrestling. Her eyes sparkled as she saw one of her greatest moments—forcing a helpless beauty to beg for mercy. No one blamed Cynara for taking pride in her lithe, statuesque body. Even the less-than-perfect photo reproductions couldn't mar her splendor.

The film showing had a bittersweet sensation to it; the spectators knew they would never see Cynara wrestle in the flesh again. These films were the only way they could again approximate the erotic tension generated by Cynara's grappling prowess. For in less than a week from this screening, Cynara would be the bride of one of New York's foremost magazine publishers.

For apartment house wrestling originator Dave Moll, it was an evening he hoped would never Challenging Cynara can be a painful experience, as the very brave and beautiful Jenny is forced to discover (below).

Cynara wins her apartment house wrestling title in a wildly savage battle against Denise (left). happen. He had wanted the women who grappled for his select group to be beautiful animals capable of only basic emotions. The last thing he wished to do was give these ladies the dignity of a personality. They were for amusement, not passion.

But from the first, Cynara was someone special. Her presence signaled a memorable event. It came as no surprise to the Los Angeles fans when Cynara was chosen to wrestle in the first apartment house wrestling championship bout. It was at that match her future husband first fell under the blonde beauty's spell.

The film of that match was the first shown this evening. It showed Cynara against the queen of New York apartment wrestling, Denise. From the first moment of battle, it was bound to be a classic encounter between magnificent women. Cynara's face betrayed no emotion as she watched Denise charge and hit her squarely in the belly. As she sat watching herself lose the first fall, Cynara chose not to remember the agony of her long legs being brutally twisted.

She allowed herself a brief smile as she watched herself quickly turn the match around with a knee to her foe's belly, causing the lovely brunette to crumple to the carpet. The smile widened when she saw herself grab Denise from behind and twist her victim's jaw mercilessly. Everyone was impressed by how flawlessly Cynara controlled Denise's struggling.

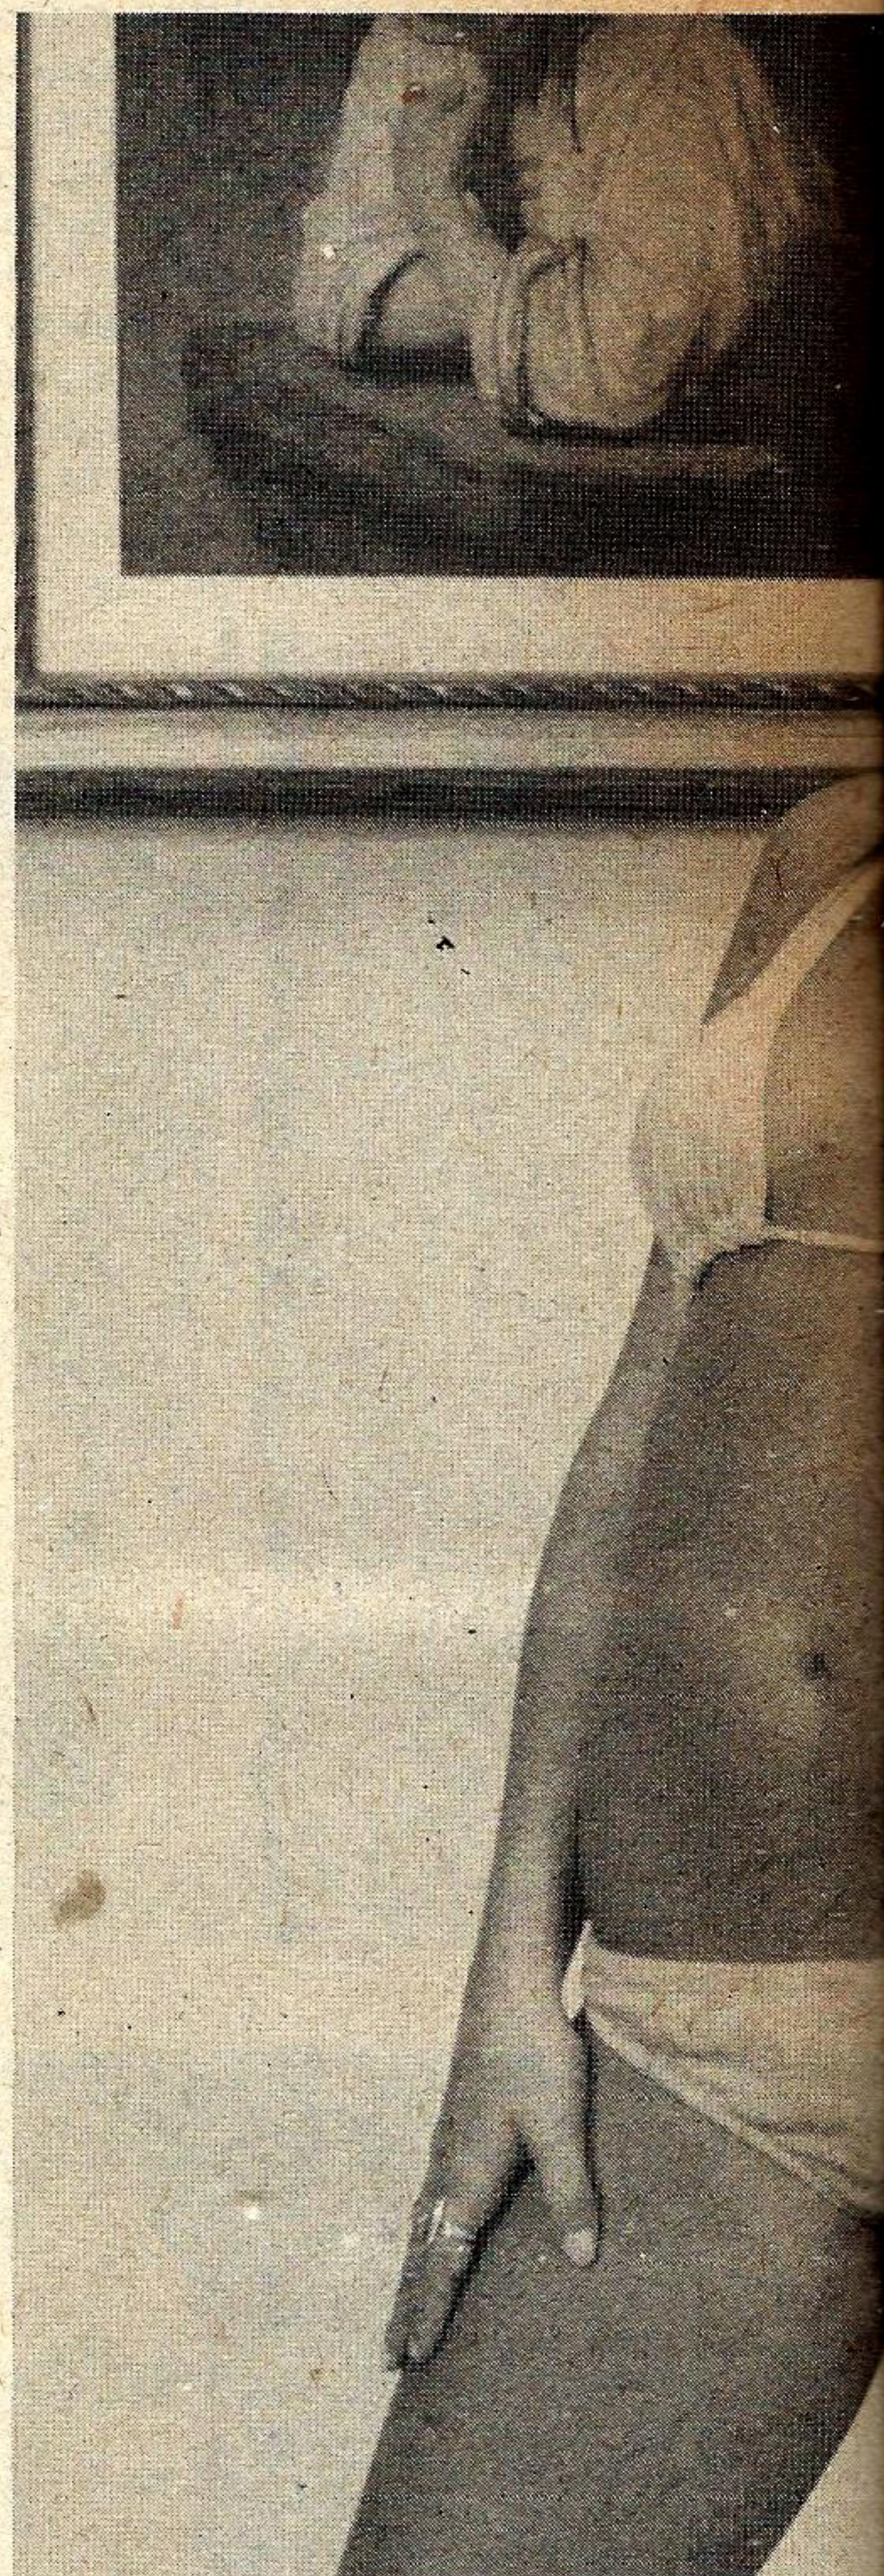

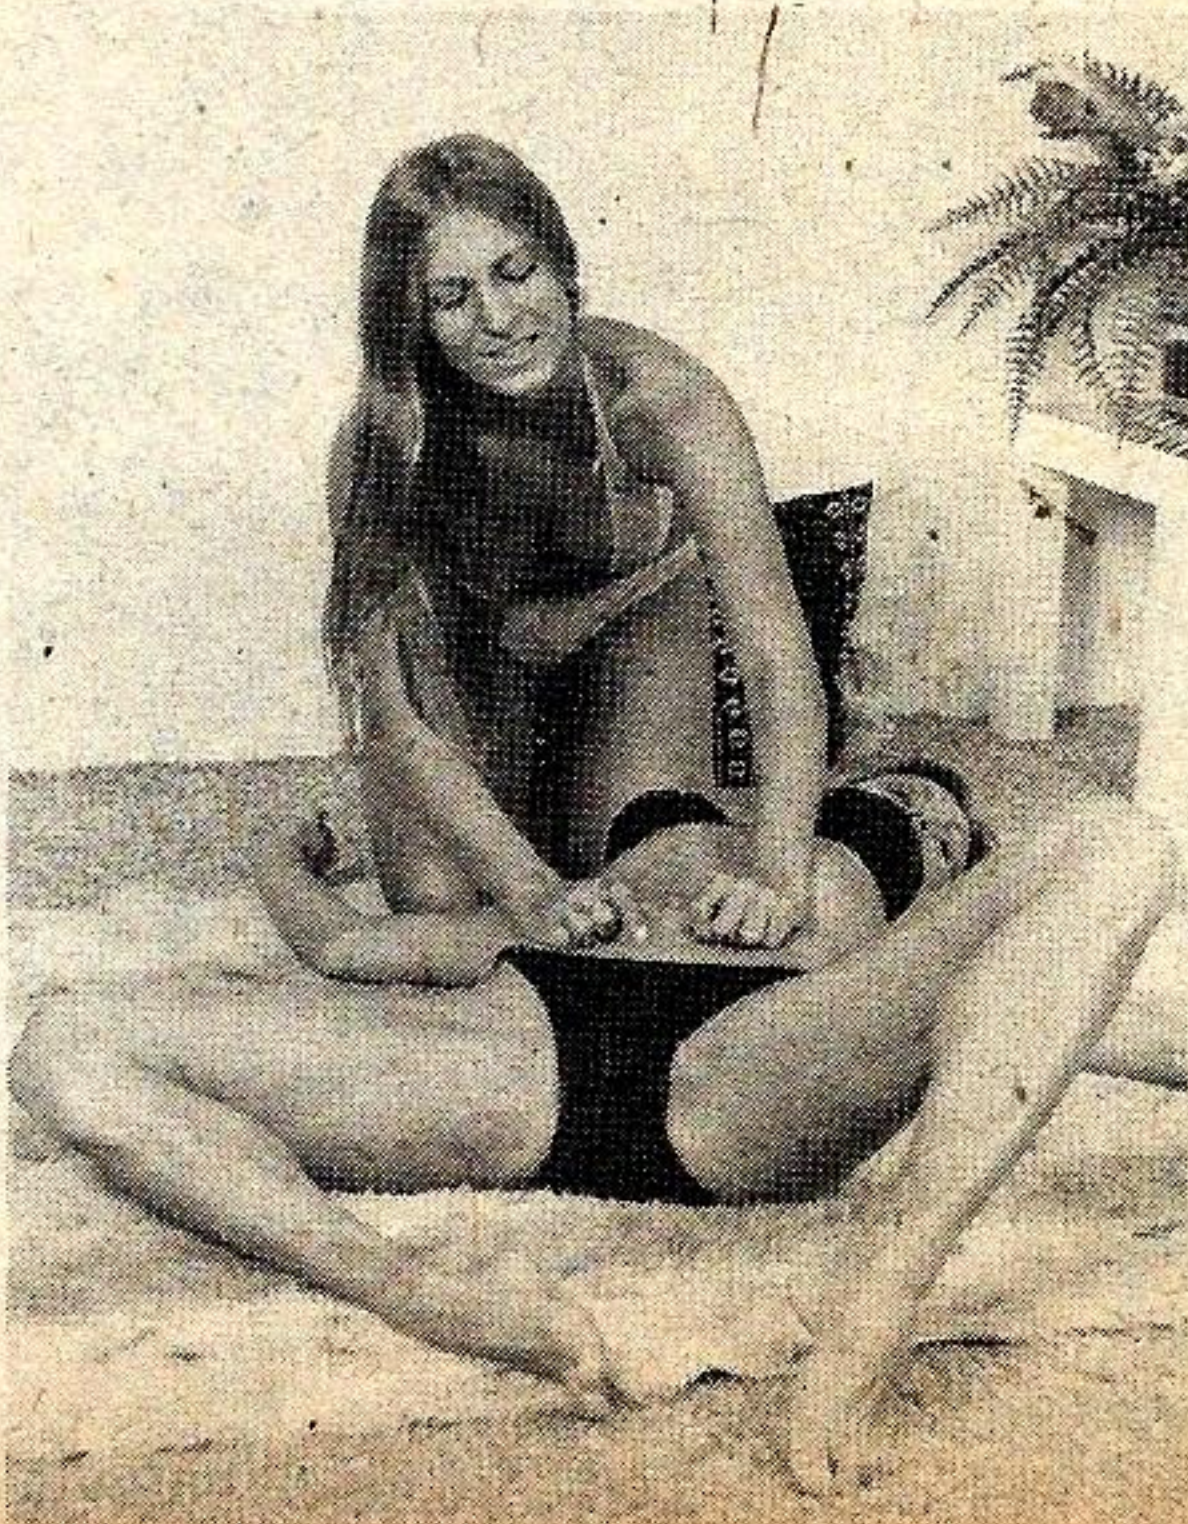

Then the third fall flickered across the screen. The room fell silent as the images of two taut bodies rolling across the carpet appeared, clawing and biting in an exhibition of savage strength. The spectators remained awed as Cynara kicked and punched Denise senseless. The camera caught the blonde's look of cold triumph as Denise squirmed helplessly beneath her.

This was only the first of two matches against Denise. Men filled their glasses before the next film was shown. They didn't want to miss a frame of the battle in which Denise and Cynara tore each other's clothes off. No one could forget the many sensations experienced while witnessing these two nude Amazons in combat. Moll had not wanted to show this film in consideration of the future man and wife, but both had insisted on it being shown.

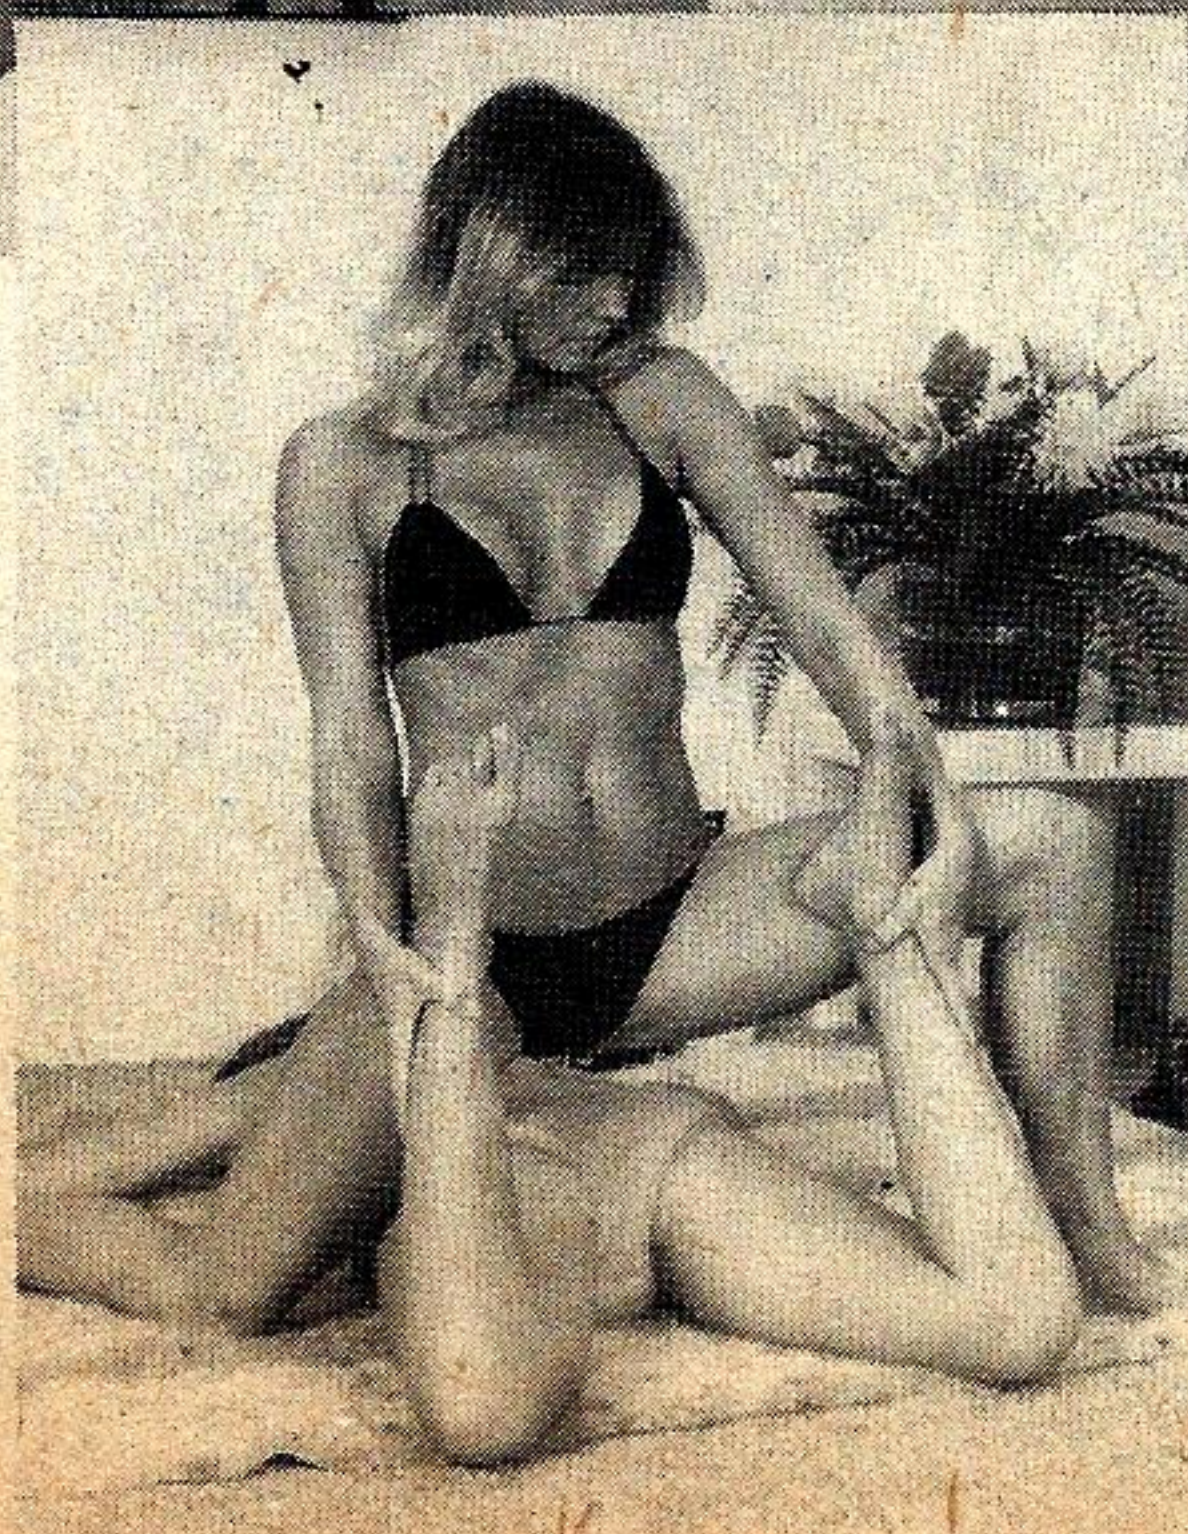

"It's my finest hour," the blonde beauty told Moll, "and I want it to be remembered by everyone. I never want them to mistakenly remember and think some future match is better."

There is little doubt anyone will soon forget all the majestic savagery of this match. The movie could only give a vague sense of the violent tension which filled the room. For on the screen was the most famous match in apartment house wrestling history—the first time the sport went nude!

The rematch had a certain savagery about it even before it had begun. Denise had vowed revenge for her defeat by Cynara in their previous encounter, and the blonde champion was determined to put away her opponent once and for all.

When the two lovely ladies began wrestling, animal fury overshadowed any sense of civility. They tore at each other, sending bended knees into each other's breasts. All rules were thrown to the wind. Suddenly, the two beautiful grapplers started tearing at each other's cloths, shreading the pieces of cloth until they were rendered useless. Moll had tried to step in and call a halt to the match, but the crowd and the wrestlers wanted to continue until the violent end.

Cynara lay back in the plush chair, smiling a secret smile. A moment of pain flashed across her face as she saw Denise deliver a swift kick to her unprotected crotch on the screen. But then, the scene of the downfall of Denise was shown. Cynara laughed out loud with pleasure.

The lights went on and Dave announced it was intermission time. While her finance went to refill her glass of champagne, Cynara remained in her chair, lost in thought. She remembered the bout against Jenny, a very tough opponent—but not tough enough to beat Cynara.

Jenny was not the grappler Cynara was. But the blonde bombshell remembered she had been a little overconfident going into the match. She had dismissed Jenny as an opponent out of her league, but Jenny proved she had some really savage spirit in her.

Many times during their match, Jenny discovered Cynara's weak spots. But Cynara was a clever enough grappler to never allow Jenny to press an advantage. As she sat back, the blonde's sinewy muscles tensed with the memory of how Jenny had bitten her alabaster thighs with razor-sharp teeth. Not realizing what she was doing, the blonde started delivering powerful punches into empty air.

She felt a tap on her shoulder from her finance. She returned from her reverie, straightened herself in the chair, and waited for the next footage to be shown.

The elite audience returned to its seats, anxiously awaiting the next film. Dave Moll stood in front of the wealthy assemblage, waiting for quiet to be restored. When finally the din was hushed, Moll spoke: "So far we have witnessed on film excellent movies of our queen, our champion, of apartment house wrestling, Cynara. But as they say, 'You ain't seen nothing yet!' Cynara's greatest matches are on these last films, and I guarantee you'll be pleased. But first, I'd like to raise my glass in tribute to the gorgeous grappler, and I ask all present to do likewise."

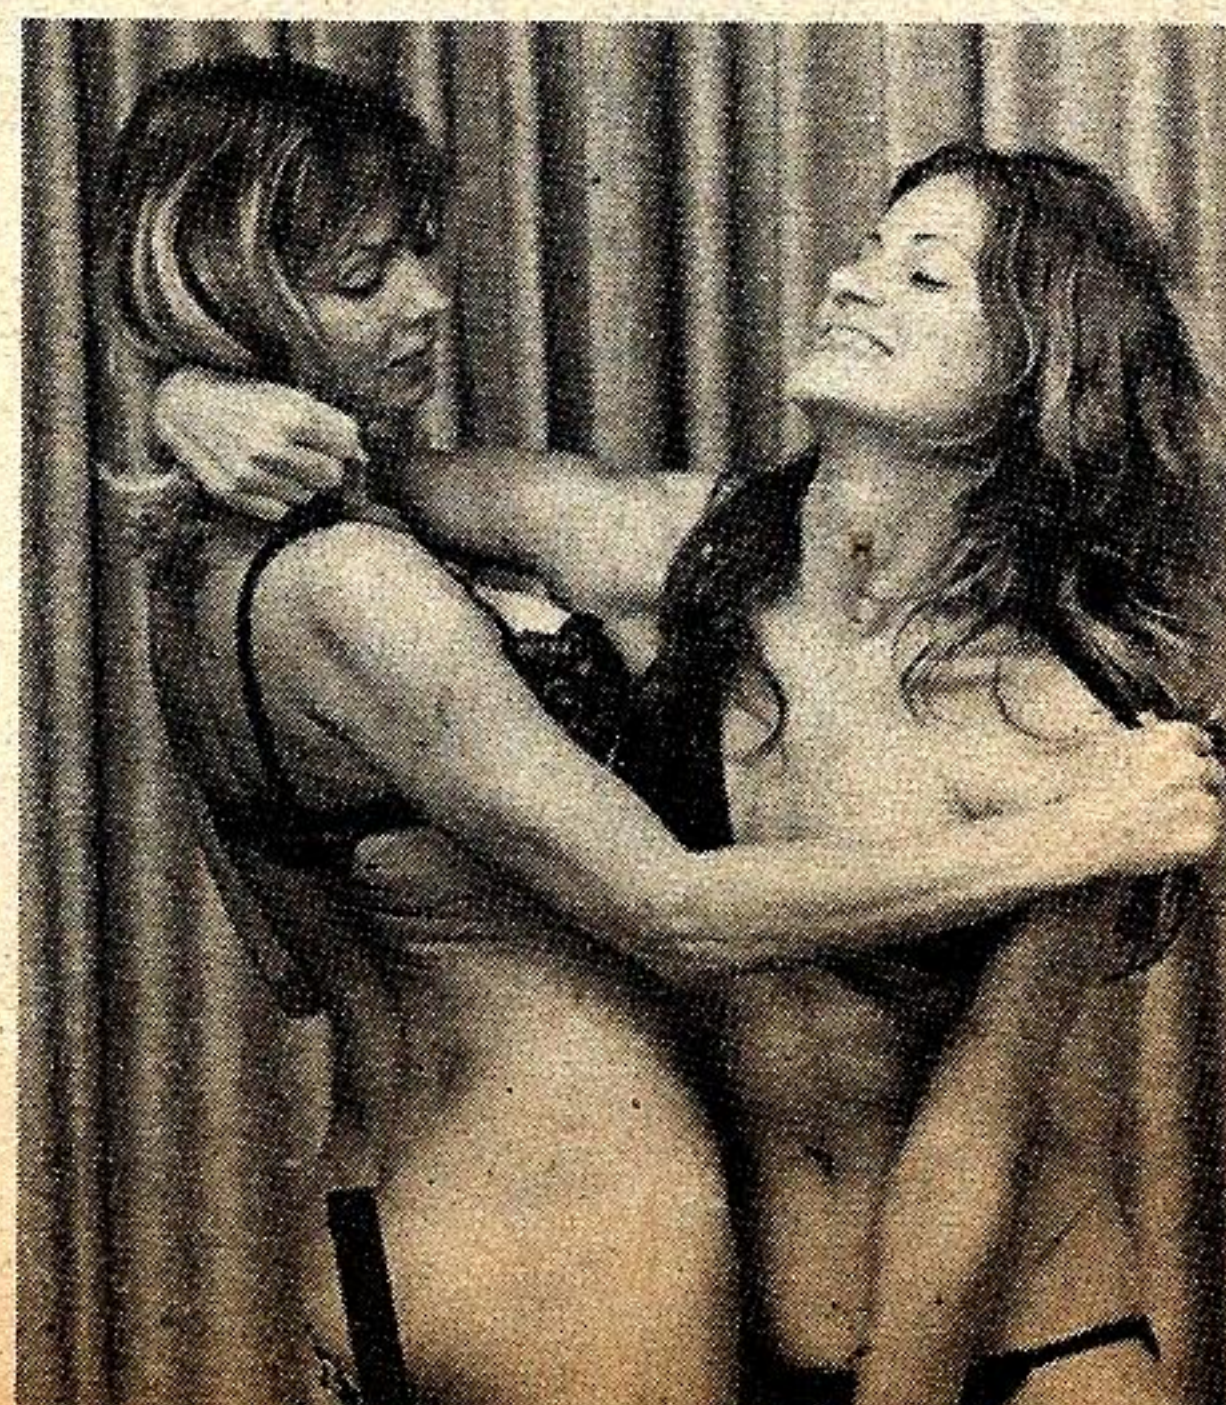

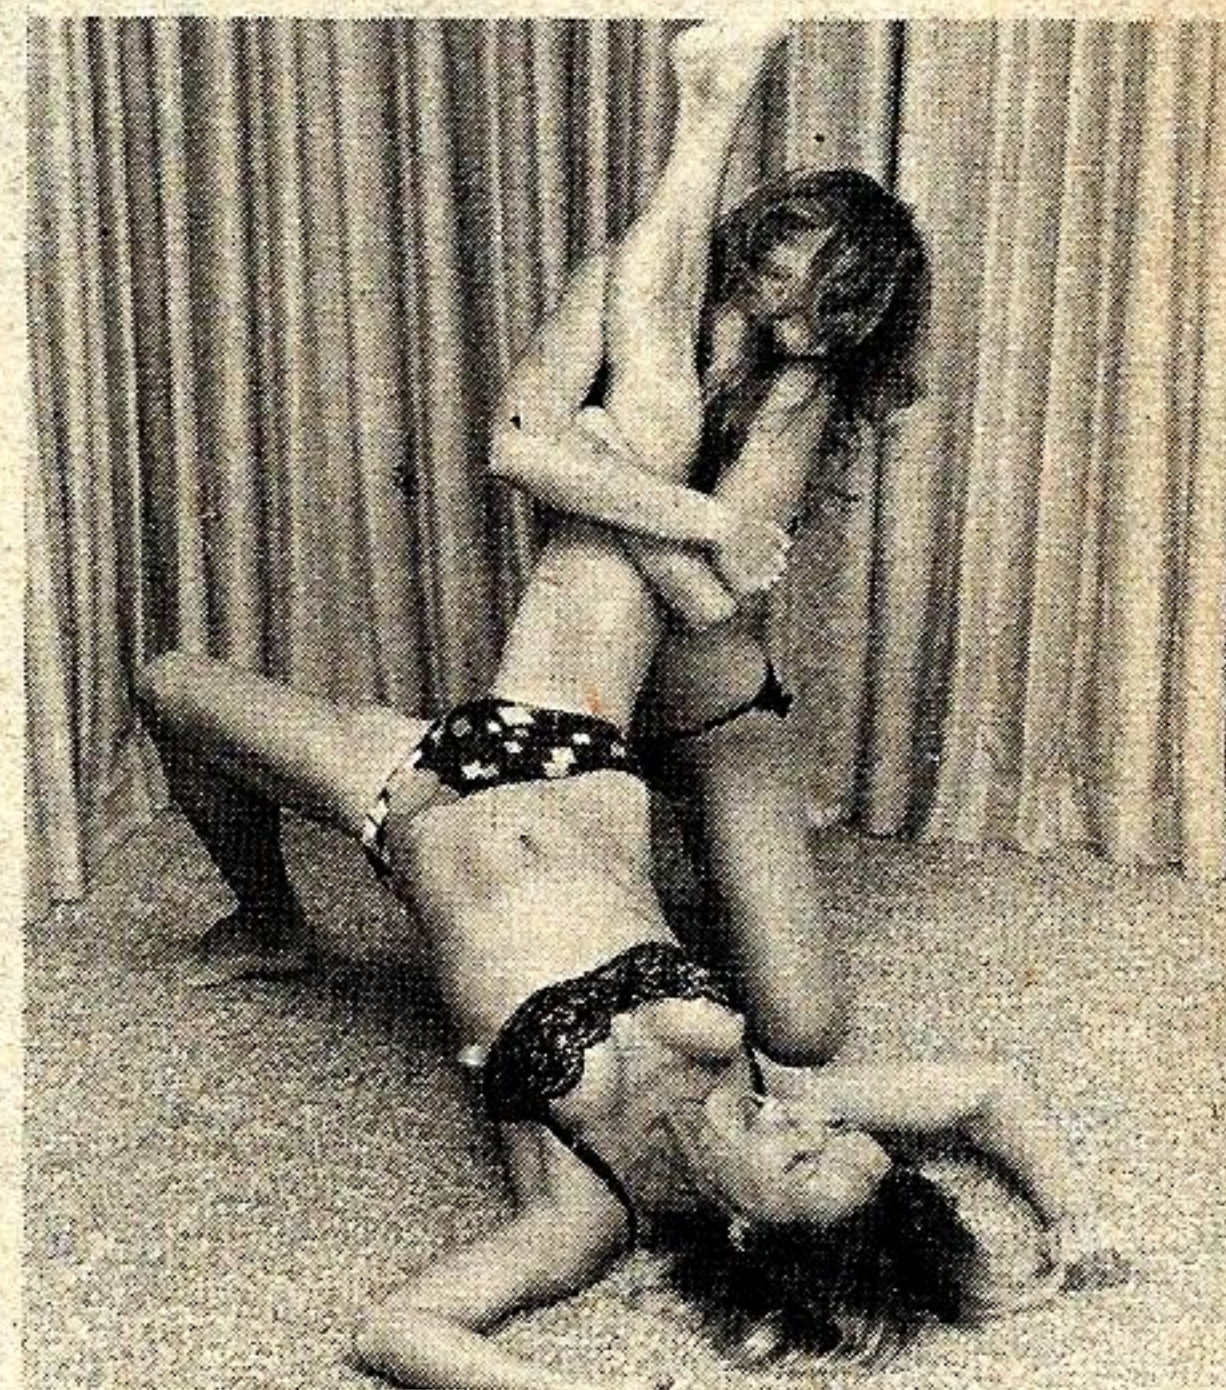

The elite audience lifted its champagne-filled goblets in the beautiful blonde's direction. The lovely Cynara acknowledged the tribute. Her head cocked to one side, she smiled and said, "Thank-you all for your kindness and attention," then slipped back into the comfort of the plush chair.

Moll signaled for the projectionist to begin the next movie. A hush fell

Cynara's two championship bouts against the fabulous Denise were a whirlwind of punches and kicks, nails digging into exposed skin, clothes torn off splendid bodies, and agonizing holds. Many consider these bouts the most ferocious in the sport's history; films of the brawl have been sold for as much as $2,000. There are only eight rare copies in existence.

KILLER BROOKS AND LUIS MARTINEZ PUT ON THE GLOVES!

Exclusive Photos
By Sandy Lazarowicz

“I WANT A match with Killer Brooks, but one like he never had before! I want a boxing match with Brooks!”

The challenge was coming from Luis Martinez. But why was Luis so anxious to box Killer?

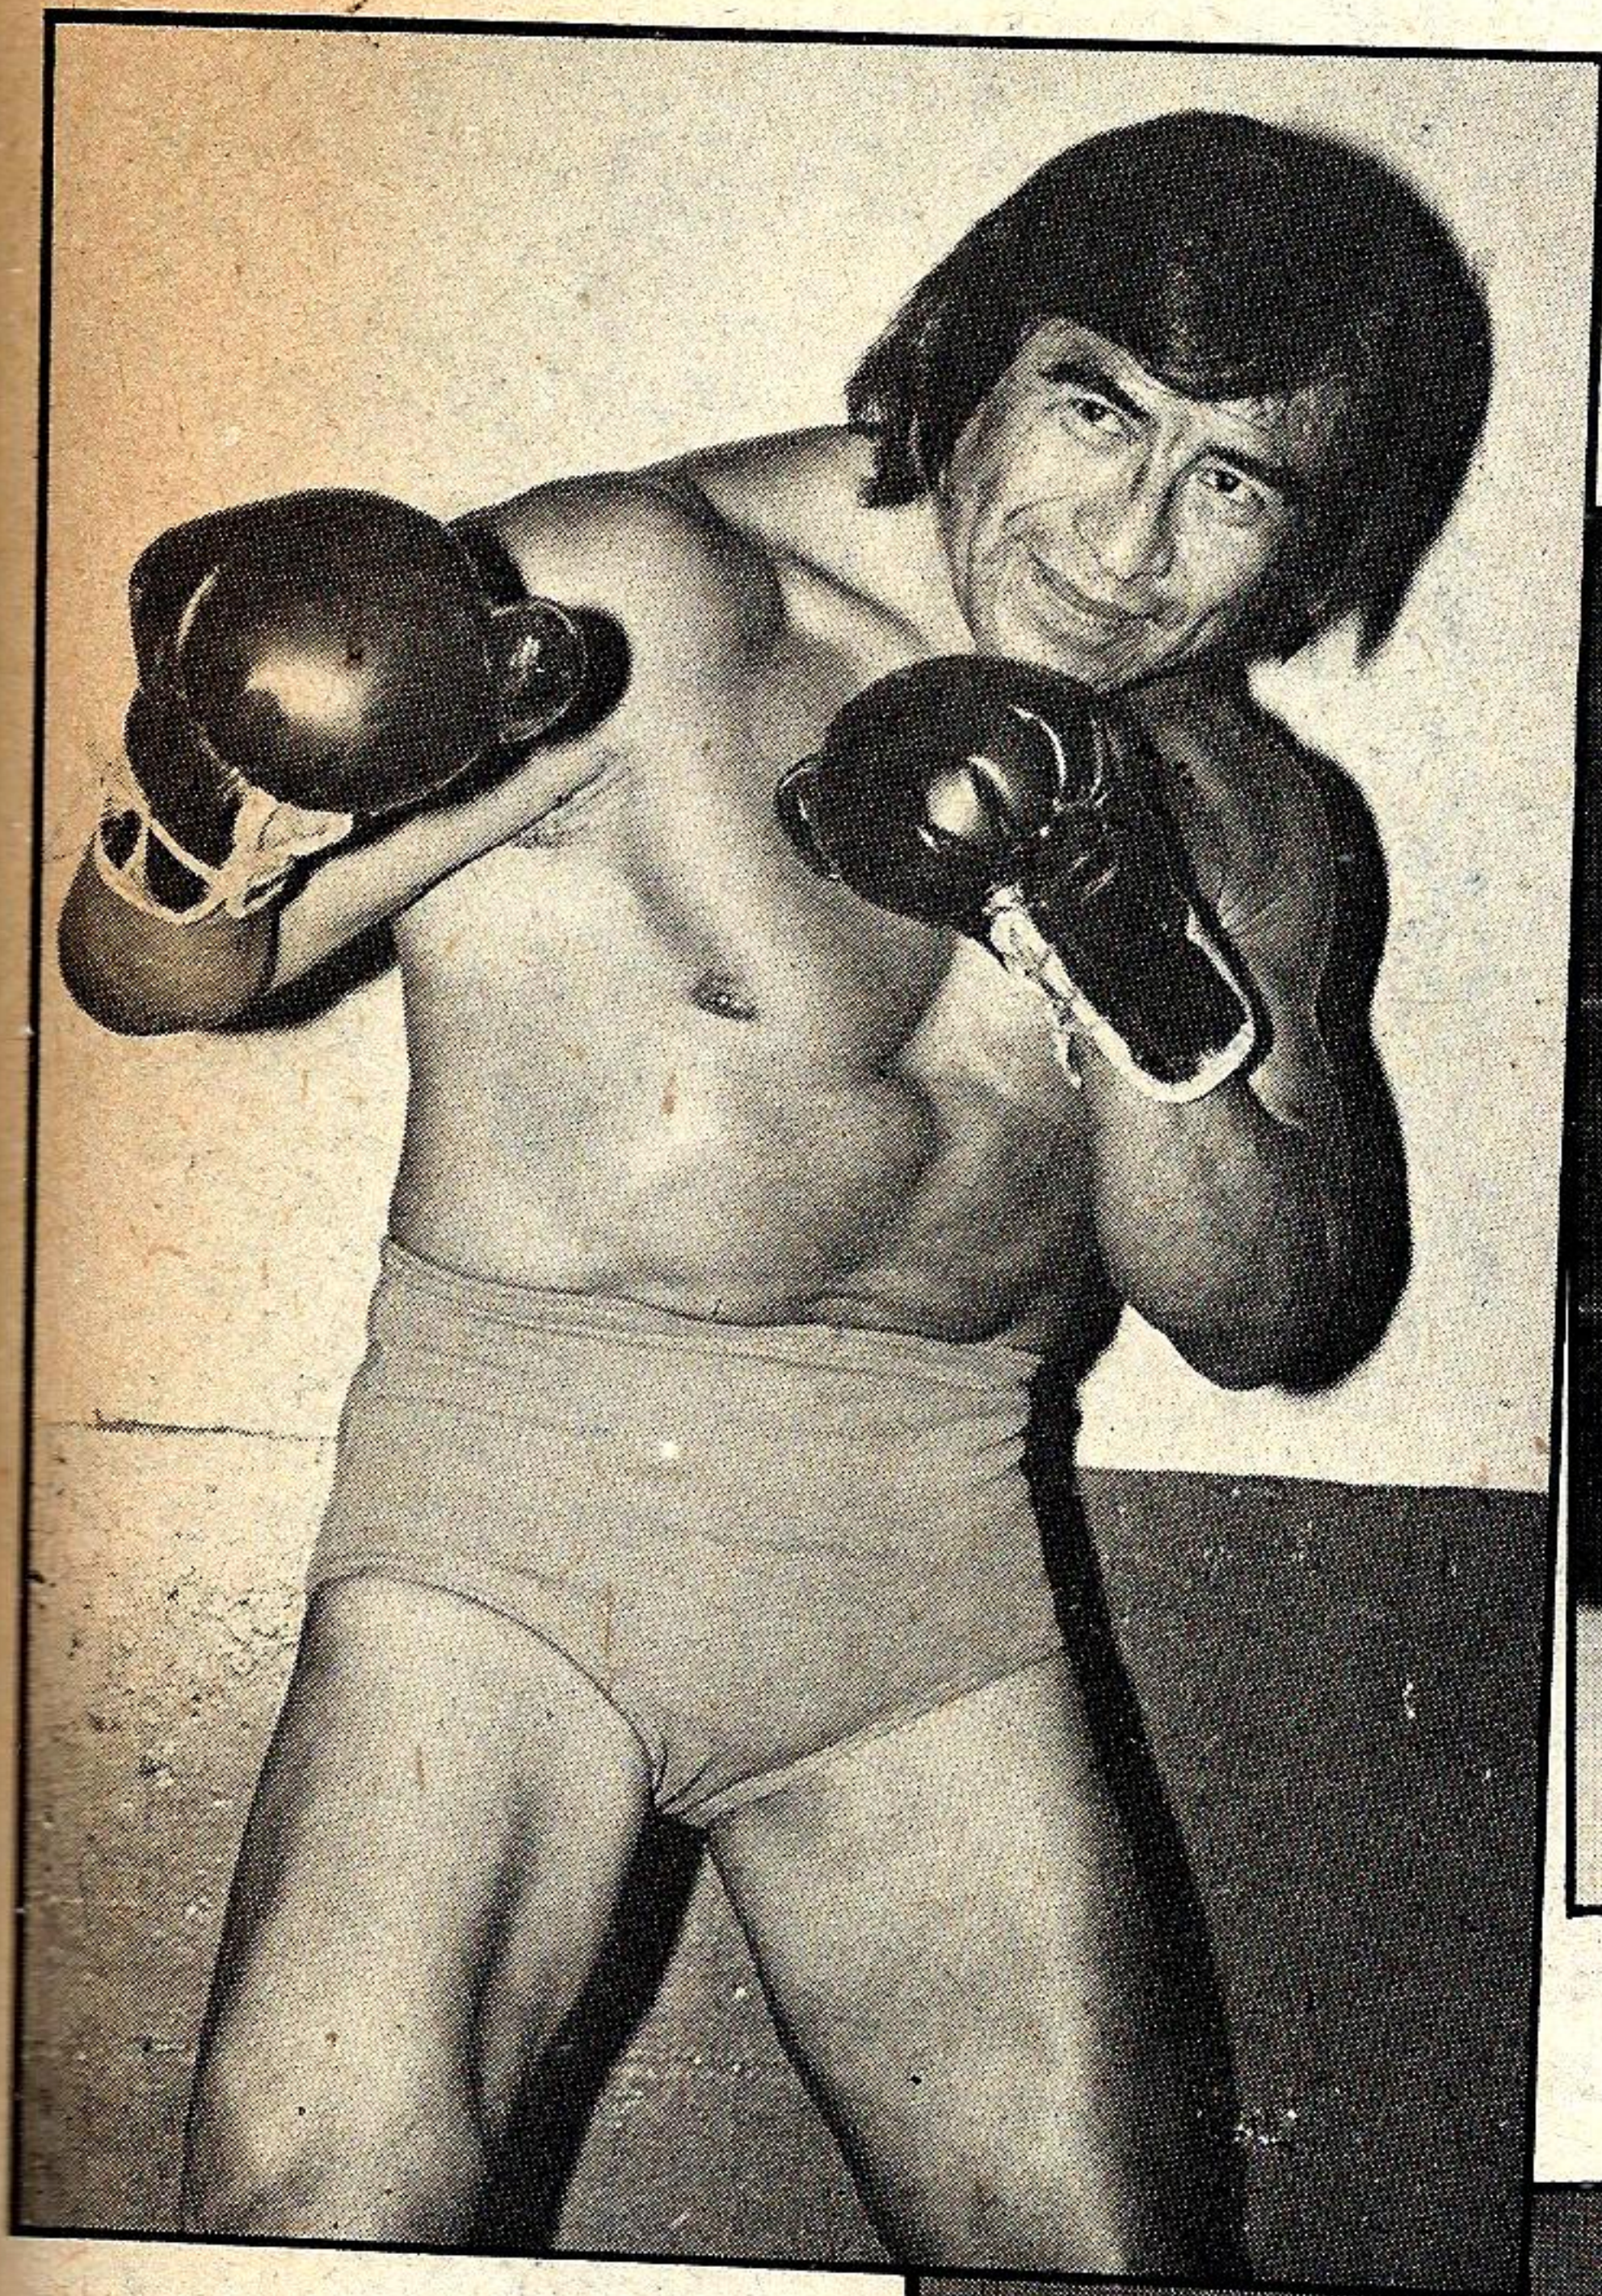

Killer Brooks and Luis Martinez had spent so much time slugging each other in their wrestling matches it figured to be only a matter of time before someone would suggest they put the gloves on. When they did—it was a wild, wild scene!

There's no way Killer Brooks can reach into his trunks (above) to pull out a foreign object. Luis Martinez demanded the boxing match with Brooks just for that specific purpose. Luis (left) corners Brooks and smashes him in the jaw. “I’m not a puncher by trade,” Luis said, “but I really enjoyed slugin’ away at that rule breakin’ Brooks.” Killer doesn’t think much of Luis as a boxer or wrestler.

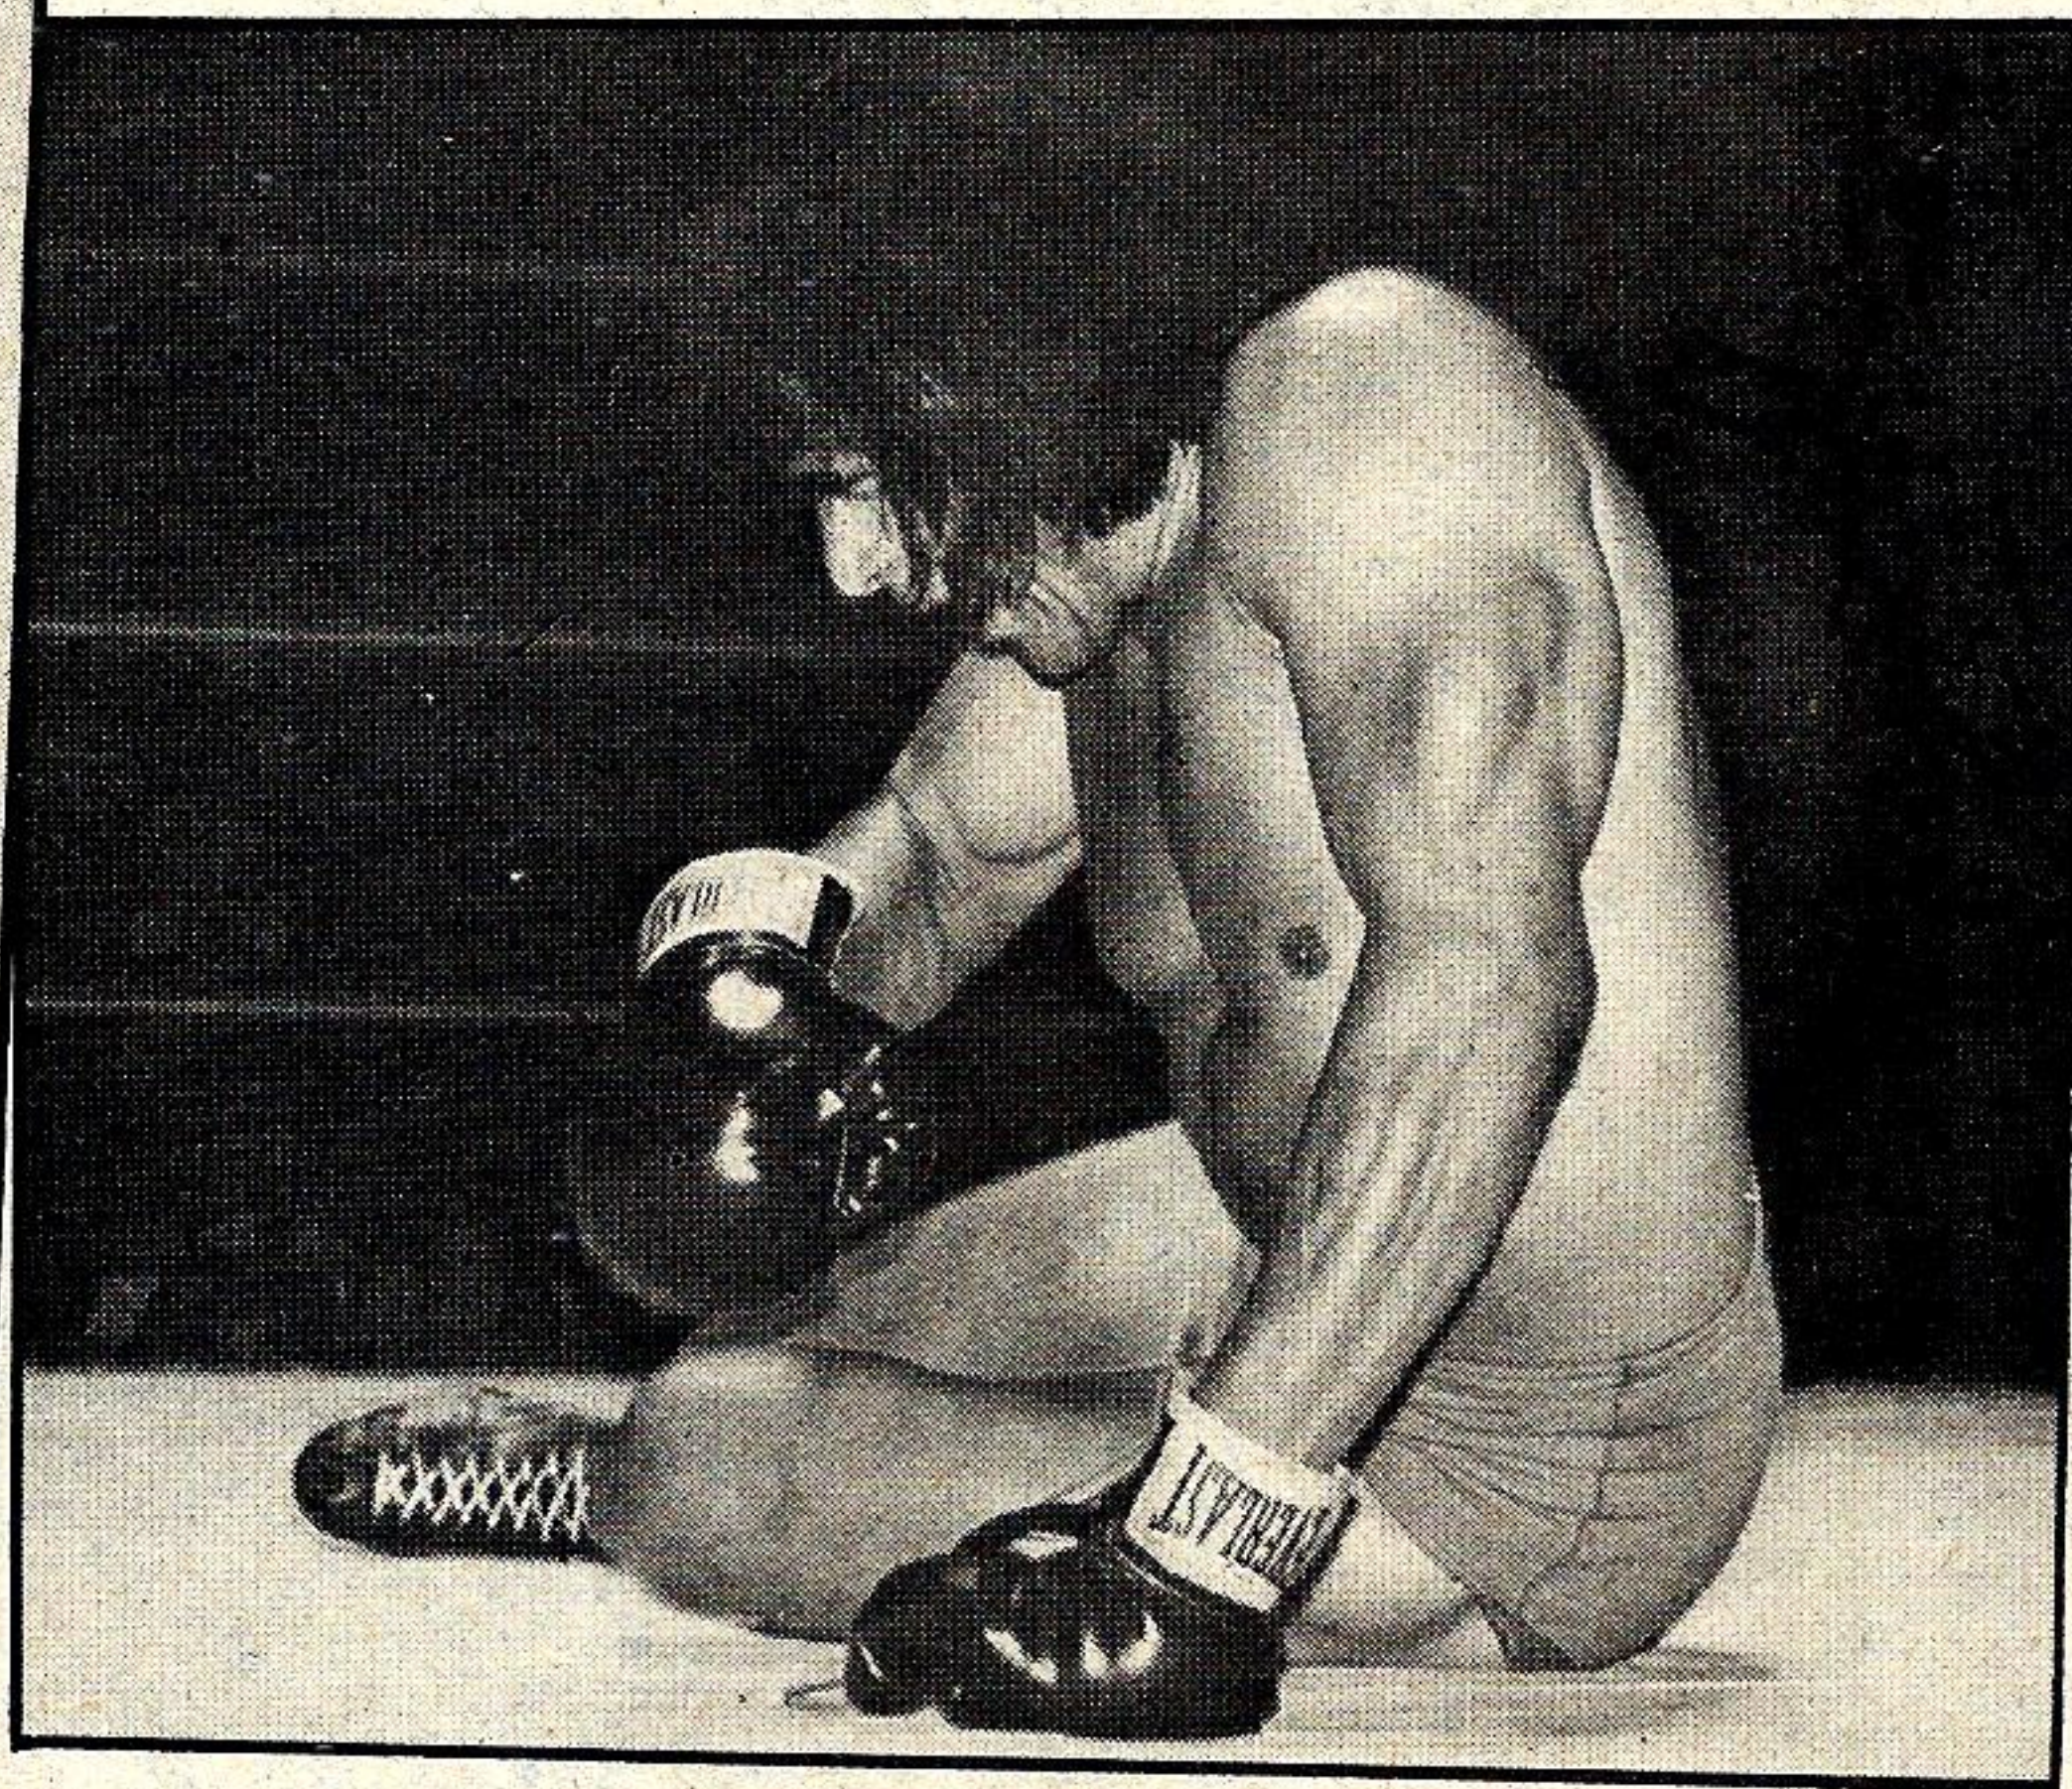

“Because if I can get that sneaky Brooks to put on boxing gloves, you can bet your boots he won’t be able to reach into his trunks and pull out some foreign object,” explained Luis. “And you can also bet Killer won’t be able to pull any dirty tactics!”

But Martinez was ignoring an important rule of wrestling—never underestimate the conniving of Killer Brooks. And this match would be no exception.

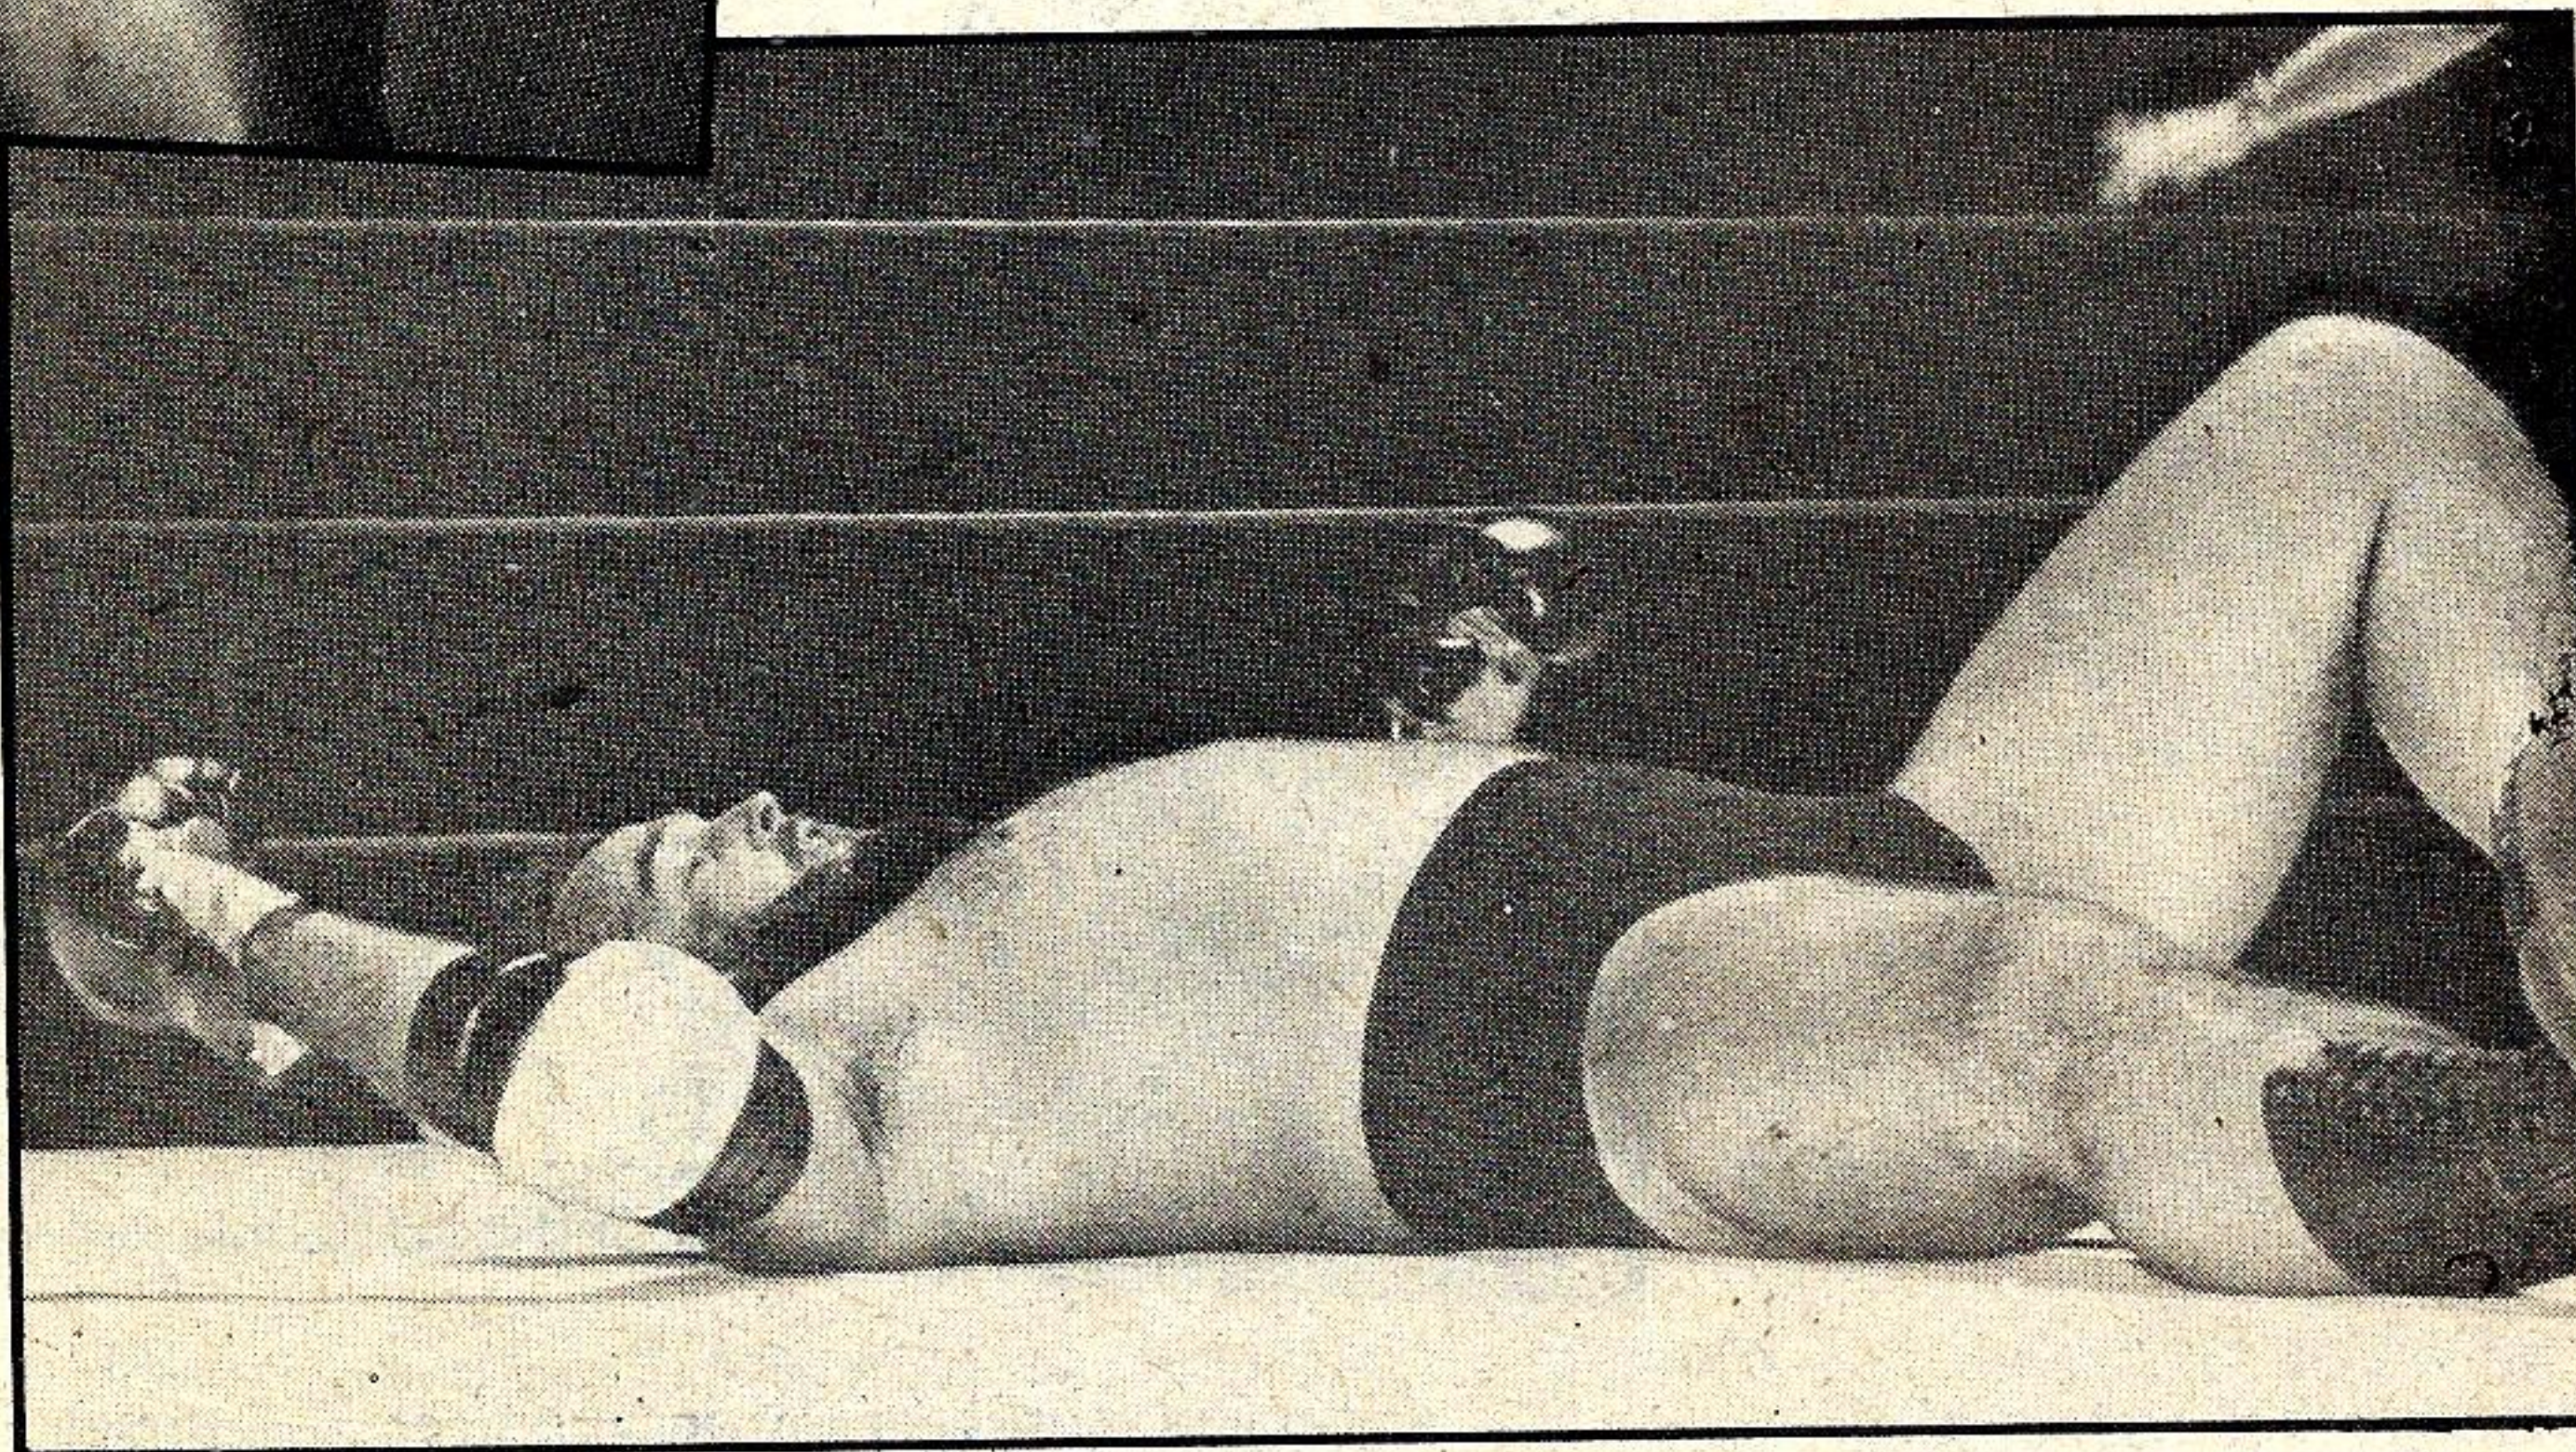

Martinez was after Brooks mainly

Martinez, (left) is the picture of a cool, confident fighter. He trained like a boxer for three weeks so he'd be in the peak of condition for the 10 round fight with Brooks. Brooks connected and Martinez is googly eyed, trying to regain his senses (below). Luis recovered quickly and bombarded Brooks with powerful combinations and right and left hooks.

It's round four (right) and Martinez has returned what Brooks did to him in a previous round. The count got to five and Brooks was saved by the bell. "It was a lucky punch," Brooks bragged. "I knocked him to the canvas on purpose. He couldn't punch his way out of a paper bag." Luis feels, "If the bell hadn't saved him, he'd be unable to get up by the count of 50!"

because "I hate the guy!" Luis was fed up with Brooks' kicking, gouging, punching, strangling and cutting.

"I notice Brooks likes to punch instead of wrestle," said Luis. "Well, then, I'm giving him a golden opportunity—a chance to punch all he likes in a boxing match."

Martinez had another reason for the challenge. Luis and Tony Marino are very close buddies. And Luis remembered well that Killer hid under the ring during a recent match with Marino. He stayed there until he was told to get out or get disqualified. Marino maintained Brooks was hiding from him. But Killer claims he was really looking for his lost good luck charm.

In any case, Luis felt Brooks had better have that charm with him for the boxing match. He was gonna need all the luck he could get.

The match was sanctioned by the Cleveland Athletic Commission, and boxing and wrestling commission inspector Tony Labranche was there to see it stayed clean.

"I'll show that Martinez," boasted Killer before the bout. "He'll see who hides under the ring. He'll be hiding underneath there before I even deliver the first punch."

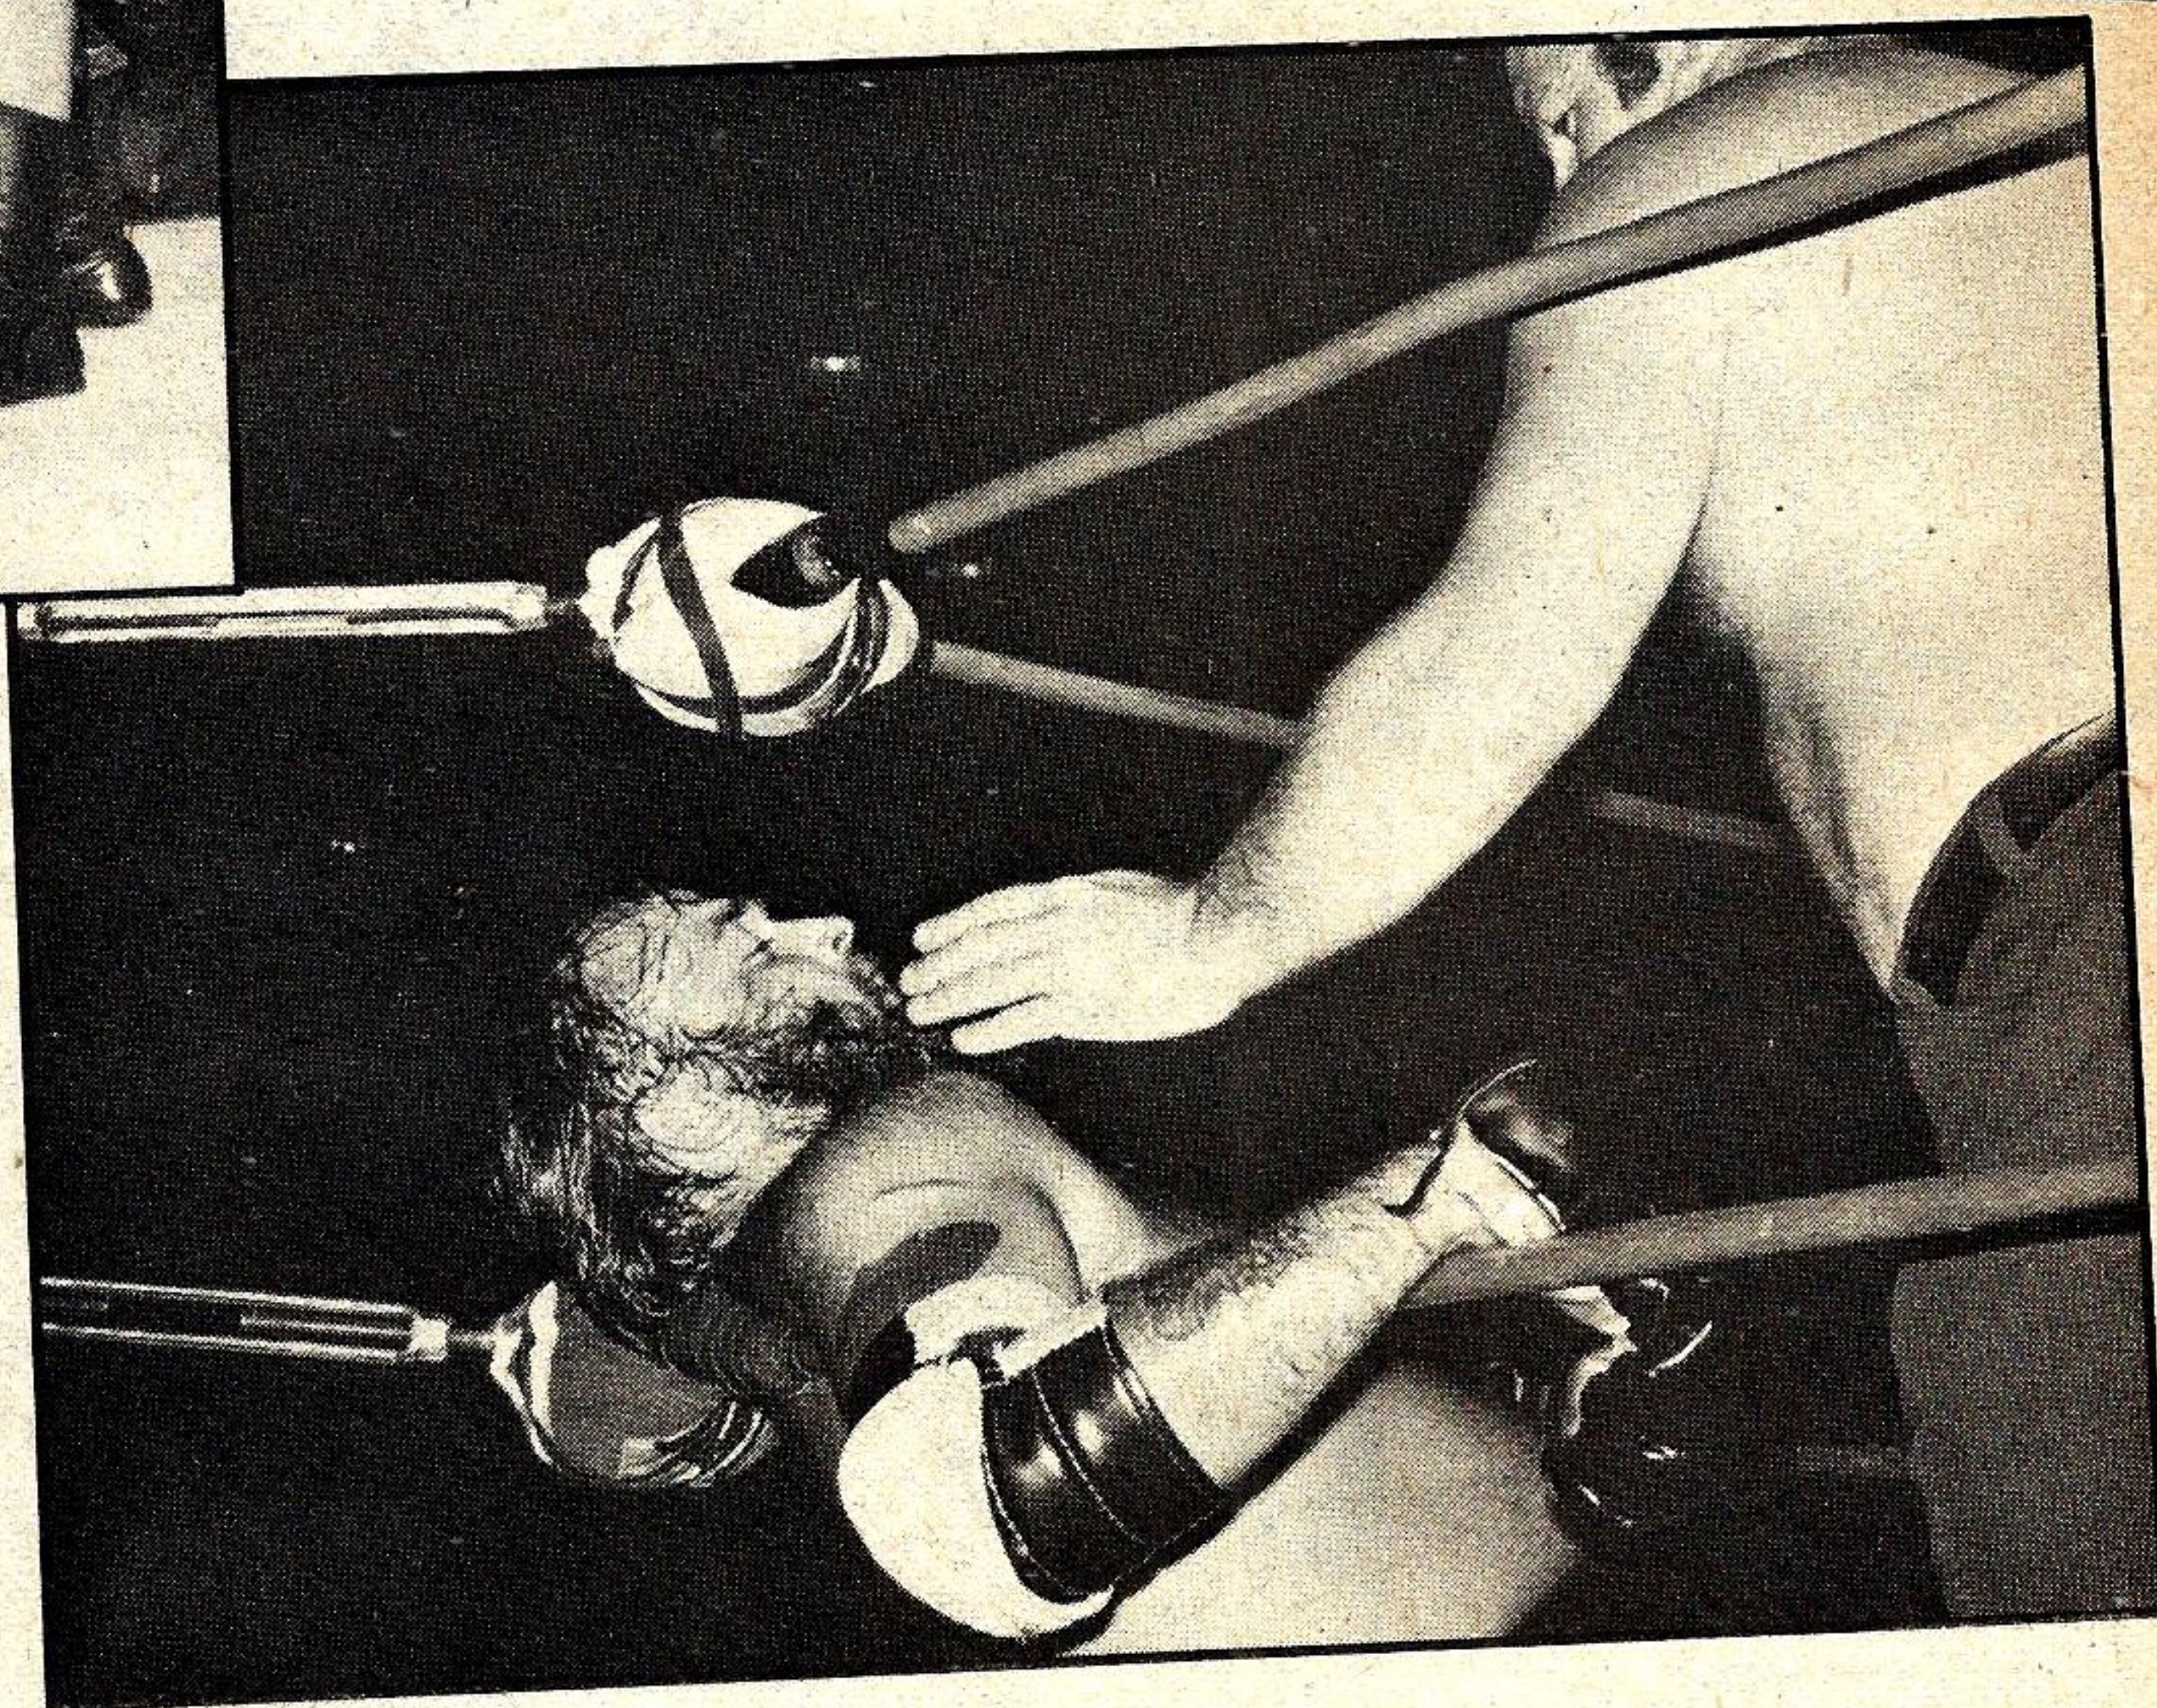

"That guy Luis should stick to wrestling," he added. "In fact, he should stick to something more within his abilities, like exercising his voice. He's got a big

Loren "pep talks" Brooks between rounds. At one point Loren thought of tossing in the towel but the game Brooks refused and wanted to go on. "I refuse to let anyone say I chickened out a second time," Brooks said. Previously he was accused of chickening out of a match with Tony Marino. He denied the charge.

mouth, but that's about all."

Luis wasn't offended. "Let him say all he wants," Martinez noted. "When we put on the gloves, he'll have to face the music."

Luis looked every inch the cool professional fighter. He came into the Cleveland Arena with a confident smile and muscles rippling all over. He was in excellent shape.

"I've been training constantly for three weeks now," Martinez revealed. "I've been running seven miles every morning, punching that bag, watching what I eat, and making sure I get just enough sleep."

To make absolutely certain he was in perfect shape he went into a little sparring session with one of the policemen at the arena.

Brooks came into the arena sniffing and jabbing at the air, like some punchdrunk fighter who's been through his 40th fight.

"How you feeling champ?" asked some fan sarcastically. "Don't bother me, huh!" snapped Killer.

Once they were both inside the ropes, Luis' second, Flying Fred Curry, got very upset over Brooks' arm brace. Boxing rules just don't allow it.

"Get that damn thing off!" yelled Fred. "Like hell I will!" shot back Brooks. "I need that brace for my arm."

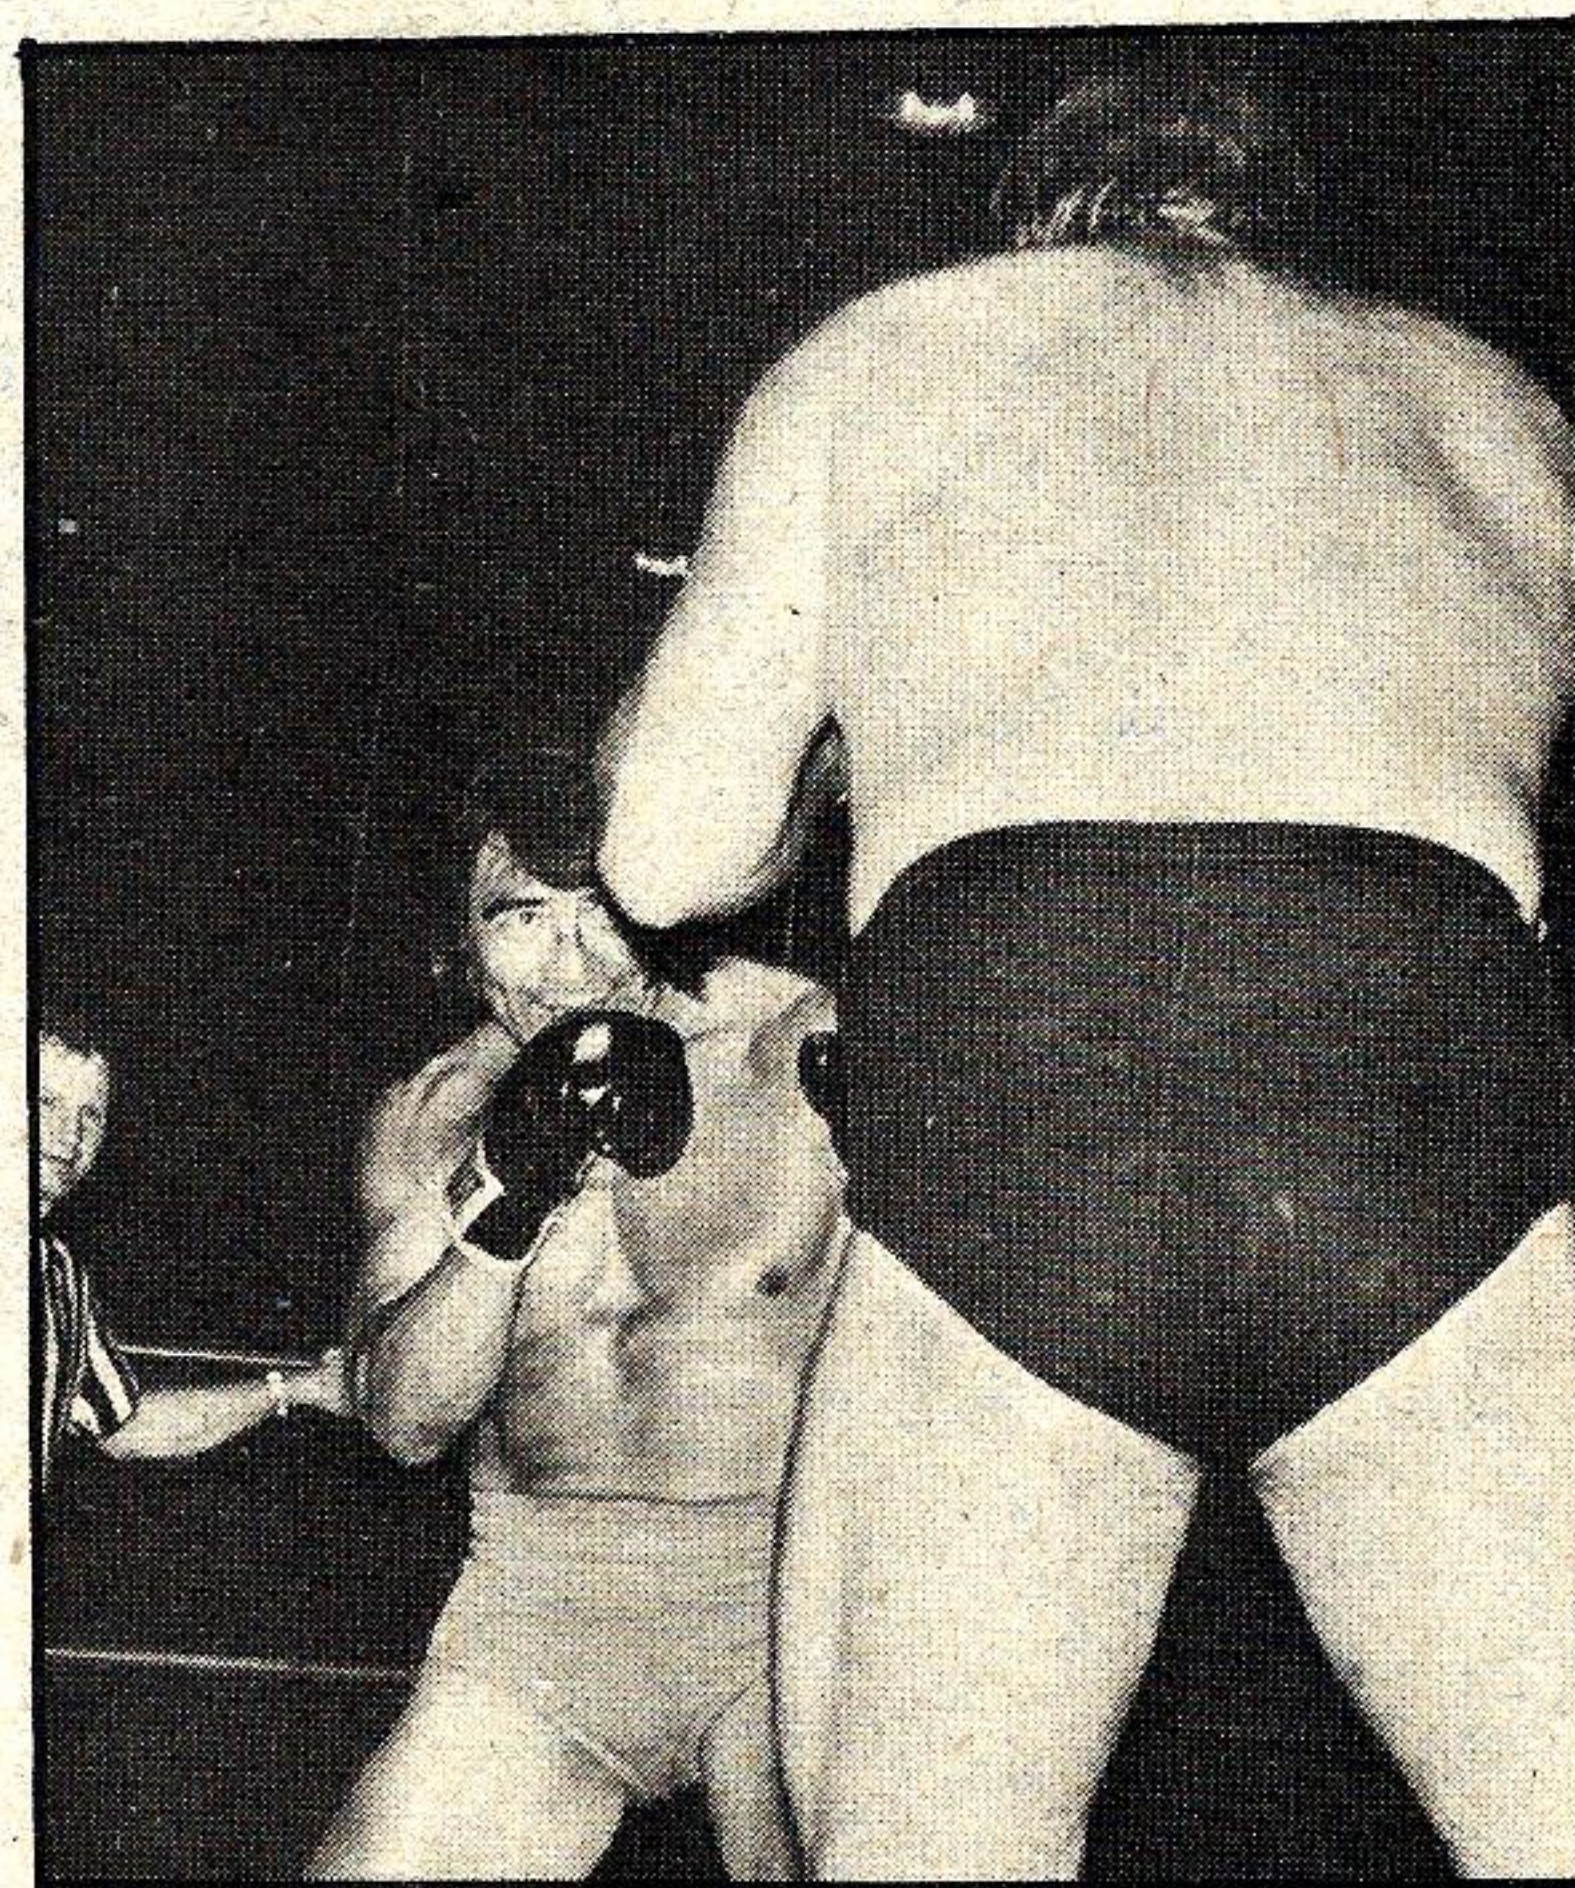

"Okay, keep it on, Killer," retorted Curry. "When my man is through with you, you'll need another brace—for your head!"

The bell. Luis worked on fancy footwork and jabs to the jaw, obviously dazing Brooks with his speed. But Killer blindly let out with a punch and floored Martinez. By the count of three Luis was Brooks can't take much more of this (right). Luis is outboxing him and he's wise to the situation. They're in the latter part of the fourth round and it looks like Martinez is already winning by points alone. During the fifth round Brooks went nuts and was disqualified.

Brooks runs for the ropes (left) and climbs out onto the ring apron to check his mouth. Martinez hit him so hard, Killer heard his teeth rattle and thought he lost a few. After he came back to the action, Brooks (right) tries to avoid Luis' punches to the mouth by keeping his right glove in front of it. No dice. Luis hit him in the mouth again!

back on his feet and raring to go. Now he was on the offensive.

Luis got Brooks up against the ropes and launched punch after punch into him. Killer was about to reach into his trunks when he remembered no foreign object could help with those gloves on. So Killer tried another tactic. He darted out between the ropes onto the apron. He returned quickly though when the bell rang ending the round.

The second round was more like a chase than a fight, with Killer trying to throw some punches as he retreated. The same thing happened during round three, but Luis finally got in a good punch and knocked Brooks through the ropes. He was hanging there when the bell sounded.

When they came out for the fourth round it took just two seconds for Brooks to decide his next move. He jumped over the ring apron and stayed there. When Luis went to get him, he moved to the other side of the ring.

Finally, Luis grabbed him and pulled him back in. When they started boxing again, in just seconds Martinez landed a punch that sent Killer sprawling. At the count of five Brooks got to his feet and the bell sounded.

Round five was to be the round of decision. Although the fight was scheduled for 10 rounds, Brooks by now was disgusted by the whole thing. Getting knocked into the ropes and onto the canvas by Martinez was frustrating, especially since he couldn't reach into his bag of tricks for anything.

"I've had enough of this kid stuff," Brooks murmured as he abruptly

GREG VALENTINE:

"THEY MADE UP A NEW RULE TO DEFEAT ME"

The officials believed they were saving Greg Valentine's career. He claims they were stealing the victory from him. Who is right?

Left, opposite page: Blinded by his own blood, Greg still tries to climb over the high fence and win the match. It takes all of Gordman's skill to bring Valentine down and foil his victory bid. Below: The gash over Greg's head has just opened as Gordman hurls his opponent across the canvas.

GREG VALENTINE KEPT pounding his fierce fists on his lawyer's mahogany finished desk, demanding the attorney take immediate action on Greg's behalf. However, every time Valentine pounded on the table, another one of the multitudes of stitches in Greg's head opened, spurting more blood on the desk.

Finally, the lawyer could take no more. He commanded Greg to leave the office and get back to the hospital for the second time in less than 12 hours. The attorney was afraid of seeing any more of Valentine's blood on his legal briefs.

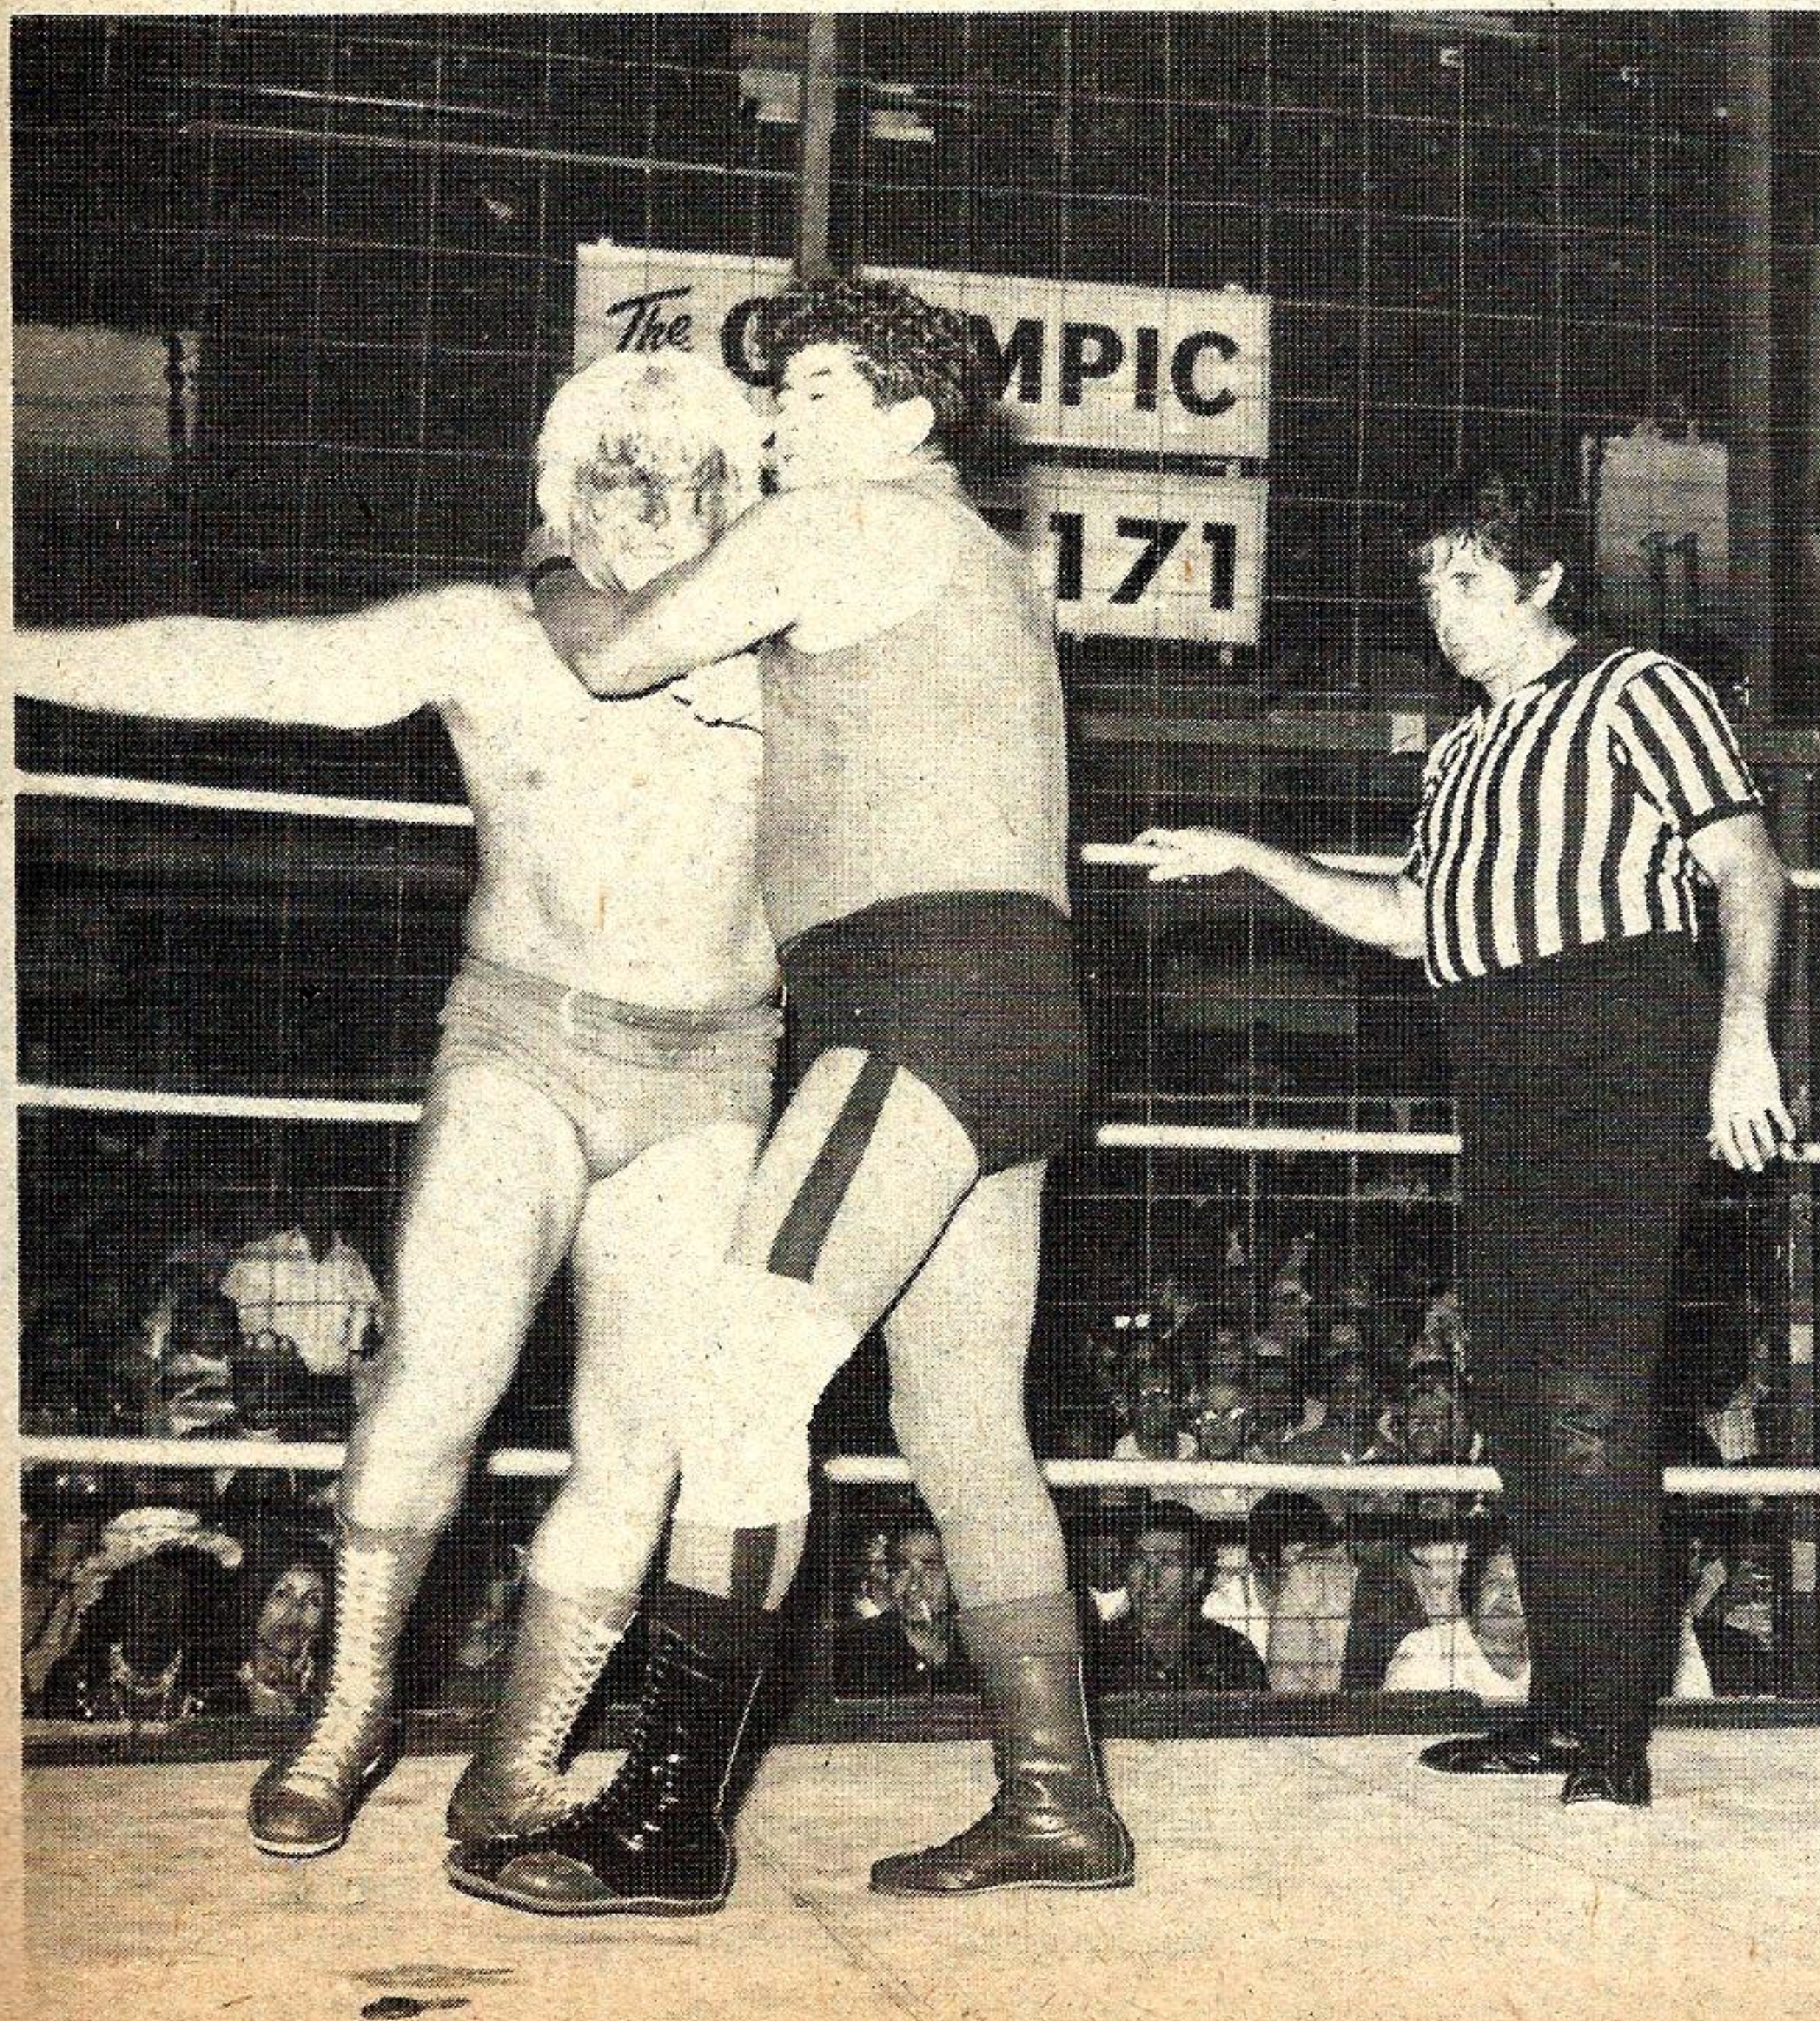

Greg was furious as he reluctantly returned to the hospital to get restitched. He had wanted immediate action. All he got, though, were words.

Valentine's ordeal had begun the night before in a Los Angeles wrestling arena when he battled Black Gordman in a cage match. He went into the match confident of victory. He came out infuriated at everyone—Gordman, the referee and the N.W.A.

A special cage had been set up for this match. There would be no escape door. The only means of exit was over the top.

Before the match Valentine proclaimed loudly to the crowd, "I hope Gordman has practiced his climbing skills. In 10 minutes I'll have him scrambling out of here faster than Tarzan can swing from a tree! He'll be sorry he even considered opposing me!"

Gordman stood quietly while Greg made his threatening taunts. He kept silent, but if you looked hard enough, you could see pure hatred pouring forth from within the sturdy grappler. There was no question in his mind that Valentine would have to be dealt with, quickly.

As the match began, Valentine strutted around the cage like a proud peacock showing off his feathers. Then the bell rang, starting the match. Gordman attacked like a California condor. With the ferociousness of that great bird of prey, Gordman spread his talon-like fingernails across Valentine's shocked face.

Blood poured from the incisions on Greg's face. Gordman attacked again. This time Valentine was ready. He threw his opponent to the ground, and before anyone knew what was happening, Greg was all over Gordman. So was Greg's blood.

But Valentine's superior position was not to last for very long. With the swiftness of a cheetah, Gordman was in command again. He chased Valentine around the cage, cornering him at every possible moment. Valentine realized he had no recourse but to make a quick exit upwards. He began to climb out of the cage, but Gordman was too quick for him. With a stout grab of Greg's trunks, the grappler was once again in the ring, and hopping mad.

He tore at Gordman with an unmatched fury. Now it was his turn to put the opponent on the run. But he started to falter. The cuts he had suffered early in the battle were still bleeding, and he was spilling his blood everywhere—on the canvas, on Gordman and on the referee.

And that's when Greg's problems really took a turn for the worse.

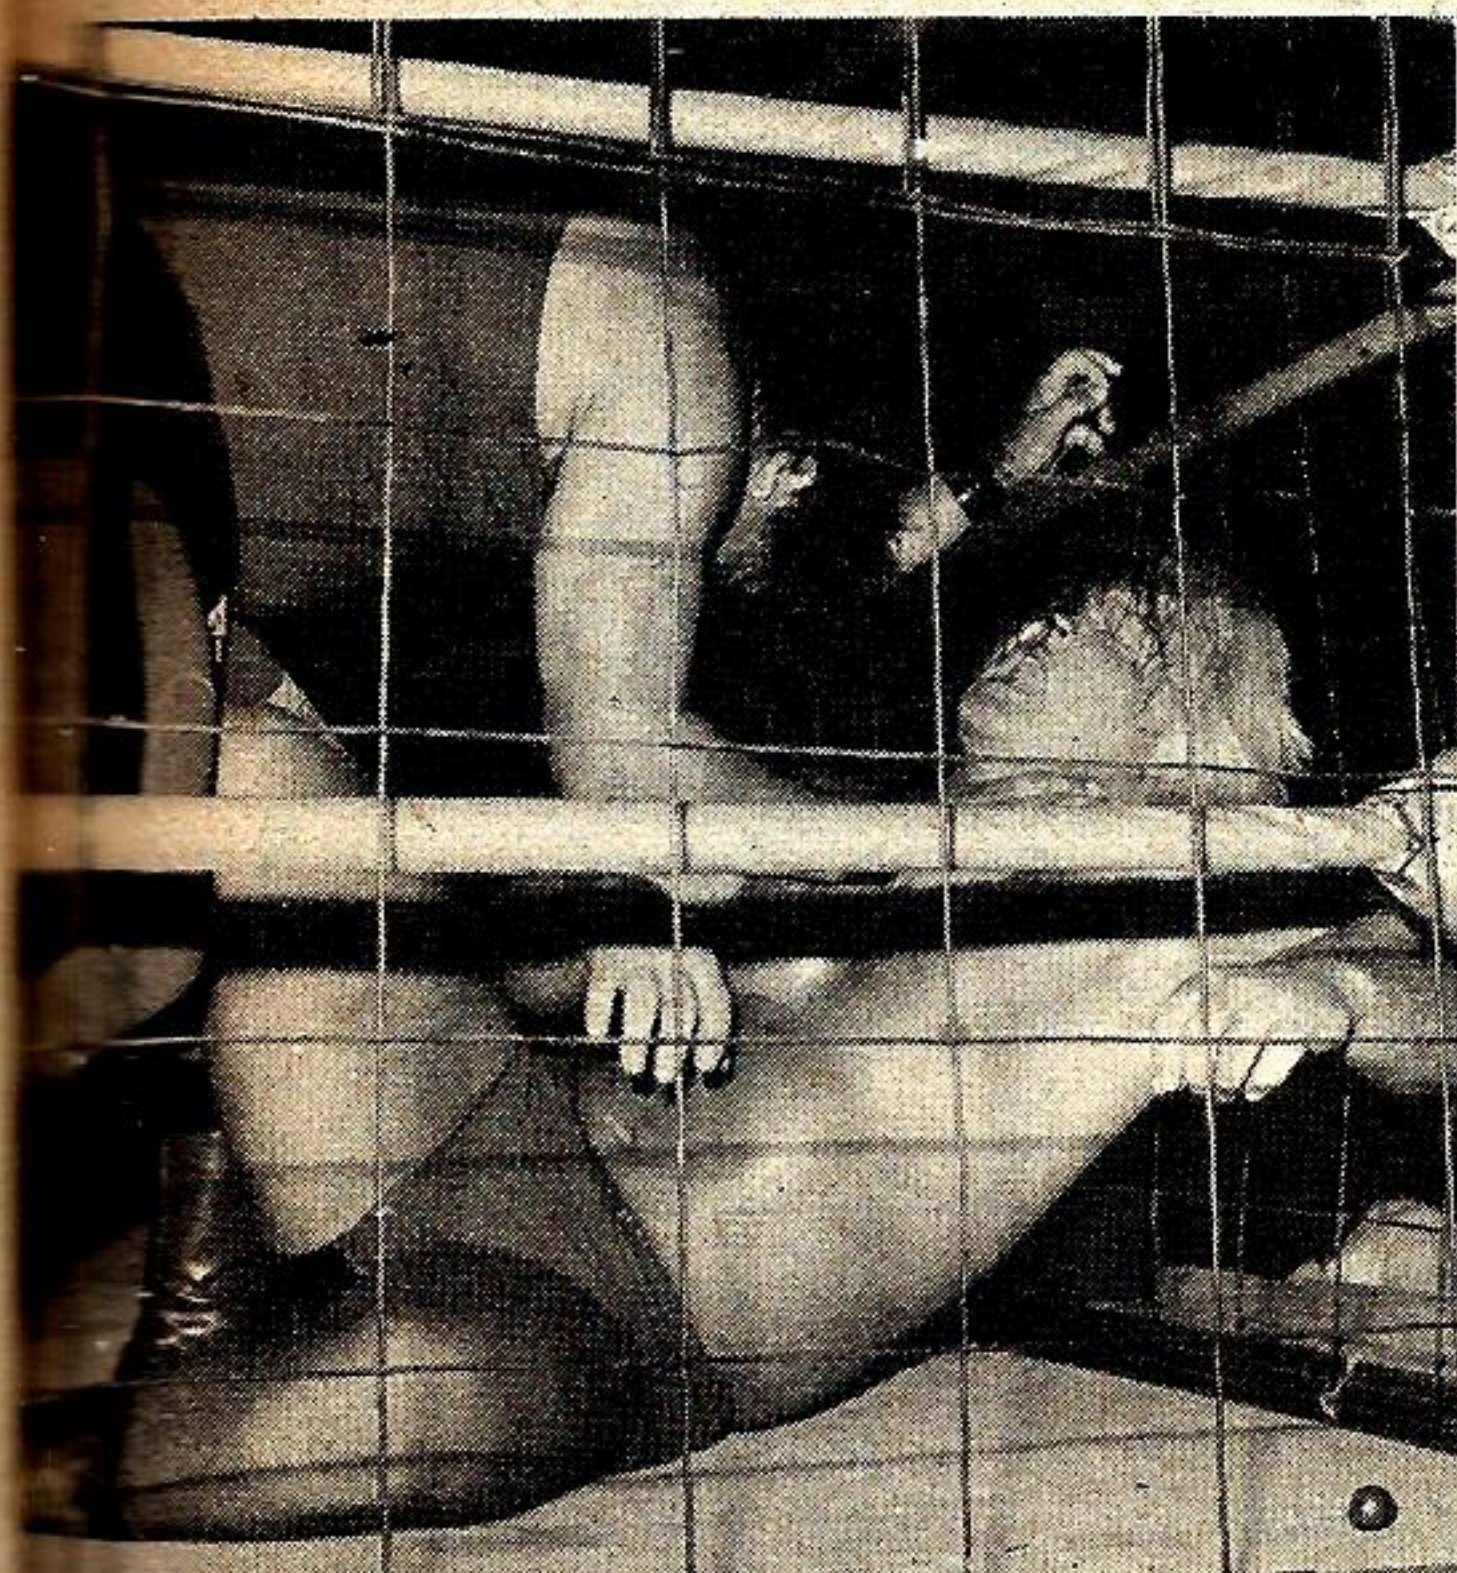

Recognizing that Greg could not hold out too much longer with that much blood lost, Gordman tried to tire his opponent out. When Valentine seemed finally to falter, Gordman went in for the kill. He grabbed the grappler and hurled him to the canvas. Valentine lay there prone to Gordman's attack. And that is when the referee stepped in.

"This match is over," the referee told the crowd. "This man has lost too much blood. He is in no condition to continue."

"I can still wrestle," Valentine screamed. "I am going to win. I want to keep going."

But that was it. The referee would not let the bout continue. He sent both wrestlers back to their dressing rooms. And Greg was furious. "I should have been allowed to continue," he maintained, "because I would have beaten Gordman. That referee had no right to interfere. I'm taking this to the N.W.A. They'll hear from my lawyer in the morning!"

After he was released from the hospital the second time, he had this comment: "I should have won that match. Since that referee stopped the action, I am planning to set the wheels in motion for a lawsuit against him and the N.W.A. I'm going to win my battle with them, and I'm going to beat the living daylights out of Black Gordman too!"

How well Greg Valentine will do if he really does pursue his lawsuit is anyone's guess. The N.W.A. seems to think the case will be thrown out of court. So does the referee. In fact, only Greg thinks he can win. But he never thought he'd lose the cage match, either! ☐

Abdullah has been known to happily munch on raw fish (above). He must not like to clean up after cooking. However, his odd tastes go far past eating his food raw—he's been known to feast upon styrofoam cups and paper (below left) and snack on pieces of wood (below right). People have been known to run out of the room very nauseated after watching Abdullah satisfy his strange appetites!

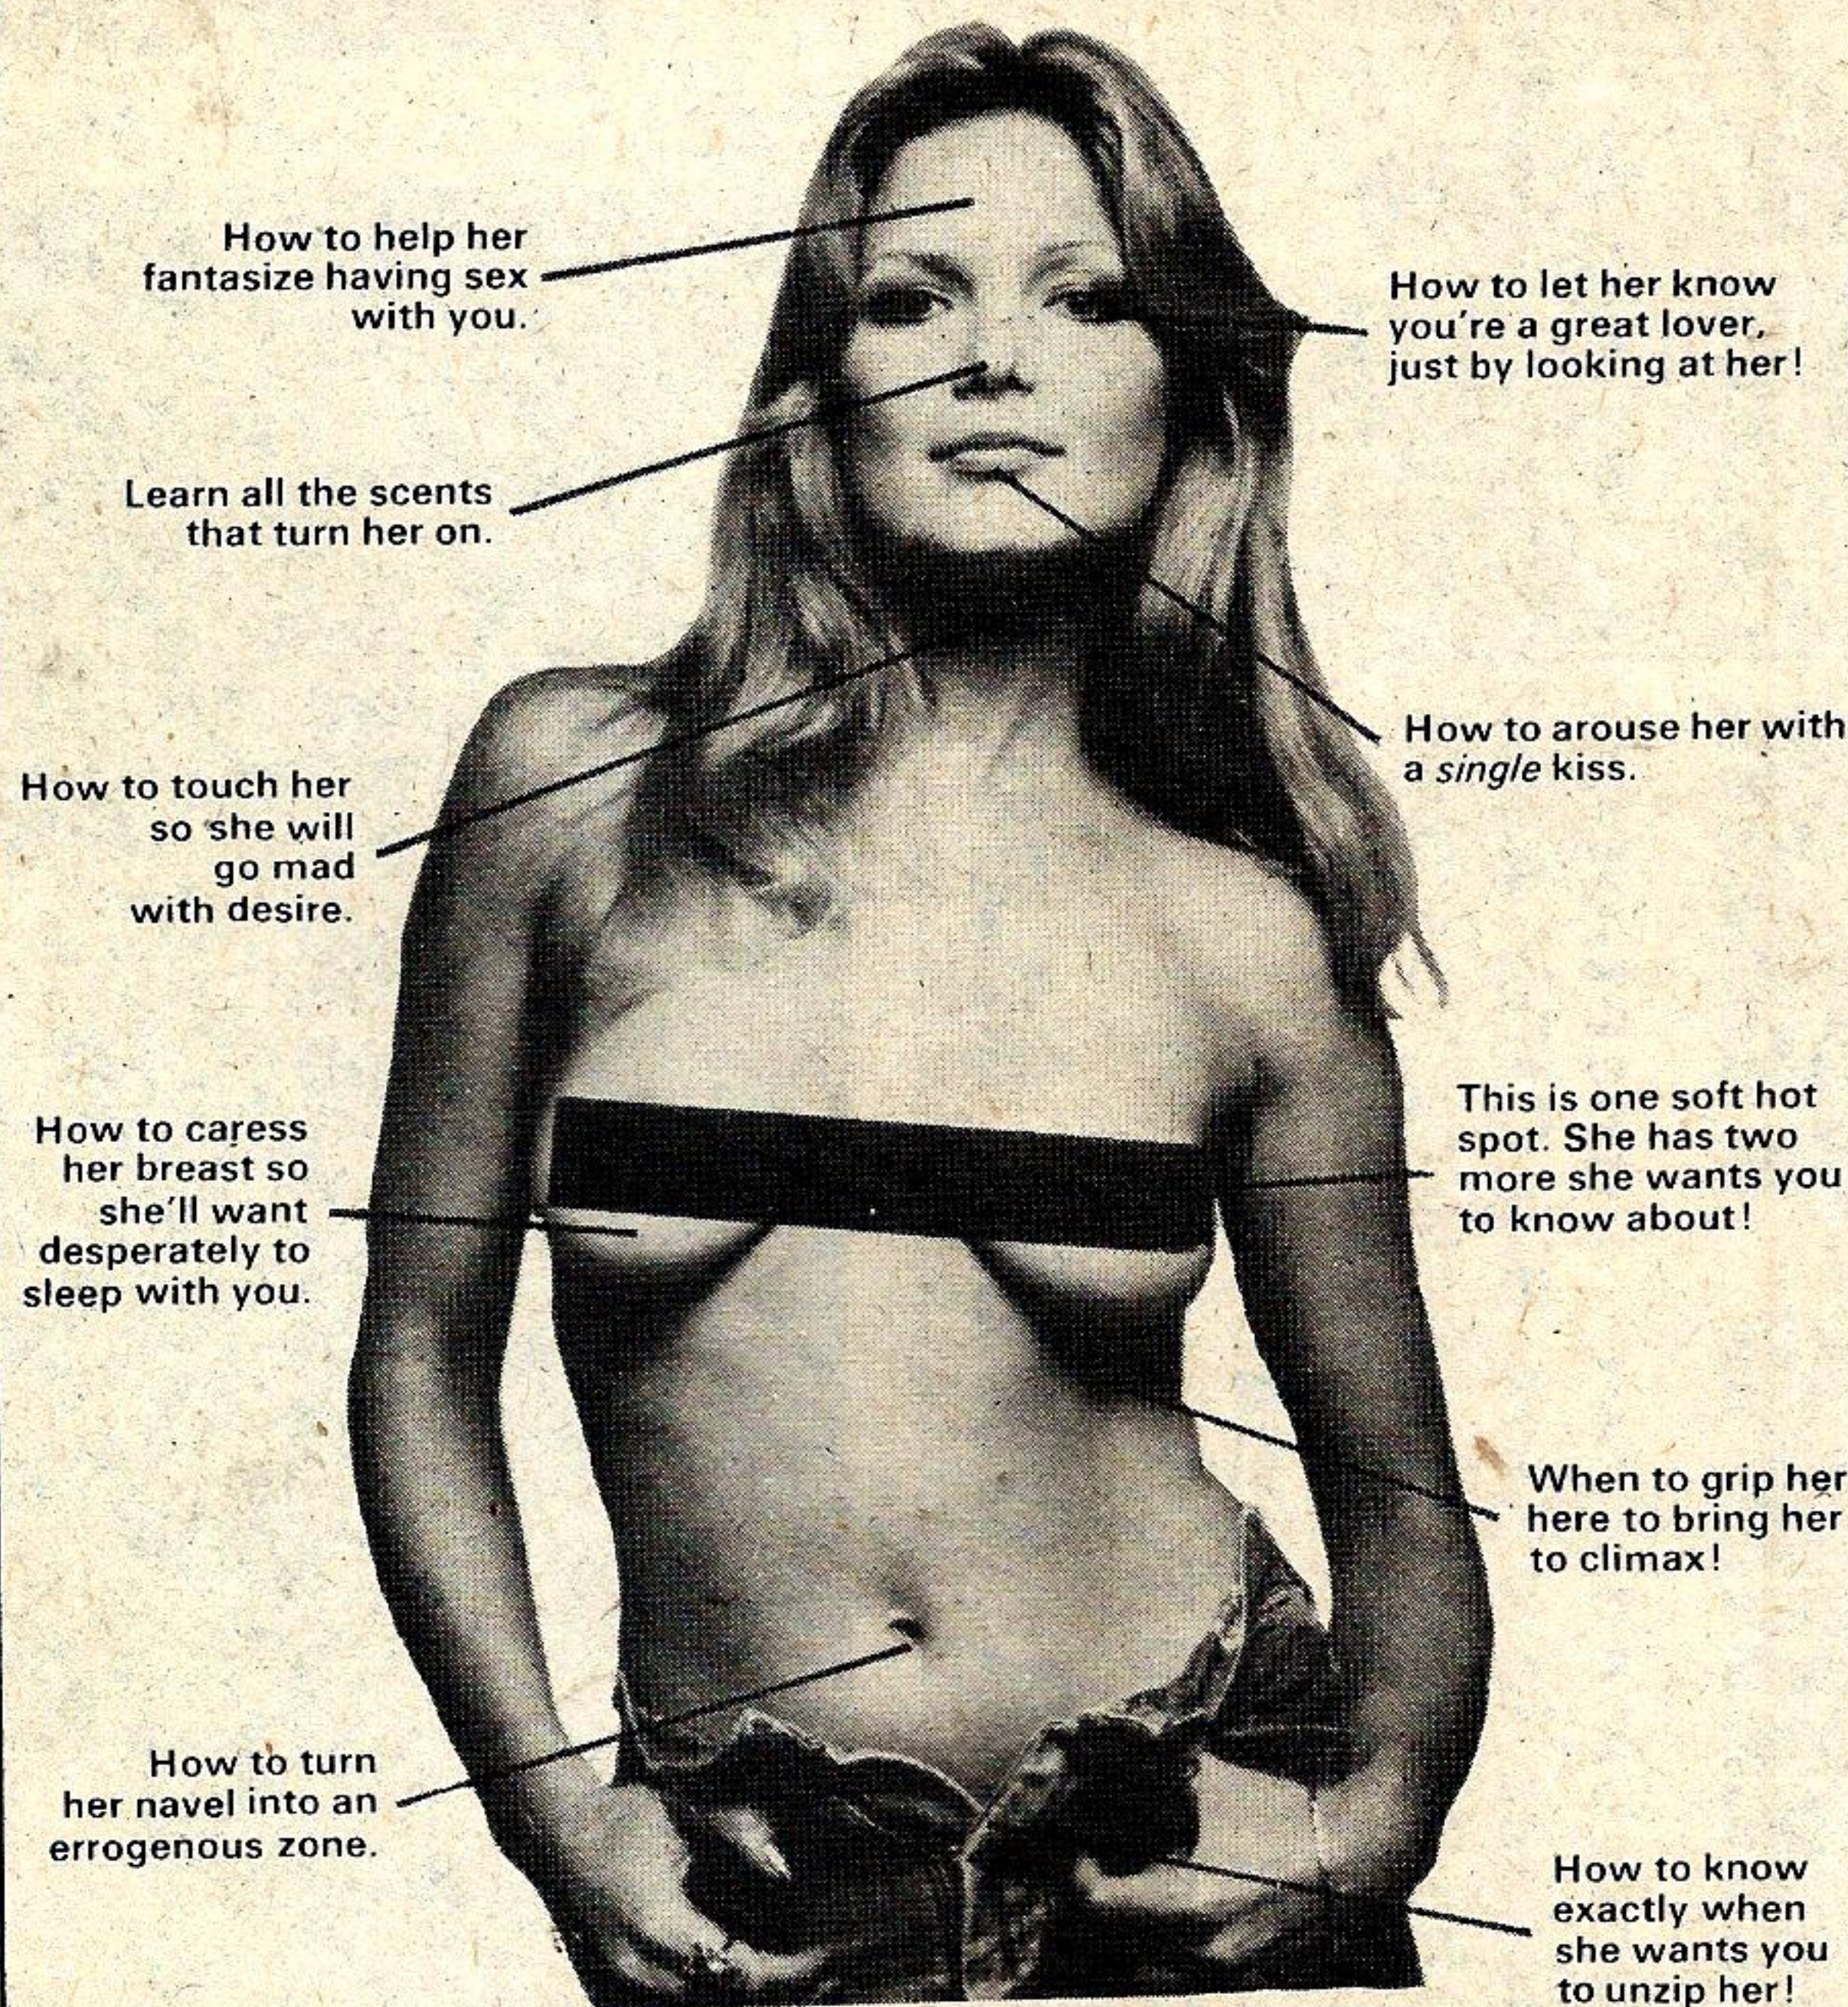

Abdullah doesn't like mouthwash but sweetens his breath with a spray of furniture wax (above). Abdullah doesn't give a reason for eating gobs of vaseline (below) except that he seems to like it. And no one is foolish enough to try to argue with this berserk mat star!

MAD DOG VACHON

Mad Dog takes the announcer's microphone cord and attempts to choke Tolos (above). The crowd cheers these tactics because it remembers the savage beatings Tolos gave popular wrestlers Jose Lothario and Alberto Madril (below) recently in Houston, Texas!

And the attack came. Fists and feet found their targets all over John's body. Agony was written across his face; the same look he had seen on the faces of Lothario and Madril. The crowd also recognized the look and cheered its appearance.

The cheers and the fear made Vachon into an animal. Like all bullies he loves a helpless foe. The weak and dizzy Tolos was the perfect victim.

The attack continued mercilessly as the crowd cheered and Tolos crumpled. However, Vachon was enjoying himself so much he forgot he had to get back into the ring. He ignored the referee's warnings to return. He was having too much fun where he was.

"If you're not back in five seconds," the referee screamed, "you're disqualified!"

Vachon ignored him and continued his attack.

"Four, three, two, one—you're disqualified!"

Vachon—and the crowd—ignored the official's statement. They had come to see John Tolos mauled. How and where was of no importance.

Finally, the referee called for the special police to break up the slaughter. It took seven uniformed guards to pull Vachon away. As they escorted him back to the dressing room, the crowd gave Vachon a standing ovation. Mad Dog had never been so loved. He happily raised his arms in victory. It was an experience he'll never forget.

Vachon tries to rip apart the mouth of John Tolos, a horribly painful torture for the victim!

Tolos finally managed to get to his feet, slowly and unsurely.

As he walked down the aisle, a fan screamed, "Now you know how Jose and Alberto felt, you cheating rat!"

Tolos sneered at the fan and began to walk toward him. But he was too weak to go after anyone. He stumbled back to the dressing room, ignoring the fans' jeers.

Alberto Madrill and Jose Lothario had been avenged. But what form will John Tolos' revenge take? □ accomplished more than people much taller than me. I'm grateful for all the attention I get. Even when people say things that hurt me, I give them a smile and try and get back with a funny line so they wind up liking me.

Why does Sky (left) look so bewildered? Maybe it's because he just received a crash-landing from Farmer Jerome—landing right on his you-know-what!

Like the time I was in an elevator in New York with this big Wall Street Executive type. He was smoking a big fat cigar. He asked me, 'You want one pipsqueak?' I told him I didn't. I told him I was once six feet tall until I started smoking his brand of cigar. He cracked up, patted me on the head, and went away liking me. Ordinarily the name 'pipsqueak' would bother a midget, but not me."

There is one thing Sky would like to clear up.

A large number of people think midgets are not well-trained athletes. Let me tell you something. On my day off I am at the YMCA, in whatever town I'm in, training and weight lifting. Most every midget does this. We are as skilled and trained as any other athlete."

Sky travels close to 154,000 miles a year.

"I love to travel," he said. "It's interesting to see new places and meet new people. I've been to Japan several times and to Australia. I'm also one of the few people to ever see the entire United States. Wherever I'm appearing, I like to stay an extra day or two and see the sights."

Bull Curry, one of wrestling's most vicious stars, has a soft spot for Sky.

"We've known each other a long time," Curry told us. "That guy is a bigger man than anyone else in this business. If there is an award for being one helluva guy, it should go to Sky. The entire wrestling world is in love with him."

And that's evident. Even the fans love Sky. After his match he's swamped for autographs and he usually stays until every one of them is signed.

Probably no man has battled as hard or as often against Sky as has Little Beaver. Considering the wars they've had, it'd figure if he had a few choice words to say against him. He doesn't.

"I have to laugh when I pick up a program and see us listed as 'arch enemies,'" said Beaver. "Sure, we're rivals. But enemies? You can't be an enemy of Sky's. A man like him just doesn't have enemies. I don't agree with his style of wrestling, but there's no man I respect more. And I speak for all wrestlers."

Midget wrestlers are often overlooked. But the contribution they've made to wrestling is enormous. And much of the foundation for that was put down by Sky Low Low.

Yes, Sky Low Low is something else. He may be only four feet tall. But when you're looking at him—you're looking at one of wrestling's true giants! □ but send her on her way out of the arena and start her to thinking about some other type of job.

"But I was really taken, and not because she's any type of a great wrestler, but because she's really not the nice sweet kid she tries to come off as.

"She's definitely the dirtiest, filthiest wrestler I've seen. And the worst part of it is she can get away with it! She can smile at the referee and the fans after performing one of her sneaky tricks and they really buy it. They buy the whole bit!

"She wouldn't have won any other way. And if I knew she was going to pull those kind of stunts I wouldn't have let her get away with it. Like I said, I don't deny I can wrestle dirty if I have to, and I will when I know I'm going to meet somebody who will do anything they can think of, legal or illegal, to win a match.

"But I wasn't ready for this gal to do that sort of thing. She had me dazed before I had a chance to even start. She launched into her filthy tactics before I had a chance to even realize what was happening and then it was really too late.

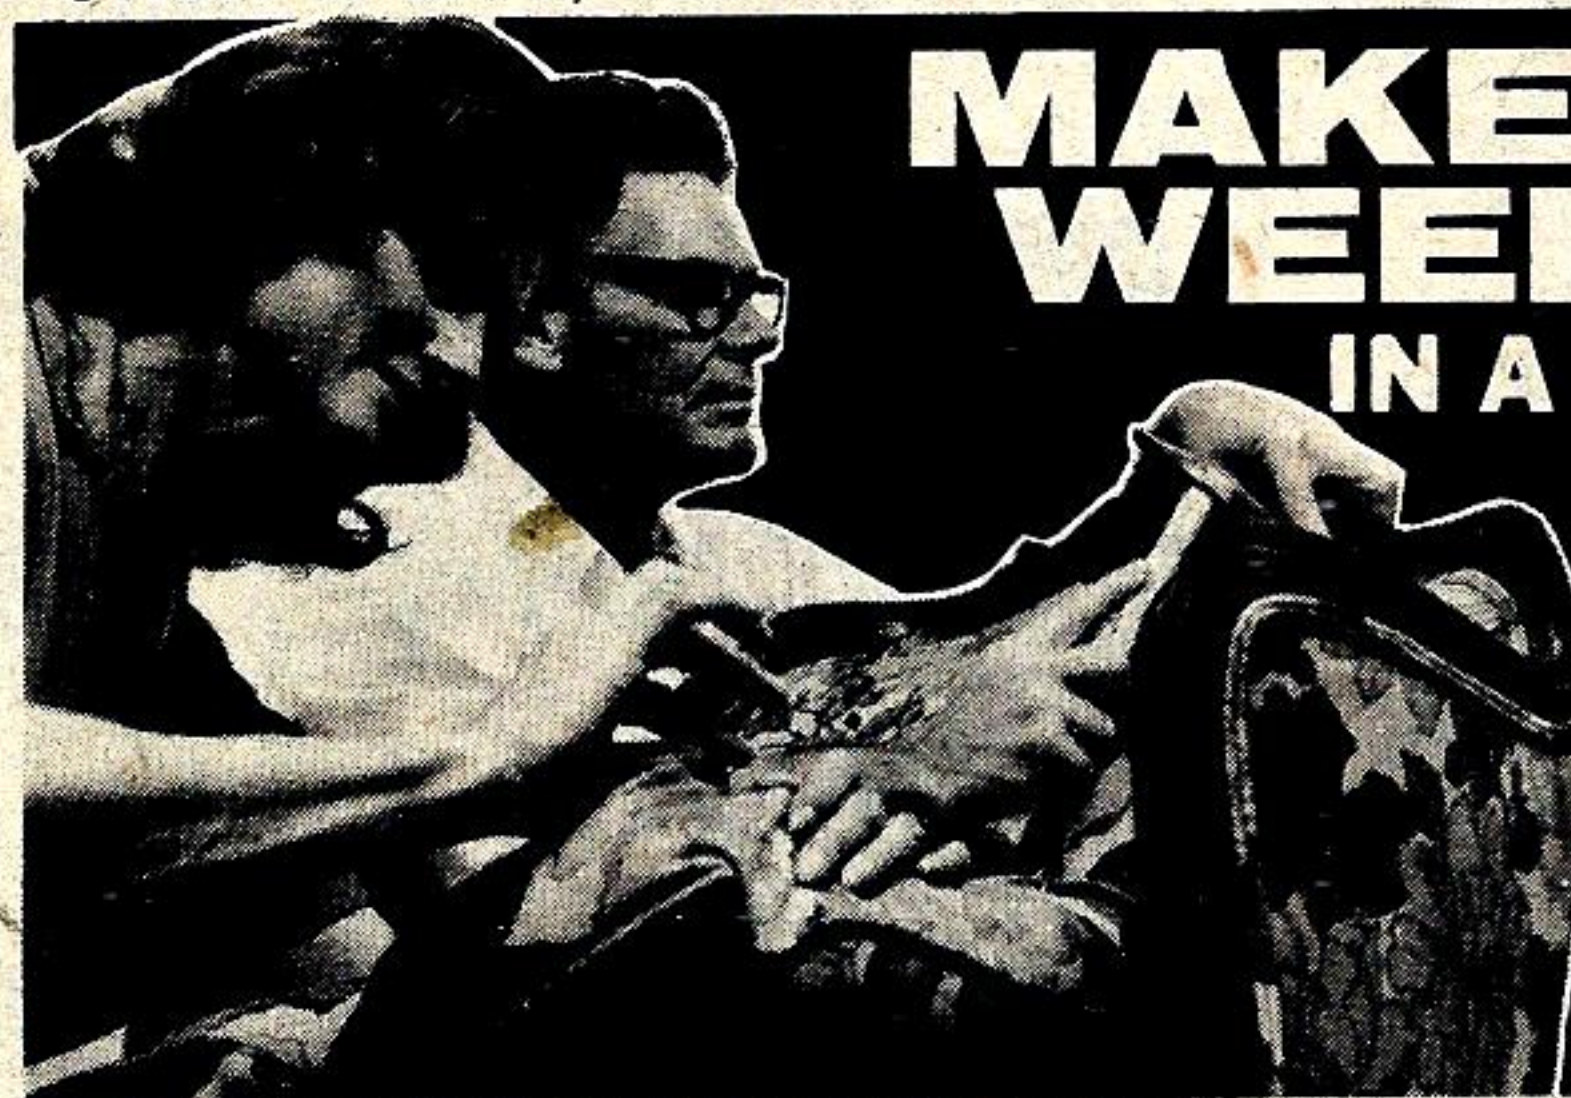

"But now that I know who the real Joyce Grable is, I'm more than ready to meet her. Now that I know just what she's really like, I'm ready to meet her on her own illegal terms. Now that I know her Little Miss Cutsie Poo approach is nothing but a front, I'm ready to teach her a lesson she'll never forget!

Miss Grable, where ever you are right now—just remember I'll be waiting for you any time, any place, any arena, and I'm going to prove to you I can play any game you want, but better. Now that I know exactly how many illegal tactics you are liable to pull, I'll be ready for you.

"You've really been a bad girl, Miss Grable. Somebody should have taken you across their knee years ago. But that will all be made up for when I meet you again. You would have been lucky if somebody had set you straight years ago. Now I'm gonna beat you so bad you won't have to worry about resting up before your next match.

"You're gonna be getting plenty of rest, and it will be hospital rest, once I'm through with you. I'll tell them what Joyce Grable is really like!"

Kim Duk screams and the referee rushes to his aid (above). He pushes Firpo off his foe and tells Pampero not to use any illegal tactics (left). Pampero says he used no illegal tactics and that the official was overly strict because of the tactics Pampero used to employ.

Von Raschke and maybe one day I have de privilege of wrestling Meester Gagne for de title."

Of course Kim Duk had the same aspirations.

"I will destroy Firpo in this encounter," he vowed. "There is not room enough for both of us in this area. Pampero Firpo will be taught a lesson and run from this area for fear that they may force him to wrestle me again."

Pampero was confident. But Little did he know that he'd have a big problem on his hands—and not with Duk!

As the two entered the ring, the fans didn't know which man to cheer. They remembered Firpo as being the vicious rule breaker who busted some of their favorite wrestler's heads. And as Firpo was introduced he received mixed reaction. Duk was booed overwhelmingly by the large crowd.

After checking both wrestlers, the referee signaled for the bell to sound. Firpo darted out of his corner like a missile leaving its launch pad. Duk was stunned as Firpo dazzled him with arm drags and flips. As Firpo kept up his legal and fast pace, the referee interfered momentarily. He had Pampero step back and let Duk regain his cool. Pampero didn't understand. But he shrugged this off and went back to work.

Pampero dragged Duk toward a corner and began stomping him.

"Back off!" The referee ordered.

"Why!" demanded Firpo.

"I'm the referee, not you!" he was told. And so Pampero backed off. Duk looked at the referee in disbelief. It appeared even Duk wasn't finding justification for the official's actions. Time and time again Firpo was restrained. The Argentinian couldn't take any more. He quickly finished off his opponent and then hurried back to the dressing room where he sought out officials.

"What went on!" he exploded. "How come dees referee make Pampero hold back?"

"We spoke with him a moment ago," the official told Firpo. "He said that you and Duk were leaning on the ropes in instances where you probably didn't realize it. He also stated it looked like you were fouling Duk early in the match and that's why he restrained you. He had to order a break. You know no one sees a match the same way a referee does."

But that's not Firpo's contention. Pampero feels the referee was too aware of Firpo's old reputation and merely thought he was wrestling against the rules.

"I am not knocking de referee," Firpo explained. "But I do wish dat he and other people in dis area would forget de old Firpo who used to wrestle against de rules. I am a new man!"

As for the official, he admitted, "I called the shots as I saw them. When I saw Firpo or Duk using an illegal tactic, I made him break the hold."

Pampero Firpo became very disenchanted because of that match. But he's anxious to give the A.W.A. area all he's got no matter what situations arise.

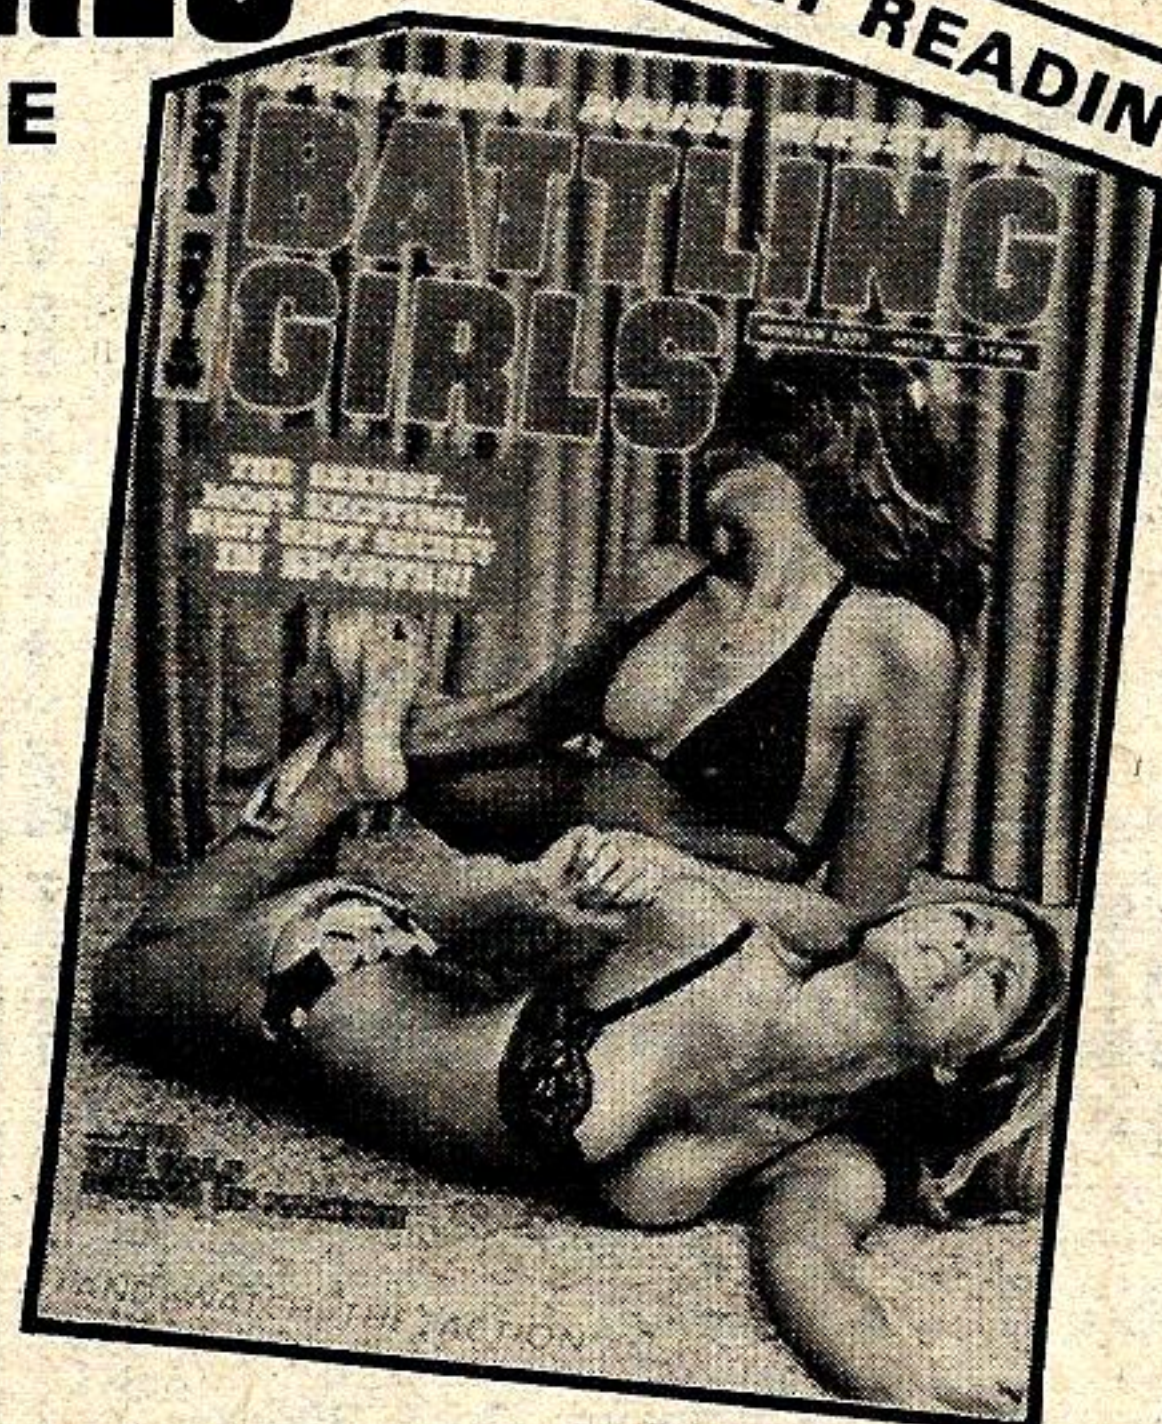

"I can handle any problems," Firpo said. "And de problems are starting already. But Pampero will conquer all and become a great champion here. Ooohhhh yeeeeaaaahhhh!" ☐

TAG TEAM

The notorious Love Brothers show Mighty Igor and Don Serano how they can expertly doubleteam an opponent while his partner is helpless to intervene. Tag teams like the Love Brothers make this type of wrestling doubly dangerous for an opponent!

A partner need not only be skillful, he must be courageous. If a man is being doubleteamed and is weakened from the beating, his partner must rush in to save his life. Many times, the wounded man can give his partner little or no help. Nevertheless, a life may depend on whether the partner is willing to rush in and take on the two tormentors.

Men who enjoy wrestling as a team are usually loyal to one partner. Jim and John Valiant, Ray Stevens and Nick Bockwinkle, the Hollywood Blonds, Tony Garea and Dean Ho, and The Mongols are brilliant tag teams due to coordination and what can be called a shared sixth sense. They work so well together they often resist teaming with others.

"Being part of a tag team," Tony Garea explains, "can make you be a better wrestler than you'd ever be by yourself. There are things Dean and I do together which thrill me every time we accomplish them. Together, Dean and I are much better than we could ever be separately. The sum is greater than either of its parts. It's the thrill of being better than I ever thought I could be which keeps me wrestling with Dean."

Most men who continually wrestle as tag team partners will voice similar sentiments. The two men's abilities complement each other to the point where they achieve something far greater than anyone could expect. It appears some grapplers were born to have their skills brought to their peak through interaction with a tag team partner.

The popularity of tag teams rival the popularity of even wrestling's champions and superstars. The matches themselves are often the main events of even the most exciting wrestling cards.

All wrestlers have learned to become adept at tag team matches. Even the world champions often find themselves as one half of a team, proving their skills can be adaptable to the special requirements of this facet of wrestling. Having these men suddenly dependent on another man has been disorienting for some while others welcome the new challenge. It's a challenge fraught with danger.

Most dangerous of all in tag team wrestling is the ineffectual officiating. No single referee can control four wrestlers. Time and time again, doubleteamed wrestlers have been seriously injured while the referee's attention has been diverted. It is a common occurrence for a referee to be so involved with the mayhem generated by a match he'll even miss a tag!

"For years," one referee declares, "wrestling officials have tried to convince the commissions that two of us are needed for a tag team match. But the wrestlers who benefit from having insufficient officiating threaten to boycott the matches with two referees. Guess who the promoters think is more important to them."

"We're forced to do the best we can in a situation where it's close to impossible to function at even minimum efficiency. Remember, these wrestlers have made fortunes with their cunning tactics. When a bright athlete tries to fool a harried referee, he's bound to succeed.

"I know of no referee who doesn't have sleepless nights over injuries which could be inflicted when his back is turned. We do our best knowing it's hopeless. I'm afraid tragedy will have to strike more than once before tag team matches have proper officiating."

Even when the recent innovation of tag teams is developed to its final form and all the problems are solved, the majority of wrestlers believe it will not become more popular than the man against man confrontations which have existed for over 3,000 years. A vocal few, though, believe tag teams are the wave of the future.

Promoters and commissioners refuse to be drawn into any speculation about the future of tag team wrestling. They claim to be at the service of the fans, the ones who will ultimately decide which form of wrestling will be the most popular.

In the comparatively short time tag team wrestling has existed, it's become astonishingly popular. Only time will tell what further profound effects it will have on the world of wrestling. □ switched tactics. "Take this, Luis!" he shouted as he viciously kicked Martinez in the stomach and then in the groin. Luis was doubling over in pain.

BROOKS AND MARTINEZ

Luis spruces up with a special policeman (above). Wrestling and boxing Inspector Tony Labranche has just inspected Luis' gloves and gives him the okay to go in and fight Brooks. Labranche removed a foreign object from Brooks' left glove.

The referee pulled Brooks away and told him he'd better cut that out. Once Luis recovered, Brooks tried another tactic. He jabbed at Luis viciously, but not with his fists—with his elbow! The officials weren't looking kindly on this. But Killer didn't care!

"This whole thing is stupid and I've had enough of it!" Brooks screamed as he took the final unpredictable step.

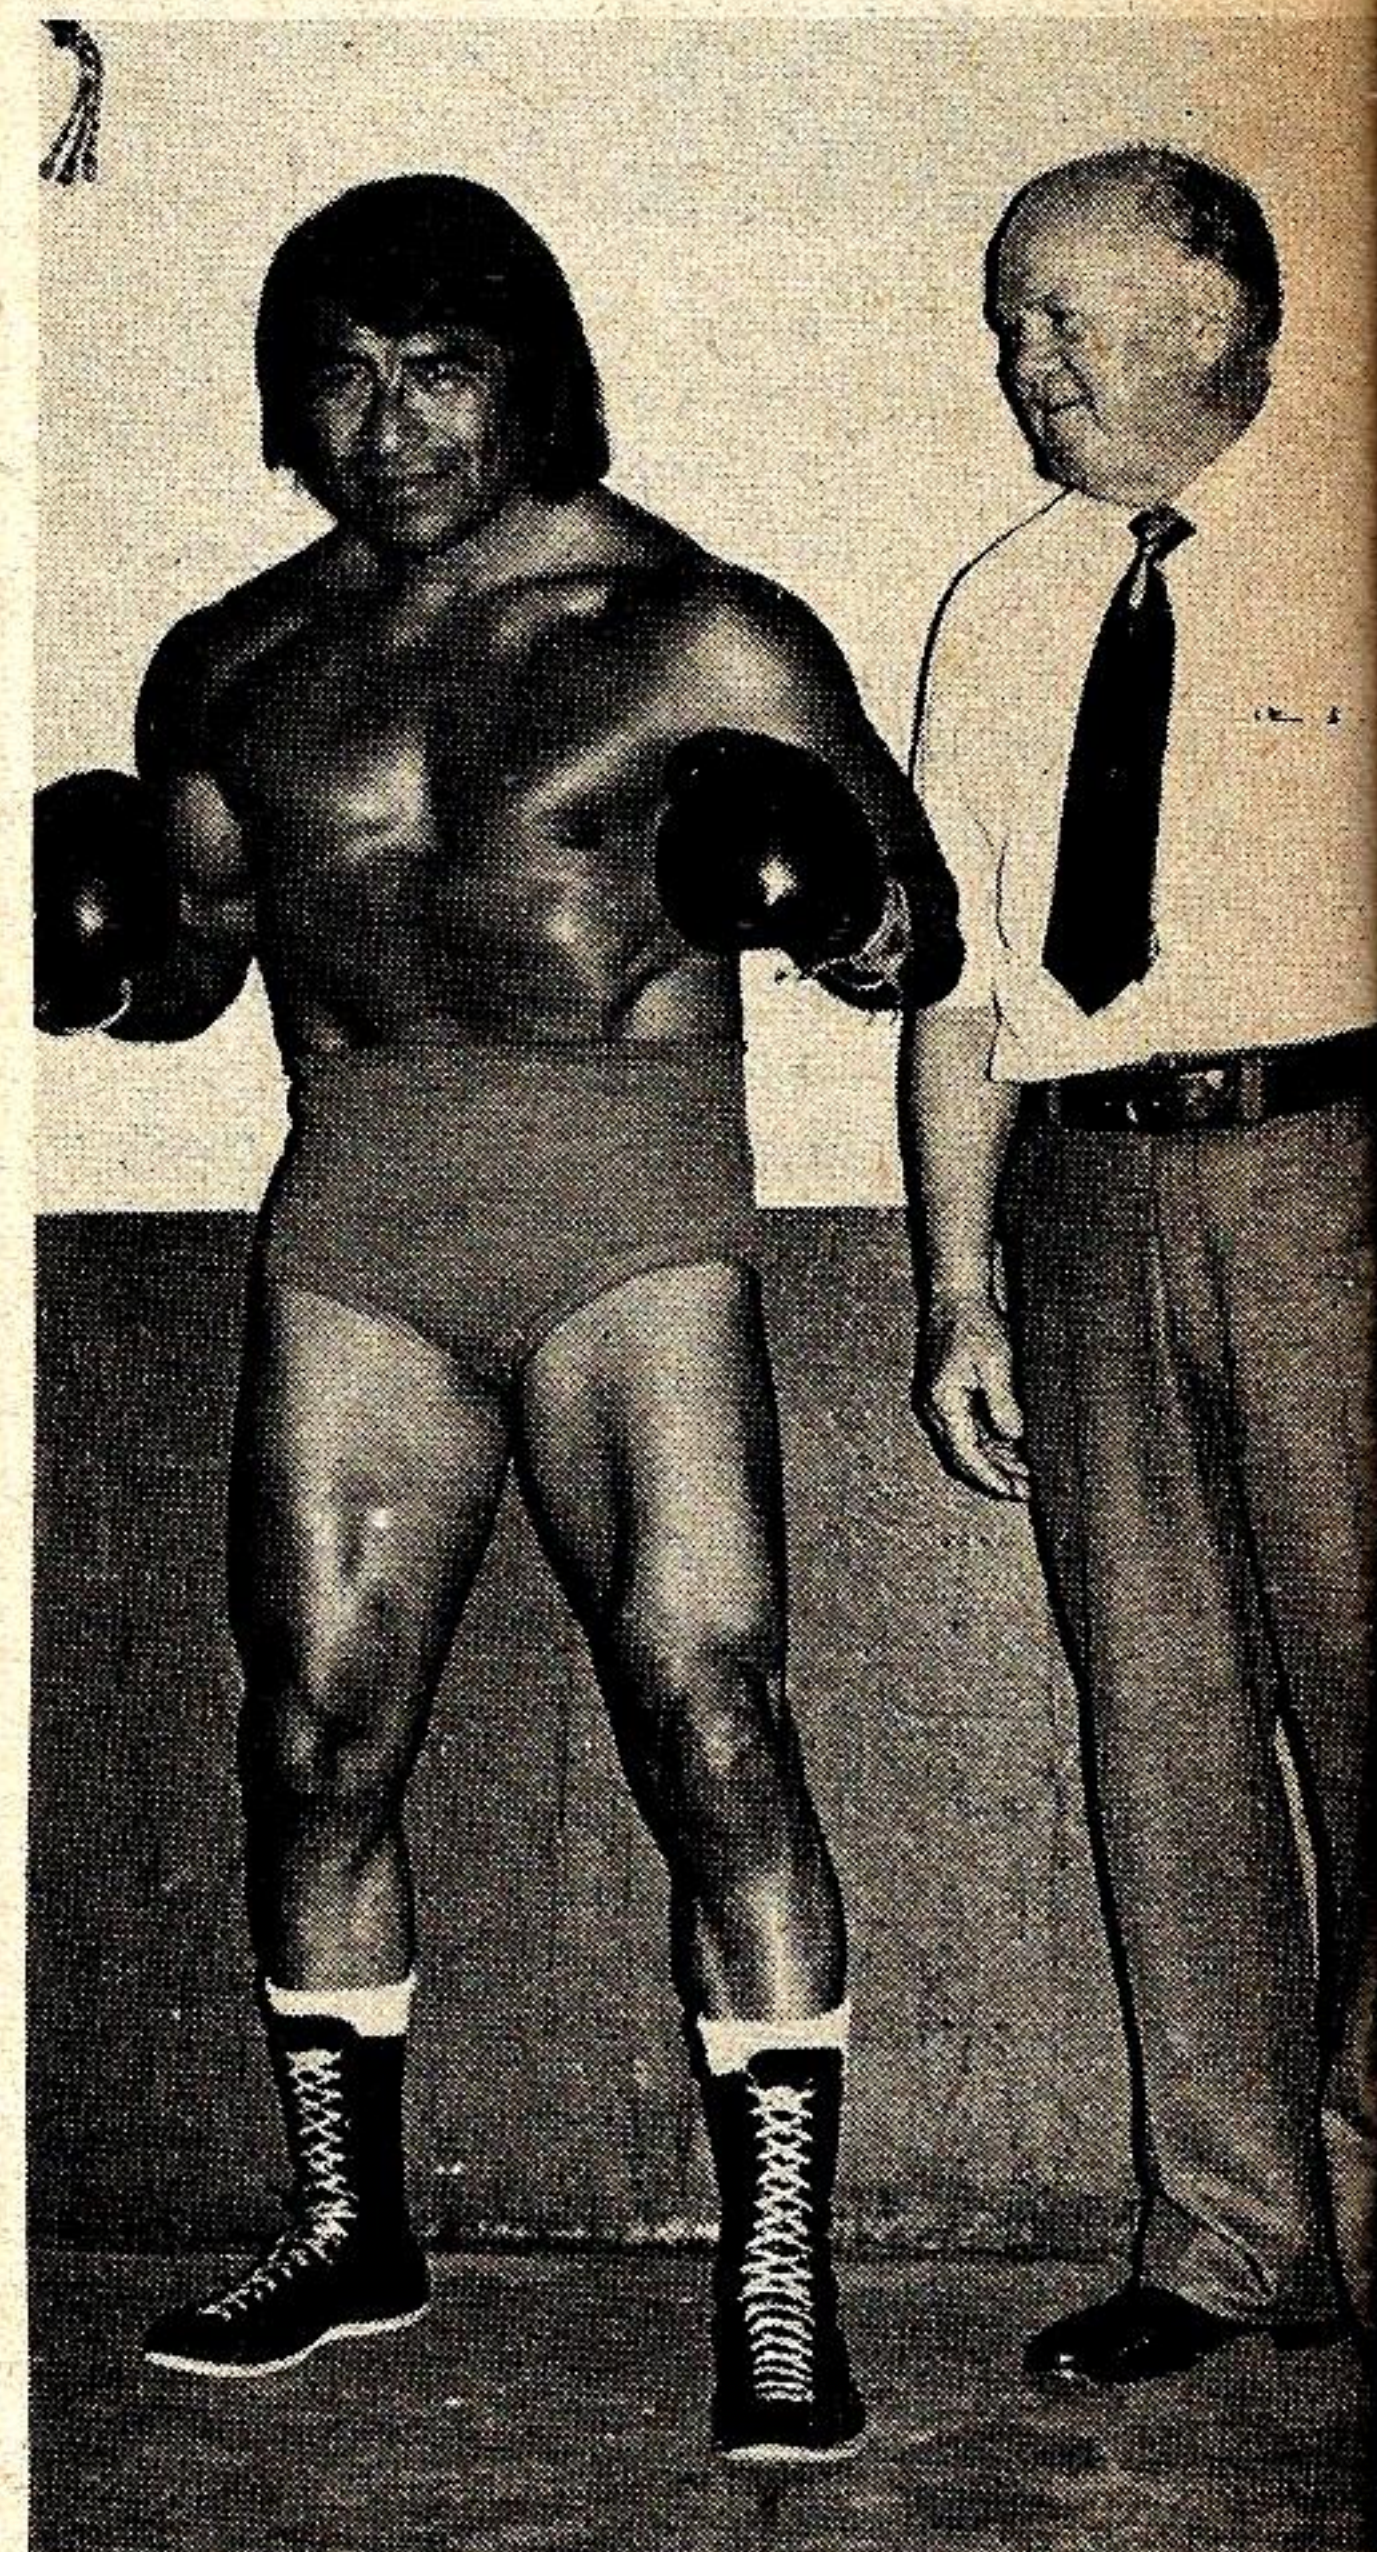

Killer ripped off his gloves and pounded his fist into Martinez' jaw. Down went Luis, like a tree. The 10 count was over before Martinez was up.

Brooks raised his hand in victory, but the officials pushed that hand down.

"Taking your gloves off, kicking, elbowing, anything illegal you could name, you did it," said inspector Labranche. "If you played it fair, you might have won this fight. But you are—by every rule in the book—disqualified."

"I don't care!" yelled Killer as he stormed from the ring.

Martinez brushed himself off. "I should have known better with that Brooks. I figured he'd have to follow the rules with boxing gloves on. I figured he'd have to leave his dirty tricks home.

But leave it to a guy like Brooks to take off his gloves during a boxing match and punch the other fighter!

But in an angrier voice he added "Brooks, you proved to me today you can't box clean! So whenever you want, wherever you choose, I'll be glad to wrestle you your way—mean, vicious and dirty."

Do you hear him, Killer?

ONLY FOR THE MOMENT

I think you're wrong when you write "Bruno Vs. Duncum—The Bloody Feud is Over" (SPORTS REVIEW WRESTLING/January 1976). I don't think Bobby Duncum will ever stop trying to torture Bruno Sammartino.

Duncum knows the shadow of Bruno will follow him around. Bobby will never rest until he can claim a clear victory over Sammartino.

So, the time will come when once again blood will flow like water and Bobby Duncum once again tries to wrest the W.W.W.F. championship from Bruno Sammartino.

NO CHAINS!

I share the outrage of wrestlers who objected to Abdullah the Butcher being put in chains ("Is This the Only Way to Stop Abdullah the Butcher?" [SPORTS REVIEW WRESTLING/January 1976]).

Despite all his outrages, Abdullah is a superb athlete. He should be treated with respect and not as an animal. If the promoters don't want to trust him, they shouldn't hire him. There's no excuse for this kind of humiliation!

Let's put a stop to this now!

A FRIEND INDEED

I think El Santo should get some kind of award for his brave aid to Alberto Madril ("El Santo: Right on Target" [SPORTS REVIEW WRESTLING/January 1976]). It's one of the bravest actions I've ever heard of!

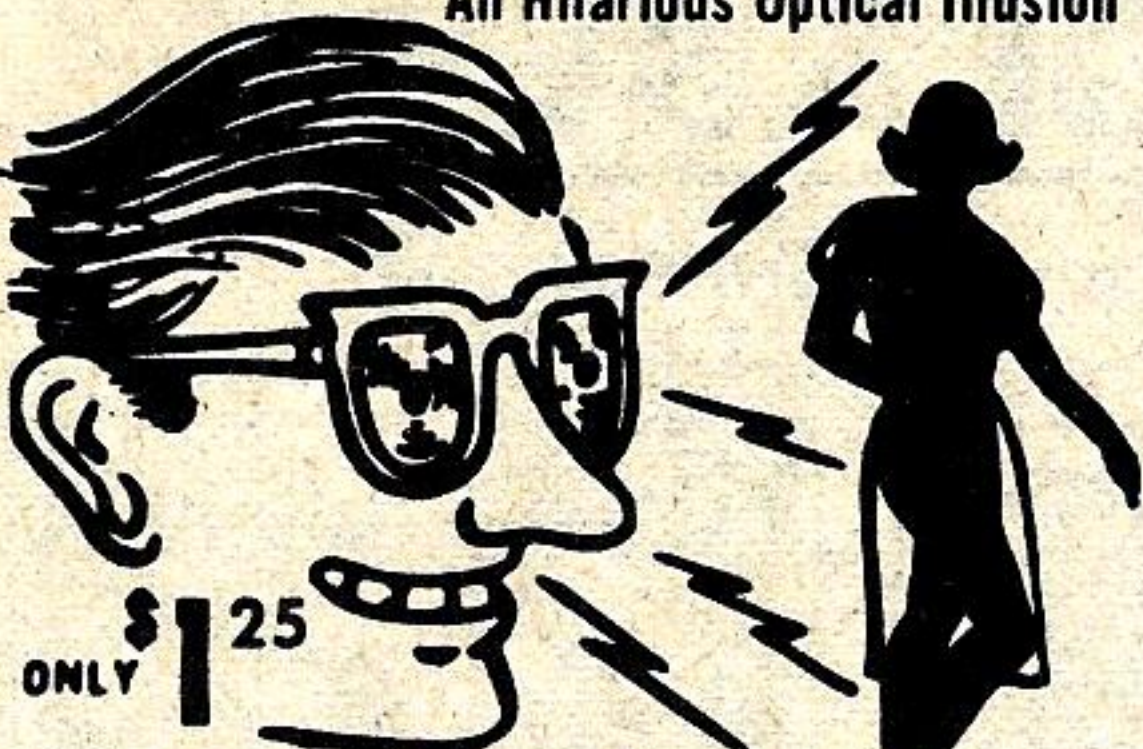

El Santo must be a great man. Alberto is certainly lucky to have him as a friend.

over the wealthy viewers as they once again saw the magnificent image of Cynara fill the screen.

The blonde grappler grinned as the match with Molly replayed on the film. Cynara remembered this encounter with the voluptuous brunette well. Molly had a firm, lithe body, well suited for wrestling. Their match was a difficult one for Cynara.

Molly had somehow floored the blonde very early in the match, and kept kicking Cynara in the thighs, the crotch, and in her full, beautiful breasts. The champion grimaced as she heard herself scream in agony. A cold sweat broke out on Cynara's forehead as she recollected the pain Molly had subjected her to in the first few minutes of the match.

Then Cynara saw herself regain control of the match, never to lose it. She smiled as she witnessed Molly writhing in pain on the plush carpet, begging the champion for just a little bit of mercy. But Cynara remembered she had not let up on her savage assault on her opponent. The audience joined the blonde in cheering when the film showed Molly lying prone on the floor, her body a tangle of arms and legs and exposed breasts. The last image flickered on the screen of Cynara standing triumphant over her beaten opponent. Molly looked ravaged.

The beautiful blonde sipped the last of her champagne and waited for the next film to get underway. She stretched her long, lithe body for the onlookers, whose eyes were riveted to her, just like when she was wrestling.

The last film appeared, and everyone returned to his seat. This was the famous match between Cynara and the dangerous, slithery Salome, a girl grappler known for her evil, nasty ways.

No one spoke as they watched Cynara bitterly battling Salome. Even Cynara was spellbound as she saw the savagery she had been forced to absorb to grapple with the brunette beauty. Salome, right from the start of the match, tried to rip off Cynara's scanty clothes. But Cynara countered with two quick tearing actions, and soon both girls were naked.

Their voluptuous breasts bobbed against each other's firm tense bodies. Like two wildcats clawing at one last piece of meat, the two tore at each other's flesh, trying to inflict mortal wounds.

Cynara pounds her fist into Salome's face (above) and tries to humiliate her lovely foe by removing her bikini (below).

The beautiful blonde sipped the last of her champagne and waited for the next film to get underway. She stretched her long, lithe body for the onlookers, whose eyes were riveted to her, just like when she was wrestling.

The last film appeared, and everyone returned to his seat. This was the famous match between Cynara and the dangerous, slithery Salome, a girl grappler known for her evil, nasty ways.

body a tangle of arms and legs and exposed breasts. The last image flickered on the screen of Cynara standing triumphant over her beaten opponent. Molly looked ravaged.

The elite audience gasped as it saw Cynara and Salome locked in each other's strong arms, rolling around the plush carpet, neither seeming to have the advantage. Salome tried to kick free of the blonde's grip, but Cynara responded to every move her opponent made with an equally strong kick to the brunette's breasts or groin.

Just as it began to look like no one would win the match, Salome broke free and trounced her blonde foe. She punched and kicked Cynara. Finally, the champion could take no more punishment and relented.

The lights went back on. Everyone came over to Cynara and her magazine publishing fiancé and wished them the best of luck in their upcoming marriage. Finally, Dave Moll approached his greatest grappler, obviously saddened by her loss. He shook her fiancé's hand and gave Cynara a farewell kiss.

The beautiful blonde grappler looked at Dave and smiled. She paused for a moment, then said, "Dave, I want to thank you for everything you did for me. I can't even begin to tell you how much I enjoyed all those matches. I really did love being the champion apartment house wrestler." Then she turned to her fiancé and said, "But now I have a new love."

Cynara and the magazine publisher sauntered out of the penthouse apartment. She did not look back. She was beginning her new life. □
